1750 iv. —.]—Deft. employed pltf. to sell lands on the terms of 10 per cent. on the gross selling price of all lands sold during continuance of the contract, whether sold by pltf., deft. or any other person, payment out of first instalment of purchase price when received by owner. Pltf. sold part of the lands & deft. sold the balance en bloc with other lands to a co. & was paid partly in cash & partly in fully paid-up shares:—Held: the sale to the co. was not such as was contemplated, & pltf. not entitled to commission but to damages for breach of implied obligation not to prevent him earning commission. Seemle: damages would be the amount of the commission pltf. was prevented from earning. *Burchell v. 1750 v. —.]—Pltf., employed by deft. at a remuneration of £100 to find a purchaser for cash of certain head leases at a fixed price, found a person who covenanted to purchase, but who after six months effected an exchange with A. & B.: these having very little capital, it became necessary for deft. to finance them, & an arrangement was made by which the sub-leases were cancelled, & A. & B. purchased the head leases on terms:—Held: (1) pltf. not entitled to commission, the sale to A. & B. not being within the covenant contained in the sub-leases, which contemplated a sale for cash; (2) as deft. by his action had made it impossible for pltf. to earn his commission, he was entitled to remuneration on a quantum meruit, & £50 was a reasonable sum for his services.—WISSEX v. MILLS (1912), 31 N. Z. L. R. 590.—N.Z.

1751 i. Transaction amounting to new contract.]—Applts., dealers in electrical supplies, having informed resps., manufacturers of electrical machinery, that an electrical station had been completely burned down & asking resps. to send quotations for new plant, resps. replied by telegram that they could furnish plant on certain terms "including commission for you," & this telegram was the only authority applts. had in connection with furnishing new plant for the station. A member of applt. firm endeavoured to effect a sale of the plant referred to in the telegram, but failed, & afterwards a travelling agent of resps. sold to the co. owning the station different plant. Applts. sued for commission:—Held: the right of applts. to commission depended solely upon whether they had sold the specific plant described in the telegram & as they had not done so, their right to commission failed.—STARR, SON & CO. v. ROYAL ELECTRIC CO. (1900) 30 S. C. R. 384; 33 N. S. R. 156; 20 C. L. T. 323.—CAN.

1751 ii. —.]—By agreement an agent's commission was to be paid only on receipt of instalments of purchase-money. He procured an option of purchase from C., by whom instalments were paid on which the agent received commission. C. threw up his option, but afterwards under a new agreement between the owners & A., C. agreed to pay £200,000, the price originally fixed, by shares, cash, & promissory notes credit being given for instalments already paid by him:—Held: the agent entitled only to commission already paid & not on £200,000, C's option being ended before the new arrangement was made, which was not a fraudulent one to defeat the agent's claim to commission.—BEVERIDGE v. AWAYA KEDA & Co. (1911), 17 W. L. R. 674; 16 B. C. R. 474.—CAN.

1751 iii. —.]—Defts. listed two quarter-sections of land with pltf. for sale at the price of $4,375 & $2,500 in cash & not later than thirty days from date of agreement. Before the expiration of thirty days, pltf. asked one of defts. to sign an agreement for the sale of the parcels to L. There was no mention or tender of money, but the agreement stated that $2,500 was to be placed in a bank, & the agreement to be null & void if payment was not forthcoming. There was no satisfactory evidence of the money being in the bank, & deft. did not sign the agreement. L. subsequently purchased one quarter section direct:—Held: pltf. not entitled to commission nor to recover on a quantum meruit.—SUTHERLAND v. KIHNEHART (1912), 19 W. L. 1752 i. Transaction completed merely ancillary to that contemplated.]—An agent for sale of land on commission introduced B., a purchaser, who entered into a contract for sale, & in consideration of B. paying off an incumbrance the sale price was reduced. B. borrowed the money to pay off the incumbrance on the security of the contract: the owner afterwards sold to the lenders of the money to B.:—Held: the agent entitled to commission on the full amount, & the sale was not a transaction independent of the contract with B., but was a continuance thereof.—GLENDINING v. CAVANAGH (1908), 40 S. C. R. 414.—CAN.

1754. Principal refusing to complete.—Deft. employed pltf. to find a purchaser at a certain price for some land, at a commission of £1 10s. per cent. on the purchase-money if a sale were effected. Pltf. found a purchaser, but deft. refused to complete the sale:—Held: pltf. could sue on a quantum meruit for the work & labour done, as he had performed his part of the contract, & deft. prevented its completion.

The law implies in such circumstances as the above a promise on deft.'s part to remunerate pltf. for his services, although the contract was not completed; & there is no question for the jury whether or not such a promise was implied. Pltf.

collector should be entitled to a commission on all arrears of taxes collected:—Held: where lands were bid in by the municipality because the amount offered at the sale was less than the arrears of taxes & costs owing on the lands, the collector was not entitled to a commission on the price of lands so bid in.—NORTH VANCOUVER v. KEENE (1903), 24 C. L. T. 197; 10 B. C. R. 276.—CAN.

1754 i. Principal refusing to complete.—Land not having been disposed of in consequence of deft.'s refusal to sell to a purchaser procured by pltf.:—Held: assuming the relationship of principal & agent, pltf. not entitled to recover commission qua commission, but could bring an action for a wrongful withdrawal of authority or on a quantum meruit.—ADAMSON v. YEAGER (1884), 10 A. R. 477.—CAN.

1754 ii.—Pltf. alleged an agreement by deft. to pay him, pltf., 14 per cent. commission if he obtained a loan for deft.; he further alleged that he had obtained the money, but that the loan had not been carried out through the act of deft. The latter by his plea denied that there had been an agreement in the form alleged, but, when examined as a witness, he admitted that there had been an agreement, but added that by the agreement it was stipulated that he was not to be bound to pay a commission if for any reason the loan was not carried out:—Held: (1) in the circumstances, as the answers of deft. contained facts foreign to the issue as joined, they might be divided; (2) the alleged rate of commission not being proved, pltf. was only entitled to the ordinary rate of compensation.—LEWIS v. LAMONTAGNE (1897), Q. R. 11 S. C. 441.—CAN.

1754 iii.—Pltf., a real estate broker, applied to the general manager of a trading corp., & obtained from him a memorandum of the price required for certain property of the corp., the terms of payment & the probable date when the premises would be vacated. The corp. had not given its manager special authorisation to offer the property for sale. Pltf. introduced to the manager a purchaser who was willing to purchase at the stated price. A deposit was paid & certain modifications were proposed, but the transaction was not closed. Shortly afterwards the corp. sold the property to another & the deposit paid by the purchaser found by pltf. was returned. Pltf. then sued the corp. & its general manager for commission:—Held: the action failed, as the manager had no authority to bind the co. by an agreement to pay pltf. a commission for introducing a purchaser whom the co. might not accept & whose services might therefore be fruitless to them.—CALLOWAY v. STOBART, SONS & CO. (1904), 35 S. C. R. 301.—CAN.

1754 iv.—Pltf. employed as agents to find a purchaser for certain land, procured a purchaser qualified & willing to buy substantially upon the terms which deft. intimated to pltf., but the sale fell through because deft. refused to complete the sale:—Held: pltf. were entitled to $500 by way of compensation.—*BOYLE v. 1754 x.—J.—Pltf., knowing that D. had a property for sale, ascertained from him the price & conditions of sale, & then suggested to deft. that he should purchase it. Deft. agreed & in writing authorised pltf. to buy, & the offer was put forward by pltf. & accepted by D., but deft. eventually did not complete. Pltf. then found another purchaser & received his commission. In an action by pltf. for damages:—Held: (1) the agent had a recourse in damages against the prospective buyer for his refusal without cause to complete his purchase, after agreeing to purchase; (2) although pltf. had had his commission, he had to work anew to find another purchaser, & was entitled to be paid for his additional work.—*MOSCOVITCH v. 1754 xii.—J.—Real estate agents were to receive $1,000 commission from the purchaser of a property valued at $40,000. Through the purchaser's fault, the sale was not completed, but, through the agency of same agents, the purchaser succeeded in securing part of the property for $9,000. The agents claimed $300 as the value of services rendered:—Held: they had a right to that sum against the purchaser.—SHIPMAN v. P'LOQUIN (1915), Q. R. 48 S. C. 492.—CAN.

1754 xiii.—J.—An agent for sale of an estate having found a purchaser on terms on which it was agreed he should sell, & entered into a written contract with such purchaser receiving a deposit, the owner repudiated the contract & refused to pay commission:—Held: pltf. entitled to recover on a quantum meruit, the measure of damages being full amount of commission to which he would have been entitled if the contract had been completed. CARSTICK v. CHAPMAN, 4 J. R. N. S. S. C. 24.—N.Z.

1754 xiv.—J.—An agent for sale or exchange of land was to receive commission, the balance of which was payable on execution of transfer. McQUEEN* (1910), 29 N. Z. L. R. 828.—N.Z.

1754 xv.—Principal imposing new conditions on purchaser.—A declaration alleging that pltf. was authorised to sell for a commission certain shares of a mining co., that he found a purchaser therefor, but that the sale did not take place because defts. imposed new conditions on the purchaser, is sufficient in law to maintain an action for recovery of the commission which would have been obtained under the sale, especially where an acknowledgment to owe & a promise to pay are alleged to have been made by defts.—LEFF v. MORRIS, LEFF & MONTREAL & OREGON GOLD MINES, LTD., 2 Que. P. R. 457.—CAN.

1754 xvii.—J.—When a property owner gives an option thereon to a real estate agent, he may not, once the agent has completed the sale, have inserted in the deed of sale clauses which were not embodied in the option, & in the event of refusal by the purchaser to sign the deed, the agent is entitled to recover his commission.—*MERNEAU v. 1754 xviii.—Purchaser's name not mentioned.—Deft. listed certain property with pltf. to be sold for $3,500 net to defts., & agreed that pltf. should have anything beyond that figure for their services. Pltf. found P., a purchaser willing & able to pay $3,650, which offer was communicated to & approved by deft. The name of the purchaser was not in the agreement when it was presented to deft. for signature, as pltf. were not sure of P.'s christian names. Deft. refused to complete & would not sign the agreement. The trial judge found that pltf. were entitled to $150 as upon a quantum meruit, & upon appeal, the Ct. being equally divided, the judgment was affirmed. 1755. — Approval of title.—Pltf.'s claim was for commission on the sale of a piece of land by A. to deft., one term of pltf.'s contract being that A.'s title should be approved by deft.'s solr. Deft. broke off the sale of his own accord, so that A.'s title was never submitted to deft.'s solr. :—Held: pltf. could not succeed without proving that deft.'s solr. had approved A.'s title, or else that such a title was submitted to him as it was unreasonable for him to disapprove.—CLACK v. WOOD (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 276; 47 L. T. 144; 30 W. R. 931, C. A.

1756. Principal failing to deliver.—A commission agent was employed by a manufacturer to procure orders for him upon the terms contained in a written proposal as follows: "We sell at your terms, & have no further interference with the account beyond forwarding the order & references. We give you all the information we possess, & you treat the order as coming direct from the buyer. We expect to receive our commission on all goods bought by houses whose accounts are opened through us":—Held: the agent was entitled to his commission where an order had been given & accepted by the manufacturer, though, in consequence of his inability to supply the goods, they were not ultimately delivered to the buyer.—LOCKWOOD v. LEVICK (1860), 8 C. B. N. S. 603; 20 L. J. C. P. 340; 2 L. T. 357; 7 Jur. N. S. 102; 8 W. R. 583; 141 E. R. 1303.

He obtained a purchaser who signed the contract, but with a condition as to satisfactory title indorsed which defts. were unable to fulfill:—Held: there was no sale & no commission earned.—HENRY v. BUXTON (1904), 4 S. R. N. S. W. 264; 21 N. S. W. W. N. 92.—AUS.

1758 ii. ——Where real estate agents effect a sale of the property placed in their hands, but the sale is not carried out owing to a defect in the title, they are nevertheless entitled to the usual commission.—BROWN v. McDONALD (1894), Q. R. 6 S. C. 491.—CAN.

1758 iii. ——Applts., real estate brokers, received verbal instructions from resp's. to sell certain land at a stated price on certain terms which they did, & on the day of sale applts. paid C. one of resp's., at his request the deposit received by them & took his receipt therefor. Later applts.

The contract was procured by pltf's. for defts., but the latter were unable to get the lorries, & the French Govt. cancelled the contract & paid defts. nothing. In an action to recover the commission:—Held: as defts. had put themselves forward as being able to supply the lorries, the non-receipt of the money was caused by their default, & the commission was payable.—VULCAN CAR AGENCY, LTD. v. FIAT MOTORS, LTD. (1915), 32 T. L. R. 73.

1758. Principal failing to show satisfactory title.—Pltf., on undertaking to negotiate for deft. a loan of money, received from him a memorandum to the effect that he agreed to accept through pltf. the loan of £7,000 on the security of his ship, on his handing, amongst other things, as security, a legal mtge. on the ship, & to pay for negotiating the same 5 per cent. commission on the amount. The loan was negotiated by pltf., but the lender refused to complete it on hearing that the ship was already mtgd. for a sum far exceeding the amount of the proposed loan:—Held: (1) it was for the jury to say whether the parties must be taken to have meant a first mtge.; (2) if so, & the lender on that ground declined to make the advance, pltf. was entitled to commission.—THOMPSON (THOMSON) v. CLARK (CLARKE, CLERK) (1862), 3 F. & F. 181; 1 New Rep. 19; 7 L. T. 269; 11 W. R. 23; 1 Mar. L. C. 256, N. P.

1759. ——Deft. entered into the following contract with pltf.: "In the event of your procuring me the sum of £2,000 or such other as I shall accept, I agree to pay you a commission of 2½ per cent. on any money received." Pltf. procured a party willing to lend £1,025 if deft. showed a sufficient title to his security. Deft. accepted the offer, but failed to show a sufficient title. The negotiations consequently went off, & no money was in fact received by deft.:—Held: pltf. entitled to his commission on the £1,025, as it was owing to deft.'s own default that he never received the sum, & pltf. had performed all his part of the contract.

1758 vii. ——Pltf's., land agents, were employed to find a purchaser for deft.'s farm. They procured a binding contract, but deft. being unable to give a good title to all the leaseholds as described in the contract of purchase, the purchaser cancelled the contract:—Held: pltf's. entitled to their commission.—HINE & BOND v. received instructions from resp's. to sell other land at a stated price & they sold to B. acting for the syndicate which had purchased the previous land, but the formal agreement was closed by B. with C., to whom B. paid a deposit receiving in return a receipt. Prior to the date by which the balance of the purchase-money on the first sale was to be paid the purchasers discovered resp's. were without title as to part of the land & refused to complete, & applts. sued for & were awarded commission upon the entire purchase:—Held: the question was whether the sale went off by reason of the purchaser not being bound or by reason of resp's. inability or refusal to complete, & there must be a new trial unless applts. were willing to reduce the verdict in their favour to the amount of the commission on the deposit.—MACKENZIE v. 1760. — Agent must first fulfil his part of bargain.]—Where an agent seeks to recover commission for procuring a loan upon mtge. he must prove he has obtained a person willing & able to lend the money, in the absence of which it is immaterial that the title is found to be defective or the property is not such as was described to the agent. —HORNBY v. EBERLE (1884), 1 T. L. R. 104.

1761. ——Where an agent employed to borrow money upon leasehold security finds a person able & willing to lend, but the negotiations go off by reason of such person discovering unusual covenants which the agent was not informed of, the agent is entitled to the whole of the agreed commission for procuring the loan.

Deft. agreed to pay plffs. a commission of 2 per cent. "for procuring him on loan the sum of £20,000 upon the security of certain leasehold property," having 3 days before such agreement furnished plffs. with two valuations of the property, each of them stating the lease to be for a term of 99 years, & setting the value at about £37,000, & one of them assuming that the lease "contained no arbitrary or restrictive clauses, but only the usual covenants." Upon the strength of these valuations, plffs. applied for a loan to a provident institution, the directors of which agreed to advance it, "subject to the title & all other questions proving to be satisfactory." Upon examination of the lease on behalf of the institution, it was discovered that the lease, instead of being a lease for 99 years absolutely, contained a proviso for re-entry under certain conditions, which constituted a substantial deterioration of its value, whereupon the directors refused to make the advance:—Held: plffs. were entitled to the whole of the agreed commission.

If the directors were not justified in refusing to go on with the loan deft. ought to have proceeded against them; & if they were justified, then the failure of the loan was owing to deft.'s own default, or the failure of the security he had proposed. In either view plffs.' title to their commission ought not to be interfered with (LORD CAIRNS, C.).—GREEN v. LUCAS (1875), 33 L. T. 584; 40 J. P. 390, C. A.

1762. — Sale of land.]—Defts. were instructed to sell by auction a freehold property, & the terms upon which they were to be paid commission were contained in two letters, dated June 7 & 8, 1900, respectively, as follows: "If the property should not be sold at the auction, but should be sold within, say, 2 months afterwards, to a purchaser who has been found by means of your advertisements or posters or through your introduction, then you are to receive half of the commission you would have received if the property had been sold at the auction"; & "If a sale should take place either before the sale under the hammer or before Oct. 30, 1900, the usual commission of 2½ per cent. upon the first £5,000 & 1½ per cent. upon the balance is to be paid to us, such commission to include all out-of-pocket expenses. If the property remains unsold at Oct. 30, then no charge of any description, whether for out-of-pocket expenses or service, is to be made by us." At the auction the property was knocked down to a purchaser who signed a contract & paid a deposit, but subsequently the contract was rescinded by the vendor in consequence of a requisition being made by the purchaser with which the vendor could not comply:—Held: defts.' commission was payable on the property being knocked down to a purchaser at the auction, notwithstanding there was no completed sale.—SKINNER v. ANDREWS & HALL (1910), 26 T. L. R. 340; 54 Sol. Jo. 380, C. A.

1763. Principal declining to accept loan.]—If A. employs B. to raise money for him, & B. finds the money, A. cannot, merely by declining to accept it, deprive B. of his commission.—MASON v. CLIFTON, No. 1746, ante.

1764. Contract rescinded under reserved power.]—A. instructed B., an auctioneer, to sell certain property on commission. A special arrangement was made that if the property should not be sold, a specified fee should be charged, & out-of-pocket expenses. The property was sold to H., but subsequently A., acting under a condition in the contract of sale, rescinded the contract. B. claimed commission on the price agreed to be given by H.:—Held: (1) commission was only payable on a completed sale; (2) commission was not payable under the terms of the contract itself; (3) there was no default on A.'s part preventing the contract from being carried out.

Land can only be said to be sold when the conveyance is complete, not when there is a mere contract to sell. Plffs. being entitled to rescind, there was no default on their part (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—PEACOCK v. FREEMAN (1888), 4 T. L. R. 541, C. A. Annotation.—Distd. Skinner v. Andrews & Hall (1910), 26 T. L. R. 340, C. A.

1765. Principal unable to justify statements on which negotiations proceeded.]—Deft. employed pltf. to obtain for him an advance by way of mtge. on certain premises, commission to be paid, one half when the first instalment of the loan was paid, & the balance on payment of the second instalment. Pltf. negotiated with a building society on the basis of a statement furnished by deft. as to the tenancies of the premises, & the society agreed to make the advance, but subsequently withdrew on discovering serious inaccuracies in the statement:—Held: pltf. entitled to his commission.

The cases have long been settled that if the person proposing to negotiate a loan brings the principals together, & if nothing remains for him to do, he is entitled to his commission (A. L.

1760 i. — Agent must first fulfil his part of bargain—What amounts to fulfilment.]—Defts. executed the following letter of authority in favour of plffs.: "We authorise you to raise a loan of 11 lakhs (or less, if so required). We agree to pay you a commission of 5 per cent. on such amount as may be advanced by the capitalist to us. . . . Defts. did not state what the value of the security was, but plffs. represented to the capitalist that the value of the property would be not less than 20 lakhs, & the capitalist insisted upon satisfactory proof before he would agree to make the advance. The negotiation with the capitalist having for this reason fallen through, plffs. sued for recovery of the stipulated commission:—Held: (1) the stipulation was not merely to find a capitalist ready & willing to advance the money, but also to procure funds for the satisfaction of the debts of defts.; (2) even assuming that plffs. undertook only to find a person ready & willing to advance the money, they had not done so, as the capitalist whom they found imposed a condition as to the margin of security never proposed or accepted by the borrowers, & at no stage of the negotiations was he ready to accept the estate as it stood as security for the loan, i.e., to advance the funds on the terms prescribed by the principal. Qu.: whether the technical meaning ascribed to the expression "to raise a loan" in English cases, implying that the agent who is engaged "to raise a loan" discharges his duty as soon as he finds a creditor who is able & willing to advance money, should be imported in the interpretation of contracts in India.—KISHAN PRASAD SINGHA v. PURNENDU NARAIN SINGHA (1911), 16 C. W. N. 753.—IND.

1765 i. Principal unable to justify statements on which negotiations proceeded.]—A real estate agent has the right to be paid his commission, though no sale have resulted by reason of the fact that the object of the sale was not in the condition in which it was represented to be, as in the case of an hotel when transfer of the licence cannot be obtained.—LAMARRE v. CLAIRMONT (1915), Q. R. 48 S. C. 461.—CAN.

Pltf. released the purchaser's representative from the contract & directed defts. to return the deposit:—Held: defts. entitled to be paid the agreed commission on the purchase.—PLATT v. Pltf. introduced B., who paid a deposit & signed a contract for the purchase, which he subsequently failed to complete. The contract provided for the payment of commission upon the purchase-money:—Held: (1) pltf. entitled to commission, as pltf. had found a purchaser, whom deft. was willing to accept & who would accept deft.'s terms; (2) on the facts deft. had taken the negotiations out of the hands of the agent & waived his right to say that the commission had not been earned.—PASSINGHAM v. KING (1898), 14 T. L. R. 392, C. A.

Pltf. was instructed by deft. to find a purchaser

1766 I. Principal releasing third party.]—An agent for sale of property procured a purchaser willing to purchase on terms accepted by the owner; the building on the property being defective & the owner unable or unwilling to make it good, the owner agreed with the purchaser that the agreement for sale should be cancelled:—Held: (1) the agent was entitled to compensation for services as on a quantum meruit or by way of damages; (2) in these circumstances he should be awarded the amount of commission agreed on on an actual sale; (3) he was entitled notwithstanding he had not procured a purchaser to execute a binding agreement.—Trickett v. Badger (1856), 1 C. B. N. S. 296; Roberts v. Barnard (1884), 1 Cab. & El. 336; & Fuller v. Eames (1892), 8 T. L. R. 278, cited.—BRYDGES v. CLEMENT (1901) 24 C. L. T. 96; 14 Man. L. Subsequently the purchaser repurchased from the principal direct:—Held: pltfs. not entitled to commission.—HAMMER v. BULLOCK (1910), 14 W. L. R. 652.—CAN.

1766 III. —.]—A., an agent for sale, was instructed by the owner to sell his property at a fixed price, in a letter stating, "If you can sell, I will give you £100 commission." A. procured L. who was approved by the owner, & who entered into a binding contract to purchase at agreed price, & paid a deposit of £300. L. then refused to complete, & the owner, without A.'s knowledge, agreed to release L. In consideration of his forfeiting the deposit. On same day the owner sold to M., for £200 less than

L. had agreed to pay: Held: A. entitled to recover commission agreed on by the owner.—LATER v. PARSONS (1906), 26 N. Z. L. R. 615.—N.Z.

1766 IV. —.]—An agent to find a purchaser on commission found purchasers who entered into an agreement in writing for the purchase, but they could not comply with Land Act, 1905, & they agreed to find a sub-purchaser. The sub-purchaser refused to complete & the owner subsequently released the original purchasers from their contract:—Held: the agent entitled to commission, the owner having prevented completion of the contract by releasing the purchasers.—McKEAN v. BRICE (1912), 31 N. Z. L. R. 759, C. A.—N.Z.

a. Principal failing to obtain contract.]—Pltf. by deed agreed to obtain security to enable deft. to procure a Govt. contract, & was to receive commission on the price of the contract payable semi-annually until completion. Pltfs. went to N.Y. & brought back the men who agreed to pay pltfs. $1.00 commission per head & repay advances made by pltfs. for their railway fares. Pltfs. spent $25.00 for their own expenses & advanced $700.00 in part payment of their railway fares. McMAHON (1889) 17 A. R. 34.—CAN.

for his house for £4,000, & on Jan. 16 he found S., who required possession by Mar. 15, ready & willing to pay that sum. Deft. refused the offer on the ground that he could not give up possession on Mar. 15. The jury found that from Jan. 16 to Mar. 15 was a reasonable time:—Held: pltf. entitled to his commission.—NOSOTTI v. AUERBACH (1899), 15 T. L. R. 140, C. A.; affg. 79 L. T. 410.

1769. Measure of damages.]—The measure of damages in an action by an agent against his principal for wrongfully preventing him from earning his commission, where nothing remains to be done by the agent to entitle him to his commission, is the full amount of the commission which he would have received if the transaction had been completed.—ROBERTS v. WILSON (1807), 1 Taunt. 12; 127 E. R. 733.

The one-third was paid. A. delivered an abstract of his title, but no abstract was delivered on the part of B., & the negotiation dropped:—Held: C. could not maintain an action against A. for the remaining two-thirds of his commission, the event, on the happening of which his right to it was to arise, not having occurred.—ALDER v. BOYLE (1847), 4 C. B. 635; 16 L. J. C. P. 232; 9 L. T. O. S. 246; 11 Jur. 591; 136 E. R. 657.

MOORE* (1911), 19 O. W. R. 73; 2 O. W. N. 1017.—CAN.

1771 i. Third party not delivering title.]—Defts. agreed to pay commission to pltf. on purchase of land on condition that if the vendor was unable to deliver title, there was to be no commission:—Held: pltf. entitled to recover, defts. having failed to prove the contingency exonerating them; the evidence showing that the vendor was willing to complete, but that the parties ultimately agreed to abandon the contract.—CAMPBELL v. BOLAND (1917), 2 W. W. R. 819.—CAN.

1771 ii —.]—Appl. employed resp., a commission agent, under an agreement by which he was to receive a commission on selling or exchanging appl.'s land. BLY* (1915), 34 N. Z. L. R. 538.—N.Z.

b. Third party refusing to complete.]—Deft., owner of property, was desirous of selling it, & pltf., a real estate agent, called at deft.'s house & asked deft.'s wife, deft. being away, if she wanted to sell. She replied, "We wanted to sell. Of course if we got our price we would sell," & mentioned the price she wanted. Subsequently pltf. introduced a purchaser, & an agreement was signed & a deposit paid, & deft. signed an agreement to pay pltf. his commission "for selling my property." The purchaser afterwards thought he had paid too much for the property & refused to complete, whereupon pltf. sued for his commission:—Held: (1) a purchaser having been found, there remained nothing else for the agent to do; (2) what the parties meant by "selling" property was the successful effort of pltf. to procure a purchaser acceptable to the vendor, the purchaser signing a contract. Peacock v. Freeman, 4 T. L. R. 541, cited.—SMITH v. BAIRF (1912), 27 O. L. R. 276; 4 O. W. N. 236; 8 D. L. R. 996.—CAN.

By the terms of the agreement for sale there were conditions as to title & the right to the vendor, if he was unable or unwilling to answer requisitions upon title, to rescind the contract. The purchaser assigned his interest in the contract to a third party, who asked for & received an extension of time for completion of the sale, & the day before that fixed for completion was notified that unless it were completed that day the vendor would no longer be bound. The third party did not complete. In an action by pltf. against the vendor for their commission:—Held: pltf. were authorised to find a purchaser for property at a price named, & had done so to their principal's satisfaction & procured a binding contract, & were entitled to commission, although the sale did not go through owing to the buyer's default. Fuller v. Eames (1892), 8 T. L. R. 278, cited.—COLELAND v. WEDLOCK (1905), 6 O. W. R. 539.—CAN.

principal & customer—Measure of damages.]—Defts. agreed with pltf. to pay him commission on orders from certain customers introduced by him "during a term of 3 years, dating from the receipt of the first order in each individual instance." To the agreement was appended a list of customers, which included the names of B. & Sons. B. & Sons had agreed to buy from defts. 30 machines or pay a forfeit of £30 for each machine not taken. They only took 3 machines, & by agreement with defts. paid £600 instead of £810 by way of forfeit to cancel the contract. Pltf. claimed commission on the price of the 30 machines, or alternatively on the £600:—Held: (1) B. & Sons had given defts. "orders" for 30 machines within the contract k. Third party failing to make deposit.]—Pltf. was employed by defts. to sell certain property, brokerage to be paid on receipt by the principal of the money, & the transaction to be completed within a fortnight. Pltf. negotiated with P. & his brother, who agreed to become purchasers on terms that Rs.10,000 should be paid immediately as earnest & the balance (Rs.27,000) of the purchase-money within four months. The purchasers were unable to pay the earnest-money, & handed defts. shares as security, which, with the exception of one, were afterwards returned to the purchasers' family, the one not returned having been sold to defray expenses incurred in connection with the transaction. Pltf. sued to recover Rs.1,500 as brokerage:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to recover more than a quantum meruit, & was only entitled to a percentage (5 per cent.) on the value of the shares which had been actually received by defts. Deft. refused to sell & pltf. sued for commission:—Held: deposit was left at the bank at the disposal of the prospective purchaser without being appropriated to the sale as the terms of pltf.'s employment required, & pltf. was not entitled to his commission.—YATES v. RESER (1909), 1 S. C. R. 577.—CAN.

1773. Building agreement—Third party failing to build.]—Pltf., an estate agent, was employed by deft. to sell a piece of land for building purposes. Pltf. introduced W. as a purchaser. W. commenced to build, but never finished the houses contemplated. Pltf. claimed commission, alleging it was payable as soon as the agreement was signed. Deft. relied upon a usage that in the case of building agreements commission was payable not when the agreement was signed but when the houses had been built & leases had been granted:—Held: (1) the usage was proved; (2) pltf. was not entitled to commission.—KIRK v. EVANS, No. 1728, ante.

1774. Underwriters' agreement not carried out.]—Pltf. was employed by defts. on commission to procure the underwriting of certain debenture & preference stocks of the M. Ry. It was not suggested that they were men of straw or that pltf. had acted fraudulently:—Held: pltf. entitled to his commission.—MOIR v. MARTEN (1891), 7 T. L. R. 330.

1775. Remuneration payable when purchase completed.]—Deft. agreed with an estate agent to pay him commission in the event of his finding a purchaser "on completion of the purchase." The purchaser introduced by the agent signed a contract for the purchase & paid a deposit, but ultimately, being unable to complete, the contract was rescinded:—Held: no commission was payable, as the purchase had not been completed & non-completion was not due to the fault of the vendor.—LOTT v. OUTHWAITE (1893), 10 T. L. R. 76, C. A. Annotations:—Fold, Chapman v. Winson (1904), 91 L. T. 17, C. A.; Vulcan Car Agency v. Fiat Motors (1915), 32 T. L. R. 73.

completion. Purchaser, being unable to find the balance of the purchase-money & carry out the contract, was released by deft., he retaining the £200 paid as deposit:—Held: upon the true construction of the contract pltf. was not entitled to the commission.—CHAPMAN v. WINSON (1904), 91 L. T. 17; 53 W. R. 19; 20 T. L. R. 663, C. A.

1778. House not let—Evidence of usage.]—Pltfs. had been employed by deft. to let a house, & a negotiation with a customer took place. Pltfs. were put to much trouble, but the negotiation broke off & the house was not let. To an action brought by pltfs. for their trouble in & about this negotiation, it was insisted on the part of deft. that, the house not being let, pltf. could not recover, such being the custom of the trade. At the trial the following questions were put to a witness: "Is it usual, according to the custom of the trade, to pay a commission when a house is let?" "Is it usual, according to the custom of the trade, to pay a commission when the house is not let?"—Held: these questions were properly allowed, the object being not to establish a general custom binding on the public, but merely to show what was the implied contract between the parties.—NUTTER v. GWENAP (1842), 6 J. P. 732.

1779. No binding contract made.]—Where house agents were employed to sell houses upon the terms that their commission should be payable upon the treaty being concluded:—Held: (1) they could not recover their commission until a contract binding upon both parties had been entered into; (2) they were not entitled to recover it when they had introduced a purchaser who agreed to the vendor's terms, no contract in writing to satisfy Stat. Frauds having been entered into between them; (3) the terms of the contract were unambiguous; (4) no parol evidence of custom could be received.—COTTON v. SWANN (1818), 11 L. T. O. S. 63.

1780. Purchase not completed.]—In an action to recover commission for the sale of houses by pltf. as deft.'s agent, it appeared during the trial that, although the contract had been entered into, the purchase was not complete:—Held: pltf. must be nonsuited.—WADE v. TATTERSALL (1851), 23 L. T. O. S. 324.

1775 i. Remuneration payable when purchase completed.]—Pltf. claimed commission as on a sale of land. A deposit of £2,000 was paid, & then deft. wrote that commission would be paid "on completion of the deal." A formal agreement was executed, & a further $4,000 paid, but subsequently the purchaser made default in payment of further instalments of the purchase-money, & deft. took back the land, retaining all money paid, & released the purchaser from further liability:—Held: the words "completion of the deal" meant execution of a binding agreement of sale, & pltf. was entitled to commission.—HAFNER v. CORRINGLY (1908), 7 W. L. R. 764; 8 W. L. R. 743; 18 Man. L. R. 1.—CAN.

1775 ii. ———.]—An agent instructed to lease an hotel & obtain a fixed sum for goodwill & furniture prepared an agreement, & the lessees paid a deposit. These instructions were silent as to commission. The lessees could not find the money & failed to complete:—Held: the agent not entitled to commission, as his implied right to charge commission could only arise on completion.—BAKER v. HOPKINS (1901), 20 N. Z. L. R. 518.—N.Z.

PART VIII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.—E (c).

1777 i. Reserve price not reached.]—Where a document, under which an agent for sale is authorised to sell for a sum "clear," is the only evidence of the agent's employment, the use of the word "clear" shows that the right of the agent to commission was conditional, & arose only when the whole sum mentioned was received by the seller.—KINGS v. PRYOR (1896), 22 V. L. R. 106.—AUS.

1779 i. No binding contract made.]—Pltf., an hotel broker employed to sell the lease of an hotel with commission on introducing a purchaser, entered into a verbal agreement, received a deposit & gave a receipt signed by him & the vendor, but the purchaser failed to complete:—Held: pltf. not entitled to commission, his duty being to procure the execution of a binding contract, & the vendor by signing the receipt had not waived the obtaining by the broker of a binding

1780 i. Purchase not completed.]—Where an agent brought his principal & a third party together & an agreement was signed, but the matter was not completed:—Held: the agent not entitled to commission.—BUSINESS BROKERS v. DINER (1915), 31 W. L. R. 455.—CAN.

1780 ii. ———.]—GUARANTEE INVESTMENT Co. v. VIPOND (1915), 22 R. L. N. S. 53.—CAN.

1780 iii. ———.]—To have the right to claim his commission upon the sale of real estate, the agent claiming to have found a purchaser must establish that the latter has signed the deed of sale, & has tendered the purchase price within the required delay. If nothing has been done by the contracting parties to fulfil the agreement & no sale has been perfected, the agent has no claim for commission.—HOFFMAN v. DESAULNIERS (1915), Q. R. 48 S. C. 15.—CAN.

1780 iv. ———.]—Want of consensus.]—Pltf. secured a prospective purchaser

1781. Remuneration payable on contingency not arising.]—Pltf., a surveyor, agreed to survey A.'s lands without charge, in consideration, if any of the lands were sold for building purposes, of being appointed architect, & that the parties building should pay pltf. 1½ per cent. on the outlay. If A. or his exors. wished to dispense with pltf.'s services at any time, they should be at liberty to do so on the understanding that they paid him for the surveys. No land was disposed of for building, & A.'s exors. dispensed with pltf.'s services:—Held: pltf. had no cause of action, as the event on the happening of which he was to be remunerated, viz., the disposal of the land for building purposes, had not happened.

I entertained some doubt during the course of the argument whether a contract might not be implied on the part of A. & his exors. that they would do no act to prevent the occurrence of the event on which pltf.'s remuneration was made to depend. But the declaration is not framed so as to entitle pltf. to claim damages from defts. for preventing him from acquiring the profit he is entitled to under the contract; but pltf. seeks to recover damages for improperly dispensing with his services (WILLIAMS, J.).—MOFFATT v. LAURIE (1855), 15 O. B. 583; 24 L. J. C. P. 56; 24 L. T. O. S. 259; 1 Jur. N. S. 283; 3 W. R. 252; 139 E. R. 553.

Annotations:—Refd. Inchbald v. Western Neigherry Coffee, Tea & Cinchona Plantation Co. (1864), 17 C. B. N. S. 733.

1782. No partnership effected.]—Defts. agreed with pltf. to remunerate him "in the event of their taking into partnership" M., introduced by pltf.

for deft.'s farm, & an employee of pltf., the purchaser & deft. went out to look at the land. The purchaser then completed the agreement to purchase. Later it was discovered that the land inspected was not the property described in the agreement:—Held: the sale was conditional upon the land inspected being the land under treaty between the parties, & when it was not so there was no contract & pltf. was not entitled to any commission.—CARRUTHERS v. FISCHER (1906), 5 W. L. R. 42.—CAN.

1780 v. — Failure of agent to communicate third party's willingness to buy.]—It is not enough for an agent to find a purchaser willing to buy on the principal's terms: he must also communicate the fact to his principal & give him the opportunity of effecting a sale. Pltf., being employed to find a purchaser, gave to G., an intending purchaser, a receipt, & subsequently sent him a telegram, containing terms he had no authority to make. G. gave evidence that he was always willing to buy on deft.'s terms:—Held: pltf. had failed to show he had found a purchaser able & willing to buy on deft.'s terms, & his action for commission must be dismissed.—HAFFNER v. GRUNDY (1912), 21 W. L. R. 460; 2 W. R. 451; 4 D. L. R. 529.—CAN.

1780 vi. — Confirmation refused.—By licensing authorities declining to allow transfer of licence.]—The commission of a salaried agent who closes a deal can only be recovered when an actual sale is consummated. Hence, if a sale of licensed property goes off on refusal of transfer of licence, he has no claim against the principal.—LE PAGE v. BOUCHARD (1912), Q. R. 43 S. C. 181.—CAN.

1780 vii. — By Land Board declining to allow transfer of lease.]—The owner of a farm held under two leases in perpetuity, one being in his mother's name, only one lease being legal under Land Act, 1892, authorised resp. co. to find a purchaser. The local manager of the co. knowing the facts as to the title found a purchaser, who entered into a contract of sale with the owner, but, on the Land Board refusing to sanction transfer of both leases, rescinded:—Held: resp. co. had not earned commission.—TENNENT v. NEW ZEALAND LOAN & MERCANTILE AGENCY CO., LTD. (1907), 27 N. Z. L. R. 253.—N.Z.

1780 viii. — By magistrate declining to give certificate of fitness.]—B., agent for sale, was employed by A. to sell a lease at a commission of £50. B. introduced a purchaser who entered into an agreement & paid a deposit, but, the magistrate refusing to give the purchaser a certificate of fitness, the sale was rescinded, the purchaser agreeing to forfeit his deposit. In an action for commission B. obtained judgment for £25. On appeal:—Held: B. entitled to the commission.—MULHOLLAND v. MCCARTHY (1911), 31 N. Z. L. R. 358.—N.Z.

1781 i. Remuneration payable on contingency not arising.]—Pltf. sued for commission for services in securing defts. an option to purchase certain mining claims, which defts. failed to take up:—Held: pltf. not entitled to be paid unless the claims were sold, & this defts. were unable to do, as vendors refused to extend the time for payment, & the transaction failed without default or bad faith of defts.—CATILL v. TIMMINS (1910), 16 O. W. R. 980; 2 O. W. N. 73.—CAN.

1781 ii. —An agent was paid $5,000 for his services, but sued to recover more in relation to a purchase of coal lands:—Held: (1) he was not entitled to a quantum meruit, & if he was, $5,000 was ample; (2) the remuneration to be paid under a letter was upon a condition which failed through the lands proving practically valueless as coal lands, & the contract was discharged by the non-existence of the particular state of things which was the basis of it, on the principle of Taylor v. Caldwell (1863), 3 B. & S. 833.—GRANT v. VON ALVENSLEREN (1913), 25 W. L. R. 108; 13 D. L. R. 381; 18 B. C. R. 334.—CAN.

1784 i. No purchaser found by agent.]—

Defts. afterwards entered into a written agreement with M., by which it was agreed that they should enter into partnership as & from a specified future day, when a formal deed of partnership should be executed carrying out the terms of the agreement. This agreement recognised & adopted the agreement between pltf. & defts. No partnership deed was ever executed, nor did M. ever in fact act as a partner of defts.:—Held: (1) the agreement between M. & defts. did not constitute a present partnership; (2) there was evidence of a "taking into partnership" within the agreement between pltf. & defts. so as to entitle pltf. to his commission.—HARRIS v. PETHERICK (1878), 39 L. T. 543.

1783. —Deft. agreed to pay to pltf.s. a commission on the amount of capital brought into his business by any partner introduced by them. They introduced a person willing upon certain terms to bring money into his business, & partnership deeds were executed, but not exchanged:—Held: pltf.s. not entitled to commission, as no partnership had been effected.—MARTIN v. TUCKER (1885), 1 T. L. R. 655.

1784. No purchaser found by agent.]—Pltf., a house agent, was employed by S. to find a purchaser. Pltf. introduced T., who for some time carried on negotiations; no binding contract was ever arrived at, T. putting forward a term to which S. would not assent:—Held: (1) pltf. had never introduced a person who was ready & willing to purchase; (2) he was not entitled to commission.—GROGAN v. SMITH (1890), 7 T. L. R. 132, C. A.

Annotations:—Refd. Nosatti v. Auerbach (1898), 79 L. T. 413.

A city property was placed in an agent's hands for sale. The agent submitted the property to the governor of the Commonwealth Bank. Whilst negotiations were proceeding the Commonwealth Govt. resumed the property for the bank site:—Held: no sale was effected by the agent or otherwise, & he was not entitled to any commission.—DALY v. PERKS (1914), 14 S. R. N. S. W. 461; 31 N. S. W. W. N. 169.—AUS.

1784 ii. —Deft. agreed with pltf. to pay him 25 per cent. commission on the purchase price of his land, if within a fixed time he produced a purchaser willing to enter into an agreement at a price & who had signed an offer in writing therefor. An offer was obtained in writing by pltf. on the terms mentioned, coupled, however, with a condition that, if not accepted within a time named on the second day from the offer, such offer would be withdrawn. Pltf. wrote & telegraphed this offer to deft., informing him fully of the terms of the offer, but not giving the name of the purchaser, which he did not then know himself, as the offer had been made to an agent of his. Subsequently pltf. gave the name of the purchaser, but through mischance he was not informed of acceptance in time to allow him to notify the purchaser in time, & he purchaser withdrew his offer:—Held: pltf. could not recover commission. An offer which had to be accepted in less than two days after deft. received it was not an offer contemplated by the agreement, & the name of the purchaser was not produced within a reasonable time.—RODGERS v. BRAUN (1906), 16 M. R. 580; 4 W. L. R. 40.—CAN.

1784 iii. — Proposed purchaser merely man of straw.]—A real estate agent is entitled to his commission or any other form of compensation agreed upon when he brings his principal, the seller & a prospective buyer into agreement, but the latter must be possessed of the means to carry out his obligations. Hence a young man of twenty-four years of age, whose whole means are his wages of $1,000, is not an acceptable

1785. Ship chartered.—Found to be unfit.]—Pltf., acting as broker for defts., obtained a time charter-party for their ship upon terms of being paid a commission on all hire earned. During the currency of the charterparty litigation arose between defts. & the charterers as to the fitness of the ship for the purpose for which she was chartered, which resulted in the cancellation of the charterparty, there being no wilful act or default on the part of defts. in bringing about this result:—Held: upon the true construction of the contract, the intention of the parties was that pltf. should not be entitled to commission, if the earning of hire was prevented by reason of causes such as had in fact put an end to the charterparty.—WHITE v. TURNBULL, MARTIN & Co. (1898), 78 L. T. 726; 14 T. L. R. 401; 8 Asp. M. L. C. 406; 3 Com. Cas. 183, C. A.

1786. — Lost before coming on hire.]—In the shipping trade there is an established custom that chartering brokers' commission is only payable in respect of hire actually earned.—HARLEY & Co. v. NAGATA (1917), 34 T. L. R. 124.

(d) Right to Quantum Meruit.

1787. General rule.]—Whether, on an employ-ment to obtain a loan of money for commission, commission is payable if the loan, i.e., the power of obtaining it, is procured, whether the money is actually received or not, provided that it does not fail through any default of the agent employed, but goes off through defect of title or insufficiency of security, is a question which depends in every case on the nature & effect of the contract of employment. Semble: if nothing is said about the event of failure the agent is entitled to recover on a quantum meruit if he procures the loan & it fails on the title.—GREEN v. REED (READ) (1862), 3 F. & F. 220; 8 L. T. 83, N. P.
Annotation:—Reid, Fuller v. Eames (1892), 8 T. L. R. 278.

1788. —.]—The London agent (who was also a member) of a firm, who were commissioned to sell goods on behalf of the local govt. of a Spanish colony, was held to be justified in refusing to give them up to the Spanish Consul-General in England till he had communicated, through his immediate principals, with the local govt.

An agent, who has the business taken out of his hands before completion, is by the custom of merchants entitled to half the commission which he would have earned by completing it.

The 10 per cent. discount usually allowed by insurance cos. on punctual payment of the premiums belongs, in the absence of agreement to the buyer of real estate for a price of £20,000, payable £6,000 cash, & the balance yearly instalments of £1,000, in addition to shouldering intges. to the amount of £8,000.—GROSS REAL ESTATE AGENCY v. RACOT (1910), Q. B. 20 K. B. 394.—CAN.

m. Abandonment of contract by parties.]—An agent obtained a purchaser, an agreement was signed, a deposit paid, & the purchaser went into possession. Pltf. agreed to wait for his commission until a loan should be made or the property sold again. The purchaser subsequently abandoned the property, & deft. cancelled the agreement:—Held: deft. liable to pay the commission, although no loan or sale had been made.—MCCALLUM v. RUSSELL (1909), 12 W. L. R. 267.—CAN.*

n. —.]—Where pltf. sold property for deft., & there was offer & acceptance:—Held: he was entitled to his commission notwithstanding the purchase afterwards fell through.—

o. —.]—Deft. authorised pltf. in writing to effect an exchange of lands on certain terms, & stated in writing his commission should be £250 on effecting an exchange on terms agreed; subsequently terms were altered, & pltf. brought about a binding contract on the altered terms, which was abandoned:—Held: pltf. entitled to commission, as abandonment was not due to any breach of duty by pltf.—MACKAY v. KEEVES (1909), 25 N. Z. L. R. 1114.—N.Z.

PART VIII SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.—E (d).

1787 l. General rule.]—Pltf., an experienced man in the towage business, refused an offer of deft.'s agent of 5 per cent. commission, but offered to work for $800 the season. Without any agreement he performed services for contrary, not to the insurance agent, but to his principal.—SPAIN (QUEEN) v. PARR, No. 1617, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 1617, ante.

1789. No right where express contract.]—Pltf. was employed by defts. to procure a loan on the terms of receiving commission for the loan so procured:—Held: (1) pltf. had not complied with the terms of the special contract & was not entitled to commission; (2) pltf. was not entitled to recover on a quantum meruit because defts. had not revoked the original contract & the parties were still bound by special terms.—M'LEOD v. ARTOLA BROTHERS (1889), 6 T. L. R. 68.

1790. —.]—A. agreed to allow B. 2½ per cent. commission "on completion of the purchase" of an estate. The purchaser introduced by B. failed to complete, & eventually A. rescinded the contract. The assignee of B.'s interest sued A.'s exors. on a quantum meruit:—Held: as there was an express contract, no implied contract to pay a quantum meruit arose.—LOTT v. OUTHWAITE, No. 1775, ante.

1791. —.]—Deft. agreed to pay pltf's commis-sion in the event of their introducing a partner, the commission to be payable according to the amount of capital that the new partner introduced, nothing to be payable if no capital secured. Pltf's introduced N., but negotiations between deft. & N. were ultimately broken off. Pltf's alleged that they were broken off on the ground that deft. had misrepresented the amount of capital in the business:—Held: (1) deft. had not been guilty of misrepresentation causing the negotiations to be broken off; (2) pltf's were not entitled either to commission or to a quantum meruit.—SPIERS & BEVAN v. GLUCK (1901), 17 T. L. R. 236.

1792. — Substitution of new implied contract—Question of fact.]—Deft., being about to erect seats for viewing a public funeral, entered into an agreement with pltf., a foreign agent, to make the scheme known abroad, & dispose of tickets for the seats. Pltf. was to be paid for his work & expenses by a percentage on the tickets which he sold. After pltf. had incurred certain expenses, but before he sold any tickets, deft. desired him not to dispose of them, as he would sell them himself. Pltf. sent all applicants for tickets to him, & after the funeral delivered to deft. a bill for work done & expenses incurred. Deft. paid the expenses, but refused to pay for the work:—Held: it was a question for the jury whether the original contract was not rescinded by mutual consent, & whether there was not a new implied contract that pltf. should be paid for the work actually done as upon defts., some of which were unproductive:—Held: pltf. entitled to a quantum meruit for all services performed & not merely those that were productive.—LEMAV v. ST. LAWRENCE STEAM NAVIGATION CO. (1884), Q. S. C. 1884.—CAN.

1792 l. No right where express contract—Substitution of new implied contract.]—C. authorised H. to sell a section & a half of 960 acres, at $35 an acre, for 5 per cent. commission. H. introduced T. to C., & T. agreed to buy the section alone at $40 an acre, if certain other property were taken in part payment:—Held: an entirely new contract, as to which there was no memorandum in writing within Alberta Stat., c. 27, & H. not entitled to commission or to recover on a quantum meruit.—Toulmin v. Millar (1887), 58 L. T. 96; Dahl v. Nelson, Donkin (1881), 6 Asp. Cas. 38; Inchbold v. Western Neigherry Coffee, etc., Co. (1864), 17 C. B. N. S. 733; Burchell v. Gourie & Blackhouse Col-

1793. Introduction by agent must be effective cause.—Deft. employed pltf. to find a purchaser or mtgee. of an estate. Pltf. went down to the estate, valued it, put it on their books, advertised it in their circulars & in newspapers, & took some journeys, had communications about it, & ultimately, while negotiating with N. upon the matter, pltf. & deft. agreed that a letter should be written by pltf. to N., & if such letter induced N. to become purchaser or mtgee. pltf. should be paid £100. N. ultimately became mtgee., but denied that he was influenced in any way by the letter:—Held: pltf. could not recover on a quantum meruit on the common counts for work & labour, etc., with particulars claiming commission as agreed. Semble: they could not recover at all.—GREEN v. MULES (1861), 30 L. J. C. P. 343.

1794. Parties found by agent must remain willing to complete.—A co. employed mtge. brokers to obtain a loan, agreeing to pay a certain commission per cent. The brokers introduced persons willing to lend, but, a petition to wind up the co. having been presented, the intending mtgees. refused to complete:—Held: the brokers could neither rank as creditors for the commission in the winding up of the co. nor recover damages on a quantum meruit.

The procuring a person willing to negotiate about the matter is not sufficient. The readiness & willingness required must be a continued readiness & willingness to go on with the loan according to the usual course of business in such a transaction. Where a broker obtains a contract from his principal, the matter stands on a different footing. If the appets. in the present case had obtained a contract from the intending mtgees. to advance the money, & the matter had afterwards not been completed by reason of defects in the title of the co. to the property, it may well be that the commission would have been earned (CHITTY, J.).—Re SOVEREIGN LIFE ASSURANCE CO., SALTER'S CLAIM (1891), 7 T. L. R. 602.

1795. Shipbroker not entitled—Unless contract completed.—Semble: by the usage of trade, a shipbroker is not entitled to charge a shipowner for his trouble in procuring a charterer for the ship, where the contract is not completed, though it be broken off by the owner.—BROAD v. THOMAS (1830), 7 Bing. 90; 4 C. & P. 338; 4 Moo. & P. 732; 9 L. J. O. S. C. P. 32; 131 E. R. 38.

1796. ———.—A broker who is employed by a shipowner to procure the effecting of a charterparty, & who procures a person to treat, but with whom ultimately no charterparty is effected, is not entitled to his commission, although the treaty has gone off in consequence of the unusual & unreasonable demands made by the shipowner upon the proposed charter. Semble: he is not entitled to any compensation for his work & labour on a quantum meruit, the usage of the trade being against it.—READ v. RANN (1830), 10 B. & C. 438; L. & Welsb. 121; 8 L. J. O. S. K. B. 144; 109 E. R. 513.

1797. ———.—A broker cannot recover on a quantum meruit for the sale of a ship unless the contract be signed by vendor & purchaser & the sale in all other respects be complete.—MEESON v. OLIVER (1854), 23 L. T. O. S. 271.

1798. ———.—A shipbroker is only entitled to commission upon a charterparty where he has substantially procured the charter; & he cannot recover commission as upon a quantum meruit for his endeavours to procure the charter.—COUSINS v. MITCHESON, No. 1696, ante.

1799. ———.—DALTON v. IRVIN, No. 1926, post.

1800. Gross sum payable under charter—Part contingent on arrival home of ship.—A broker who procures a charterparty for a vessel to Rio Janeiro, where a gross sum is to be paid for the voyage out & home, is entitled on a quantum meruit to 5 per cent. on the gross sum, although the payment of part be contingent on the arrival of the vessel home.—ROBERTS v. JACKSON (1817), 2 Stark. 225.

1801. Compensation not contingent on freight being earned.—The actual earning of freight under a charterparty is not a condition precedent to the right of the shipbroker to his commission for procuring the execution of the charter. A., a shipbroker, procured a charterparty to be made between B., a shipowner, & C., under which the owner contracted to bring home a cargo of guano & the merchant agreed to pay freight at the rate of £4 15s. per ton, 1792 ii. ———.—Pltf. claimed from deft. their expenses & compensation for endeavouring to sell a coal mine for the latter. Pltf. failed to effect a sale, but their action was based on an alleged collateral & verbal agreement to pay expenses in case of no sale. The jury found, "In view of concessions made subsequently, we believe there was a promise of fair treatment in case of no sale," & judgment was entered for pltf.:—Held: the real issue, whether there was a collateral agreement or not, was plain & square, & the jury were bound to find one way or the other, & there must be a new trial.—LOWENBERG, HARRIS & Co. v. DUNSMUIR (1903), 34 S. C. R. 228; 9 B. C. R. 303.—CAN.

1792 iii. ———.—Pltf. being employed by deft. to procure offers for the purchase or exchange of certain property, introduced R., who made an offer of exchange which included lands of which S. was the owner. Deft. made a counter-offer, to which pltf. signed a conditional acceptance on behalf of R. Deft. being pressed for money, however, arranged with S. to exchange some of his lands for those of S. included in R.'s offer. Later R. ratified pltf.'s conditional acceptance of deft.'s counter-proposal, but by arrangement between the parties this proposal was abandoned, & the agreement between deft. & S. carried through. Later deft. & R. exchanged some of the properties under a separate agreement. In an action by pltf. for commission:—Held: (1) R. was never in a position to convey to deft. the lands of S. included in his offer, & the negotiations between R. & deft. never amounted to a binding contract, deft.'s offer to S. having put an end to deft.'s counter-offer to R., & the subsequent exchange which took place between deft. & R. was not promoted by pltf.; (2) pltf. was not entitled to commission nor to a quantum meruit.—Benningfield v. Kynaston, 3 T. L. R. 279; Green v. Bartlett, 14 C. B. N. S. 681; Prickett v. Badger, 1 C. B. N. S. 296; Stimpson v. Lamb, 17 C. B. 603, cited.—CULVERWELL v. BIRNEY (1887), 14 A. 1793 i. Introduction by agent must be effective cause.—Defts. employed pltf. to sell their concern on certain terms. Pltf. prepared an agreement on those terms, which defts. & the purchasers executed, & a memorandum was drawn up fixing pltf.'s commission. The purchasers ultimately refused to complete on the ground of misrepresentation as to deft.'s assets, & defts. were advised they could not enforce the agreement:—Held: pltf. entitled to p. Part performance by agent.—Pltf., real estate agents, made an agreement with deft. by which they undertook to subdivide certain land for him & to sell it, pltf. to have a commission for making sales, drawing agreements, making all collections, & generally looking after the property. Pltf. made no sales nor collections, but they drew agreements, & had a survey & plan of the property made, which met with the approval of deft.:—Held: pltf. were not entitled to the commission of 15 per cent., but were entitled to be paid for their services as upon a quantum meruit.—McMILLAN v. BARRATT (1911), 16 W. L. R. 209.—CAN.

to be reduced to £4 12s. 6d. if the ship did not arrive off Cork or Falmouth on or before a given day. There was no express engagement on the part of C. to ship a cargo:—Held: (1) A. was entitled to recover from B. upon a quantum meruit for his work & labour in procuring the charter to be executed, without showing the arrival of the vessel on or before the day mentioned, & notwithstanding only a very small quantity of guano had been shipped, & a small amount of freight actually earned, the amount of compensation due to him was a question for the jury; (2) in estimating such compensation, they were properly guided by evidence of what was customary in similar cases.—HILL v. KITCHING (1846), 3 C. B. 299; 15 L. J. C. P. 251; 9 L. T. O. S. 257; 136 E. R. 120.

F. Remuneration payable out of Proceeds of Transaction.

1802. Purchaser's failure to complete—Contract rescinded by vendor.—[Pltf., an auctioneer, was employed by deft., owner of an estate, to find a purchaser on the terms of receiving "the usual commission out of the purchase-money." Pltf. introduced a purchaser who signed the contract & paid a deposit. Ultimately the purchaser failed to complete & the contract was rescinded, the deposit being forfeited. Deft. offered to pay commission on the deposit:—Held: pltf. was not entitled to any further commission, since by the express terms of the contract he was only to receive commission out of the purchase-money, & no purchase-money had been received.—BENINGFIELD v. KYNASTON (1887), 3 T. L. R. 279, C. A.

1803. — [—]—The owner of certain houses, who was desirous of selling, made an agreement with an agent in the following terms: "I agree to accept £1,150 for the above property, & you are to be at liberty to receive anything over & above that as a commission, it being understood that I am to receive the full sum of £1,150 without deduction." The agent found a purchaser who entered into a contract to purchase for £1,250, but the purchase was never completed owing to default of the purchaser:—Held: the agent not entitled to recover commission under the agreement.

This is a very special contract, by which pltf. made a special bargain with deft. & not a bargain to pay commission in the ordinary way. Pltf. did not intend to pay anything; deft. was not to be paid by pltf. at all, but was to take any difference above £1,150 which might be actually received by pltf. (A. L. SMITH, M.R.).—BEALE v. BOND (1901), 84 L. T. 313; 17 T. L. R. 286, C. A.; revg. S. C. (1900), 16 T. L. R. 311.

1804. Theatrical agent—No money received through default of principal.—[Where pltf. procured for defts. engagements at certain music-halls on the terms of being paid 10 per cent. commission on all money received thereon, but defts. failed to appear, in consequence of which no money was ever received by defts. on such engagements:—Held: (1) the commission was not payable on the procuring of engagements by pltf.; (2) the commission was only payable when money became due under the engagements.—DIDCOTT v. FRIESNER (1895), 11 T. L. R. 187, C. A.

1805. — [—]—An agreement was made in Aug., 1914, between pltf. & deft., by which deft., a music-hall artist, in consideration of pltf. having procured for her an engagement with a co. in Australia, agreed to pay pltf. a commission on the salary accruing from the engagement. The agreement provided that should the engagement not be fulfilled owing to default on deft.'s part other than certified illness the commission should be payable as if the engagement had been fulfilled. Deft. became unwilling to undertake the voyage to Australia owing to the risk of danger from enemy

PART VIII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.—F.

1802 I. Purchaser's failure to complete.—[Pltf. procured F. to make an offer for deft.'s property, which offer deft. accepted. The offer contained the stipulation "agent's commission to be paid out of & form part of the purchase-money at 2½ per cent." Later F. refused to complete:—Held: as no purchase-money had been paid, pltf. could not recover any commission.—ROBINSON v. REYNOLDS (1912), 23 O. W. R. 144; 4 O. W. N. 112; 6 D. L. R. 855.—CAN.

I. Agent to sell at net price.—[Where an owner lists land for sale with an agent at a price net to him, he does not thereby agree to pay any commission to the agent except out of the excess of the purchase-money over & above the stipulated net price.—CHAPPELL v. PETERS, No. 1706 lx., ante.

V. Commission payable out of surplus price.—[When it is agreed between an owner of land & a real estate agent that the latter's commission will be the surplus above a determined sale price, payable from out of the first moneys received thereon, the agent has no claim upon the owner if the purchaser fails to discharge the conditions of the sale.—PETIT v. LUSIER (1913), Q. R. 46 S. C. 195.—CAN.

W. — [—]—A. owner of a leasehold interest in an hotel, gave pltf. a letter agreeing, in the event of pltf. selling his interest, to sell for $30,000 net, $20,000 cash, balance in one & two years, & 6 per cent. interest, anything over & above to be pltf.'s commission:

—Held: A. entitled to his $30,000 first out of the purchase-money & without any deduction, & pltf. only entitled to the last of the purchase-money after A. had received his $30,000 out of it. Mangles v. Diron (1852), 5 H. L. Cas. 702; Tailly v. Official Receiver (1880), 13 App. Cas. 4; Saffron Walden Second Benefl. Bldg. Soc. v. Haynes (1880), 14 Ch. D. 406, cited.—*CHALMERS v. X. — [—]—A real estate agent cannot claim a commission for selling lots under a contract whereby his commission was to be paid if there was a surplus over & above a certain sum, unless he proves the existence of such surplus.—SIMARD v. DUBORD (1916), Q. R. 26 K. B. 81.—CAN.

Y. Commission payable out of money actually received—Form of payment.—[Deft. entered into a commission agreement with pltf. whereby, if deft. closed a contract with M. for the sale of deft.'s secret process for manufacture of steel, pltf. was to be paid 10 per cent. as & when the consideration for the sale was received by deft. Negotiations with M. fell through, but ultimately deft. sold the process to W., an associate of M., for $5,000,000, to be paid partly in cash & partly in stock, & pltf. claimed 10 per cent. upon that sum:—Held: (1) pltf. entitled to 10 per cent. on the amount paid on account of the purchase-money & the delivery of 10 per cent. of the amount of shares issued to deft. in part payment; (2) the case was not one for a declaratory judgment, & the question as to pltf.'s right to commission being established, the matter would be res judicata in any action pltf. might thereafter bring for recovery of any further commission payable to him. Bright v. Tindall (1876), 1 Ch. D. 189; Keane v. Crawford (1877), 6 Ch. D. 29; Honour v. Equitable Life Assce. Soc. of U.S. (1900) 1 Ch. 852, cited.—STEWART v. HENDERSON (1914), 30 O. L. R. 447; 19 D. L. R. 387; 5 O. W. N. 737.—CAN.

Z. Commission payable out of gross receipts—Further commission out of net profits—Mode of calculation.—[Pltf. agreed with defts. for a sole agency in the United States in these terms: "D. Brothers to receive as compensation 25 per cent. of the gross premiums received by them, less return premiums & rebates, & an additional 15 per cent. on the annual net profits arrived at by deducting from the gross premiums all return premiums, rebates, losses & loss expenses paid, & all commission (including profit commission), & any other allowances paid to D. Brothers."—Held: the parties contemplated an annual adjustment of pltf.'s remuneration & an annual ascertainment of the net profits upon which the 15 per cent. was to be allowed, i.e., the amount of the net profits upon which the 15 per cent. was to be paid should be ascertained by deducting from the gross premiums the rebates & losses paid during the year.—DOUGLAS BROTHERS v. ACADIA FIRE INSURANCE CO. (1913), 13 E. L. R. 157; 12 D. L. R. 419.—CAN.

A. Commission payable out of net profits—Mode of calculation.—[Where an agent was entitled to "50 per cent. of the net profits of all sales":—Held: in ascertaining what the "net profits" were a just proportion of overhead charges of the business should be allocated to the quantum of business done in which the agent was to participate.—WHYTE v. McTAGGART (1915), 31 W. L. R. 654; 22 D. L. R. 8.—CAN.

submarines, & arranged with the co. in Australia that her engagement should be postponed, *pltf.*s. not being parties to this arrangement. In an action to recover (inter alia) commission:—Held: the agreement to postpone the engagement was not a default on deft.'s part; but even if there was default on her part, *pltf.*s. could not recover commission, as at the time the action was brought no salary had accrued.—FOSTER'S AGENCY, LTD. v. ROMAINE (1916), 32 T. L. R. 545, C. A.

G. Where Time Limit has been placed for Completion of Transaction.

1806. Agent for sale "at any future date"—Commission on valuation—Purchaser not found within reasonable time.—Deft. agreed in Feb., 1883, to pay pltf. a commission on the valuation to be made on the stock-in-trade of his public-house upon his sub-letting it "at any future date." Pltf. advertised the business, but failed to find a purchaser for it. In Sept., 1884, deft. offered to pay pltf. for the advertisements, & instructed him to discontinue them. In Nov., 1884, deft. sold his business but did not employ pltf. to make the valuation. In an action by pltf. for the amount of his commission the cty. ct. judge held that by Nov., 1884, a reasonable time during which pltf. would have been entitled to his commission had elapsed, & gave judgment for deft. On a motion for a new trial:—Held: (1) the question of such reasonable time was one of fact; (2) the decision of the cty. ct. judge upon it was final.—HOUGHTON v. ORGAR (1885), 1 T. L. R. 653.

PART VIII. SECT. 3, SUB SECT. 1.—G.

1808 i. Property not sold by specified date.—An agent to effect a sale of property at a price by a fixed date on certain terms negotiated with the co-operation of his principal with an organisation in course of formation, which, however, never came into being, & without his assistance after the date the principal sold to another institution.—Held: the agent was not a general but a special agent, i.e., to make a sale at a price by a fixed date, & after that date, the agent not having performed his part of the contract, the principal was not liable to him.—COUNSELL v. DEYNE (1911), 16 W. L. R. 675, Man. L. R.—CAN.

1808 ii.—Defts. placed their property for sale with *pltf.*s., real estate agents, upon an exclusive agency limited time. *Pltf.*s. failed to find a purchaser within the stipulated time, but a party who had been negotiating with them subsequently induced a third party to go in with him & become purchaser jointly with him:—Held: no purchaser having been found by the stipulated time, *pltf.*s. were not entitled to commission.—SIBBITT v. CARSON (1912), 27 O. L. R. 237; 4 O. W. N. 114; 8 D. L. R. 791.—CAN.

1808 iii.—Where property is not sold within the time stipulated in a contract between the owner & a real estate agent, but is eventually sold, the agent has the right to recover the customary commission. It would have been otherwise if the property had been sold by another agent, though to a purchaser with whom the first agent had had dealings.—HOUSE OF BROWNE, LTD. v. MAJOR MANUFACTURING CO. (1915), Q. R. 24 K. B. 270.—CAN.

1808 iv.—An agent who has an authority from his principal to find a buyer for a property at a specified price, & within a certain time, for an agreed remuneration, is not entitled to general commission, as upon a quantum meruit, upon a subsequent sale by the principal at a lower price, although to a buyer introduced by the agent in the first instance.—CHAFFLE v. FAGAN (1909), 11 W. A. R. 78.—AUS.

1807. Option reserved by principal.—*Pltf.*s. were employed to find a tenant or purchaser of deft.'s premises, & deft. agreed to pay them £400 if they found a suitable tenant or purchaser or if deft. decided to rebuild himself. The agreement further provided that deft. was to decide whether to sell or rebuild within 3 months. Deft. did not sell the premises, & did not begin to rebuild them until after the 3 months had expired:—Held: *pltf.*s. were entitled to recover the agreed commission.—DEBENHAM v. CHAMBERS (1895), 12 T. L. R. 24.

1808. Property not sold by specified date.—*Pltf.*s. were employed by deft. to find a purchaser of his leasehold interest in a house, deft. offering to pay them double commission if they found him a purchaser by the following May. *Pltf.*s. introduced A. who made an offer in Mar., which deft. refused. In Apr. the house was mentioned by another firm of agents to A., who did not inform them of the previous negotiations, & this firm submitted a second offer from A. to deft. This offer was repeated in June, when it was accepted. *Pltf.*s. claimed to be entitled to double commission on the sale:—Held: (1) *pltf.*s. were entitled to ordinary commission on the sale, as they had introduced the person who ultimately became the purchaser; (2) *pltf.*s. were not entitled to double commission since they had not performed the terms of the special offer under which it was payable.—GIDDY & GIDDY v. RUSSELL (EARL) (1904), 48 Sol. Jo. 415, C. A.

1809. Offer & acceptance not made by specified date.—Defts., mitgees. of an estate, agreed to pay to pltf. a commission of 3 per cent. on the pur-

1808 v.—Purchaser found within time—Transaction completed later.—In an agreement between the owner & an agent for the sale of a business for a commission to be paid out of the first money received after completion of the bargain, a covenant that "the right (exclusive) is given for eight days" does not mean that the sale must be effected, but that a purchaser must be found, within that time. So if the agent within two or three days finds the purchaser who afterwards buys, he is entitled to his commission, though the principal parties only meet & perfect the transaction after the expiration of the delay.—MASCHOTTE v. LAVVIE (1911), Q. R. 40 S. C. 258.—CAN.

1808 vi.—Sold by principal after period but before required notice given to agent.—A. engaged B., a real estate broker, to sell his property at a fixed price in consideration of a commission of 2½ per cent. within three months, or afterwards, as long as he is not notified to the contrary in writing, & was brought into contact with a purchaser through the efforts of B. within such time. A. sold his property to such purchaser for a price less than that he had agreed upon with B., & after the expiry of the three months, but without notification in writing to B.:—Held: A. indebted to B. for his commission upon the price of the sale at the rate contracted for.—LEGENE v. FISHAULT (1914), Q. R. 45 S. C. 182.—CAN.

1808 vii.—Correspondence amounting to new contract.—Deft. appointed *pltf.*s. his sole agents for the sale of his land, & agreed that "this sole right of sale shall extend for a period of four months from this date, or until such time thereafter as this contract is terminated." *Pltf.*s. did not sell the property nor find a purchaser, but deft. sold it himself ten months after the date of the writing, & *pltf.*s. claimed commission on this sale. After the four months had expired, but before the sale made by deft., letters passed between *pltf.*s. & deft., in which *pltf.*s. were authorised to sell the place at a higher price, if they had a buyer, but they did not produce one:—Held: the contract under which *pltf.*s. claimed, if it could be considered as

b. Option to purchase—Purchaser found within time.—Deft., in consideration of $1, gave pltf. an option on land at a price & on terms named, & to pay him $1,000, "to be taken out of second payment as commission, provided sale is made not later than Jan. 25, 1912, on which date this option expires at 1 o'clock." Pltf. sold on Jan. 25 on the terms named, & deft. received a wire to that effect at 1 p.m.:—Held: the option expired at 6 p.m. on that day, & pltf. entitled to commission, $1,000, as he sold within the time limit to a person able & willing to buy.—BOOKER v. O'BRIEN (1913), 24 W. L. R. 899; 4 W. W. R. 79; 9 D. L. R. 801.—CAN.

c.—Pltf., a real estate agent, sued to recover commission for securing a purchaser. He secured a prospective purchaser within the time limit, but the option was not exercised within the limit:—Held: pltf. entitled to recover. Keen v. Priest (1858), 1 F. & F. 314; Richards v. Gellaly (1872), L. R. 7 C. P. 127; Weidman v. Walpole, [1891] 2 Q. B. 534, cited.—MEIKLE v. McRAE (1911), 20 O. W. R. 308; 3 O. W. N. 206.—CAN.

d. Debentures not placed by specified date.—Where a broker was employed to float a loan for a co. by debentures being placed in his hands "for disposal for three months from this date, . . . your commission . . . to be 1½ per cent. by whomsoever sold, . . . but it is also understood that, should the whole of the debentures, viz., £30,000, not be disposed of at this time by tender, no commission to accrue until they are sold," & he obtained within the time tenders for only £20,000, which were not accepted by the co., & the loan was withdrawn:—Held: the broker was not entitled to any commission.—WELCH v. SOUTH MELBOURNE GAS CO. (1877), 3 V. L. R. L. 352.—AUS.

chase-money of the estate, with an additional 2 per cent. in the event of the purchase being completed by a certain date. It was agreed that the purchase would be considered completed if a definite offer & acceptance were made. Before the specified date a memorandum of agreement between the intending purchaser & defts. was signed, by which the former undertook to send professional persons to verify the particulars of the property, & provided he received a satisfactory report, he undertook to enter into a formal contract for the purchase of the estate for a named sum. The contract for the purchase was not signed until some time after the specified date. In an action to recover the 2 per cent. commission:—Held: as the memorandum of agreement contemplated a formal contract, the terms of which would require settlement, there was no definite offer & acceptance made on or before the specified date; (2) the 2 per cent. commission was not payable.—HENRY v. GREGORY (1905), 22 T. L. R. 53.

II. Right to Extra Remuneration.

1810. Whether acts done were included in duties as agent.—A. acted under a written agreement as the commission agent of B. in the sale of goods, & was paid a commission. B. was a contractor with the Admiralty for the supply of a variety of articles, on the sale of which A. was paid commission, & A. attended on a number of occasions at Somerset House, where the patterns of these articles were inspected by Govt. officers. A. sought to charge B. for these attendances in addition to his commission:—Held: (1) if, in giving these attendances, A. was only acting in the discharge of his business as an agent, he was not entitled to charge for the attendances; (2) if these attendances were matter beyond his duty as an agent, he was entitled to be paid for them separately; (3) this was a question for the jury.—MARSHALL v. PARSONS (1841), 9 C. & P. 660.

Annotation:—Refd. Young v. Naval, Military & Civil Service Co op. Soc. of South Africa, [1905] 1 K. B. 687.

1811.—]—A paid agent is bound to discharge all those duties, multifarious or otherwise, & onerous or otherwise, which the terms of that agency cover. He must make his own bargain with his principal, & it is his duty to do all that that bargain entails & to be content with his remuneration. If he is called upon to do anything outside the terms of his agency, he is entitled to make a special bargain, or he can decline to do it unless he is remunerated on a special footing; or he may do the work, & provided everything is fair & above board, he probably would be allowed a fair remuneration according to some recognised measurement of the value. But if he does anything within the terms of his agency, however uncompensated it may seem to him personally, he can neither charge for it in his account nor can he secretly take any commission for it (KEKEWICH, J.).—WILLIAMSON v. HINE, No. 1582, ante.

K. Remuneration in Case of Revocation of Authority.

1812. House agent—Principal's right to revoke authority.—Where a house agent is employed to find a purchaser, the principal may revoke the agent's authority at any time before the agent has found a purchaser, & in that case the agent is not entitled to remuneration for his endeavours to find a purchaser (WILLIAMS & CROWDER, JJ.).—PRICKETT v. BADGER, No. 1751, ante.

PART VIII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1. H.

1810 I. Whether acts done were included in duties as agent.—Pltf. was employed by defts. as their agent to purchase upon his own credit, but for them, an electric crane. Pltf. made the purchase upon certain terms, & defts. agreed to the terms & paid over to pltf., for transmission by him to the vendors, one-third of the price. The crane was delivered, ready for shipment, when the vendors demanded the other two-thirds before delivery of the bill of lading. Pltf. asked defts. for this sum, but they did not send it, & pltf. paid it out of his own funds. There was a great deal of correspondence, pltf. asking for a refund of the moneys he had paid, interest, commission, disbursements, etc., & defts. objecting to some of the items of pltf.'s account. In an action by pltf., defts. paid into ct. a sum sufficient to cover what pltf. had paid for the crane & a commission of 2½ per cent. on the purchase price, but no more:—Held: pltf. was entitled to 2½ per cent. commission only, the rate at which pltf.'s claim was at first made, but which he changed to 10 per cent. shortly before action because he felt that he had extra trouble for which he should be compensated.—JOHNSTON v. CANADIAN KILNDIKE MINING Co., 19 W. L. R. 60.—CAN.

1810 II.—]—A factor received a fixed salary named in his factory, & for thirty years included in his accounts such salary without any other claim being made. On a claim for remuneration for services unconnected with his factory:—Held: he had no legal claim to such remuneration.—ROSE v. FIFE (EARL) (1806), 5 Pat. 115.—SCOT.

1810 III.—]—A factor obtained payment on a quantum meruit for services performed by him which he averred did not fall within his contract of employment as factor:—Held: there was no cause of action, pltf. having failed to make such definite averment of his duties as would exclude from scope of those duties the extra services for which remuneration was claimed.—MACKENZIE v. BAIRD'S TRUSTEES, [1907] S. C. 838.—SCOT.

6. Customary extra remuneration excluded by terms of agreement.—An agent appointed to carry out a business for his principal under a written agreement, which provides for his remuneration by the payment of a stated sum & commission on sales, is not entitled to commission on the acceptance & payment of drafts, usually charged by agents, but not mentioned in the agreement.—McPHERSON v. BRICE (1907), Q. R. 31 S. C. 218.—CAN.

PART VIII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.—K.

1. Agent to sell property—Principal's right to revoke authority.—A. authorised B. to find a purchaser for his property. B. tried to induce G. to buy, but the negotiations fell through, & A. revoked B.'s authority to sell before G.'s name was mentioned to him. A. afterwards entered into an agreement to sell to F., not knowing at the time that F. was buying for G.; afterwards F. assigned his right to G., & thereupon A. conveyed the property to G.:—Held: in the absence of any scheme to deprive B. of his commission, he was not entitled to any.—HUNTER v. HUNNELL (1906), 3 W. L. R. 229.—CAN.

h.—]—Pltf. was agent to procure a purchaser for deft.'s land at $6,000, anything over to be his commission. A few days after the property was listed deft. said he must have $6,000 net; on that day pltf. was negotiating with a purchaser, to whom deft. eventually sold for $6,000, pltf. meantime having altered his listed price to $6,500:—Held: pltf. not entitled to commission or remuneration, his authority being withdrawn before he found a purchaser.—HOLMES v. LEE HO & LOY POY (1911), 17 W. L. R. 428; 16 B. C. R. 66.—CAN.

k.—]—In an action by real estate agents for commission:—Held: the agency had come to an end before they introduced a purchaser to deft., & sufficient weight had not been given to the insertion of an advertisement in a newspaper in which pltf. claimed to be exclusive agents one day previous to the time they claimed their agency to have commenced.—CURRIE & STERRY v. HOSKIN (1912), 23 O. W. R. 676; 4 O. W. N. 492; 9 D. L. R. 514.—CAN.

l.—]—Deft. requested pltf. to sell for him a plot at any rate exceeding the price at which deft. himself had purchased it, & agreed to give him as remuneration half of the net profit realised on the sale. Deft. subsequently revoked this authority, & pltf. shortly afterwards found a purchaser, whose offer deft. did not accept:—Held: pltf. could not recover on the agreement, which had not been performed on his part, & there was no ground for holding that pltf. & deft. were partners in the transaction as between themselves.—HURST v. 1813. — Principal's implied right to sell himself.—Where the owner of property puts it in the hands of a house agent for sale upon commission, there is, in default of stipulations to the contrary in the contract between the parties, an implied term that the owner shall be at liberty to sell the house himself or to employ other agents, & if a sale takes place by such means pltf. is not entitled to commission, although he has found a person prepared to purchase.—BRINSON v. DAVIES (1911), 105 L. T. 134; 27 T. L. R. 442; 55 Sol. Jo. 501.

1814. General agent—Revocation of authority—No remuneration for subsequent services.—In Aug., 1853, deft. purchased certain mtge. debts & legacies charged on an estate in Jamaica, & on the 16th executed a power of attorney authorising pltf., a merchant in Jamaica, to act for him in all matters, & wrote to him, directing him to foreclose the mtge. & take possession. The extrix. of B., who had been manager for the parties whose interest deft. had purchased, was then in possession of the estate, & claimed a large sum as salary due to & advances made by her husband. After some negotiation pltf. agreed to pay her a sum of £844, & then got possession of the estate. On receiving information of this deft. at once repudiated the transaction, & on Feb. 16, 1854, wrote to pltf., removing him from the agency, & on the same day executed a revocation of the power of attorney, which reached pltf. on Mar. 8. Pltf. continued in possession, & expended money for the purposes of the estate up to Aug. 15, 1854, when he surrendered possession to C., to whom deft. had sold his interest. Pltf. claimed to be entitled to recover for his services between Mar. 9 & Aug. 14:—Held: (1) pltf. had no right to interfere after Mar. 8, when his power was revoked; (2) pltf. not entitled to recover.—KITCHEN v. QUILTER (1859), 32 L. T. O. S. 261, Ex. Ch.

1815. Agent to procure loan—Variation of authority—Acquiescence by agent—Lender procured on original terms.—Deft. employed pltf. to negotiate a loan on some of deft.'s property, pltf. to be paid commission if he procured the loan, but none if he did not. Before pltf. had done anything in the matter deft. wrote to him, varying the terms on which he would accept the loan. Pltf. endeavoured to obtain it on the latter terms, but failing to do so obtained an offer for a loan on the terms of the first authority, which deft. refused to accept:—Held: (1) as the first authority had been revoked, pltf. was not entitled to commission for what he had done; (2) pltf. was not entitled to claim for his services in endeavouring to procure the loan under the substituted terms, inasmuch as he did not obtain it under those terms; 3) pltf. might have treated the revocation of the first terms of his employment as a breach of contract & have had his action thereon against deft.—TOPPIN v. HEALEY (1863), 1 New Rep. 326; 11 W. R. 466.

1816. Sale after death of principal.—A. agreed with B. that he would endeavour to sell a picture belonging to B., & if he succeeded in selling same, B. should pay him £100. B. died before the picture was sold. In an action against the administratrix of B., upon the above agreement, the count alleged that in pursuance of the agreement A. did, before & after the death of B., endeavour to sell, & after the death of B. he did succeed in selling, the picture, "which sale was confirmed by deft. as administratrix as aforesaid" & she refused to pay the £100:—Held: the count disclosed no cause of action, as the authority from B. to A. to sell the picture was revoked by B.'s death, & deft.'s confirmation of the sale, in the absence of an allegation that she was aware of the existence of the contract between A. & B., was no adoption of the contract by her so as to make her liable to pay the £100.—CAMPANARI v. WOODBURN (1854), 15 C. B. 400; 24 L. J. C. P. 13; 24 L. T. O. S. 95; 1 Jur. N. S. 17; 3 W. R. 59; 3 C. L. R. 140; 139 E. R. 480.

1817. Sale after bankruptcy of principal.—A debtor had employed an estate agent to sell certain property, & on Jan. 7 the agent introduced to debtor a person willing to purchase. No agreement was arrived at between debtor & the person introduced. The debtor filed his petition, after which negotiations were resumed between debtor's trustee in bkpcy. & the person introduced by the agent, which resulted on Jan. 24 in a sale. The agent's proof for his commission having been rejected by the trustee:—Held: (1) the sale was attributable to the introduction by the agent; (2) the proof for commission must be allowed.—Re BEALE, Ex p. DUFF (1892), 1 S. 256.—CAN.

n. Purchaser found before authority revoked.—An agent employed to effect a sale has no claim on his principal in consequence of revocation of the agent's authority before a sale is effected unless he has, before the revocation, found a person ready & willing to purchase on the terms fixed by the principal.—HINCHEY v. KEAM (1901), 20 N. Z. R. 478.—N.Z.

o. — Contract signed after revocation.—Deft. agreed with pltf., land agents, that they should procure a purchaser of land for $15,000 before the end of Sept. & to leave it in their hands for that time & pay them the regular commission. Pltf. spent time & money in advertising, but on Sept. 27 deft. revoked the authority, after pltf. had found M. ready & willing to purchase, but M. had not at that time definitely agreed to buy. M. subsequently, on the day of revocation, definitely agreed to buy & paid pltf. a deposit:—Held: pltf. entitled to half-commission by way of quantum meruit.—ALDOUS v. GRUNDY (1911), 20 W. L. R. 550; 21 Man. L. R. 559.—CAN.

q. Work done after revocation of authority on orders previously obtained.—A contract for agency terminable on notice provided that commission should be paid for work done on amount of orders, & on termination the agent to receive such commission as should have been earned:—Held: the agent not entitled to commission for work for which he had obtained the order, but which was not done until after the agency had been determined.—HULTON v. HELLIWELL, [1891] 2 L. R. 94.—IR.

r. Authority revoked by agent's misstatement — Subsequent purchase of shares.—A broker, employed by his principal to purchase shares, informed him, contrary to the fact, that he had purchased such shares in accordance with his instructions. He did not buy till two days later, & then purchased for forward delivery. In an action by the broker to recover commission:—Held: the representation that he had bought put an end to his authority, & the principal was not bound by the subsequent purchase.—*SAMPEL v. having been dismissed from his employment, claimed to be entitled to a percentage on the premiums paid on insurances obtained by him, notwithstanding his dismissal, & to a percentage on similar premiums obtained by local agents whom he had appointed:—Held: as deft. was entitled to receive his percentage when he accounted, when the duty to account ceased the right to the percentage ceased also.—TIMES LIFE ASSURANCE & GUARANTEE CO. v. SWANN (1854), 23 L. T. O. S. 114.

1819. No commission on subsequent orders—Unless so provided.—On a contract to pay a traveller by commission, there is not, in the absence of an express & clear stipulation, any obligation to pay the commission on orders from customers originally obtained by the agent, but sent after he has ceased to be so.—NAYLER v. YEARSLEY (1860), 2 F. & F. 41.

1820. Orders by customers "arising from your introduction."—Pltf. was employed by defts. on the terms of receiving commission "upon all orders executed by us & paid for by customers arising from your introduction." Pltf. having been dismissed:—Held: pltf.'s right to commission continued, notwithstanding his dismissal.—BILBEE v. HASSE & CO. (1889), 5 T. L. R. 677.

1821. Advertising Agent—Renewals—Construction of contract.—By a contract with an advertising agent contained in letters, the agent was to be paid commission both on initial orders & on renewals. Pltf. having been dismissed:—Held: pltf. not entitled to commission on renewals subsequent to his dismissal.—HOYD v. MATHERS & SOUTH AFRICA, LTD. (1893), 9 T. L. R. 443, C. A.

1822. Continuing advertisements—Alleged usage.—The engagement of an advertising agent, who received a commission on all advertisements obtained by him, having been terminated, the agent claimed, by usage, commission on all advertisements obtained by him which were inserted, after his engagement had terminated, "until countermanded," & on all advertisements obtained by him which were renewed with less than a break of 12 months:—Held: the usage had not been proved.—BETTANY v. EASTERN MORNING & HULL NEWS CO. (1900), 16 T. L. R. 401.

1823.—Pltf. was employed by defts. to obtain advertisements for their newspapers, commission being payable on all advertisements ordered by advertisers introduced by him, & on all renewal orders of such advertisements within two years of the previous order, whether sent through pltf. or direct. Defts., having dismissed pltf., claimed that their liability to pay commission came to an end, & relied inter alia upon an alleged usage of the newspaper trade:—Held: (1) no usage as to the payment of commission on renewals was established; (2) the terms relating to the payment of commission applied only to the period during which pltf. was employed by deft.; (3) on the termination of employment his right to commission ceased.—GERAHTY v. BAINES & CO. (1903), 19 T. L. R. 554.

1824. Implied right to future commission question of fact.—Pltf. was employed as commercial traveller by defts. on the terms contained in a letter that he was to be allowed commission on all orders received from certain named firms, & "on any fresh ones you can introduce." It was left to the jury to say if it was an implied term in the contract that pltf.'s right to commission should continue after dismissal on all orders accepted from customers introduced by him, whether named in the list or not.—MORRIS v. HUNT & CO. (1896), 12 T. L. R. 187.

Annotation.—Consd. & Distd. Levy v. Goldhill, [1917] 2 Ch. 297.

1825. Duration of agency not fixed.—Pltf., a commercial traveller, was to receive 7½ per cent. on the net amount of cash payments on orders obtained through him & 7½ per cent. on all orders from customers introduced by him, whether such orders were obtained by him or not. In Feb., 1895, he received three months' notice of dismissal:—Held: no time limit being fixed for the duration of the commission, pltf. was entitled to commission on orders of customers introduced by him, given after his dismissal.—SALOMON v. BROWNFIELD & BROWNFIELD GUILD POTTERY SOCIETY, LTD. (1896), 12 T. L. R. 230.

1826. Commission payable on custom, not on customers.—An agreement between pltf. & defts., that defts. should pay pltf. a commission on all business done by defts. through orders obtained by pltf., was silent as to duration of employment & notice of termination:—Held: pltf. not entitled to be paid commission on business done by defts. after the engagement had been terminated.

By the terms of the agreement the commission is payable, not on customers, but on custom (PHILLIMORE, J.).—BARRETT v. GILMOUR & CO. (1901), 17 T. L. R. 292; 6 Com. Cas. 72.

1827. Agency terminable by mutual consent.—Pltf. was appointed sole agent in London for sale of defts.' goods, defts. agreeing to pay him a commission upon the value of all goods sold in London or to his customers. The agreement was terminable by mutual consent. The agreement having been determined by defts.:—Held: pltf. not entitled to commission on orders received & executed by defts. after the termination of the agreement from persons introduced by pltf.—KELLY v. CROFT (1898), 14 T. L. R. 543, C. A.

1828. Commission on orders direct or indirect—Orders subsequent to dismissal.—Pltf. was appointed agent of defts. for 12 months for the sale of lead manufactured by them upon the terms that he was to receive a commission of 2½ per cent. upon all sales, direct or indirect, effected to customers introduced by him. Pltf. continued to act after the 12 months, until dismissed. After the termination of pltf.'s employment he brought an action to terminate with the termination of the agency:—Held: this did not deprive pltf. of his commission on sales which had been completed before his agency was terminated, but only applied to pending or uncompleted sales.—BUCKWORTH v. NELSON & FORT SHEPARD TRV. CO. (1908), 9 W. L. R. 490.—CAN.

u. Agent to sell—Commission on orders taking "definite shape."—Defts. employed pltf. as sales agent by a written agreement, by which the agent was to receive "50 per cent. of the net profits of all sales" of a certain apparatns. The agreement also contained the following clause: "This agreement to be perpetual until either you or ourselves are dissatisfied, when all that will be necessary will be four weeks' notice to terminate same. All business in these lines that has assumed definite shape during the time you are with us & is eventually closed after you have left, you are to get credit for. By 'definite shape' we mean on what we have quoted definite prices." Pltf. had done a great deal of work to procure a large contract for defts., & prepared part of the figures upon which a tender for the contract was made by defts., to do the work at a certain definite price. In an action by pltf. for a share of the profits derived or to be derived from the contract entered into following defts.' tender, the trial judge having found as a fact that the hiring agreement was not terminated until a day later than the day the tender was made:—Held: pltf. was, under the agreement, entitled to share in the profits derivable from the contract.—WHYTE v. McTAGGART (1915), 31 W. L. R. 654; 22 D. L. R. 8.—CAN.

recover commission alleged to be due to him upon further orders given by customers originally introduced by him whilst in defts.' service:—Held: not entitled to such commission.—WEARE v. BRIMSDOWN LEAD CO. (1910), 103 L. T. 429.

Annotation:—Consd. & Expld. Levy v. Goldhill, [1917] 2 Ch. 297.

1829. Repeat orders by introduced customers—Express proviso.—Pltf. in the course of travelling for his own business obtained orders for other traders on terms of commission. Deft. agreed with pltf. as follows: "I agree to pay you half profits on receipt of orders (provided the customer is good). Same applies to repeats on any accounts introduced by you." Deft. subsequently terminated the relation constituted by the agreement without giving any notice:—Held: (1) there was no employment of pltf. by deft. in the strict sense, & deft. was entitled to terminate their relations without notice; (2) notwithstanding the termination of the relation, pltf. was entitled to commission on orders whenever received if they came from customers introduced by him. The measure of damages discussed.—LEVY v. GOLDHILL & CO., [1917] 2 Ch. 297; 86 L. J. Ch. 693; 117 L. T. 442; 33 T. L. R. 479; 61 Sol. Jo. 630.

(b) Agency terminated by Death of Agent.

1830. Commission on orders from customers introduced by agent—Principal continuing to do business with customers after agent's death.—Although a contract to introduce customers to a firm in consideration of the firm paying a commission on the orders obtained from such customers so long as the firm do business with them is determined on the death of the introducer, yet, if the firm continues to do business with these customers, they must still pay the commission in the same way as they would have to pay the commission if, after the determination of the contract in the lifetime of the introducer, they continued to do business with his customers.

Pltfs. were the exors. of W., deceased, who had agreed to introduce customers to defts. on the consideration that defts. should pay him a 5 per cent. commission on the moneys they received from such customers so long as defts. did business with them. After having introduced from time to time for a period of 16 years customers to defts. who duly paid him the commission agreed, W. died, & although defts. continued to execute orders from the customers he had introduced, they refused to pay to his estate the commission on such orders, on the ground that W.'s death had put an end to the agreement:—Held: (1) the contract was determined by the death of W., as the introduction of fresh customers under that agreement became impossible; (2) defts. must still pay the commission so long as they continued to do business with the customers the deceased had introduced, in the same way as they would have had to pay the commission if, after having determined the contract in the lifetime of W., they continued to do business with his customers.—*WILSON v. The agent died when the agreement had been in force over two years:—Held: his representative 1834. — Agent joining army.—Defts., a firm of drapers, appointed pltf. their representative for the Midlands, North of England, & Scotland. He was to have "a commission of 7½ per cent. on the net amount of trade done on these grounds direct or indirect." All accounts opened by him on the above grounds were to be retained by him as long as he continued to represent defts., but "should any alteration be made in representation on part of these grounds" pltf.'s consent in writing was to be obtained before relinquishing any particular accounts. The agreement was terminable by six months' notice on either side. On July 12 pltf. joined the army. Four days later he would have been compelled to join it by virtue of Military Service Act, 1916 (c. 104):—Held: (1) the agreement was subject to the implied term that it should cease to be binding if future performance became unlawful, & performance having become unlawful by virtue of Military Service Act, 1916, on July 12, or four days later, the agreement was then finally determined & not merely suspended; (2) pltf. was not entitled to commission upon trade done after the termination of his employment.—*MARSHALL v. 1838. Charterparty.—Contemplated violation of navigation laws.]—A commissioned B. to get a charterparty effected on his ship, Russian-built & British-owned. She was chartered to go to America, & take in there a cargo of permitted goods, rice & cotton being specified, & to sail therewith to Cadiz, Lisbon, or Gottenburg, as directed. By a previous agreement, it appeared to have been in the contemplation of the parties to carry the goods to some port in the United Kingdom, & that the ship should carry no licence:—Held: not an illegal contract to deprive B. of his right to his com-

PART VIII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.—M. (b).

1. Sale of land.—Violation of statutory provisions respecting disposal of Crown lands.]—Pltf., who had laid out & inspected Crown lands as a Govt. surveyor, furnished information to deft. & G., which enabled them to secure choice locations of over 7,000 acres in the names of a number of persons nominated by them & employed as "stakers." Subsequently pltf. assisted in the disposal of the lands thus secured to innocent purchasers under an arrangement with deft. & G. for participation of profits:—Held: the transaction was a violation of British Columbia Land Act (c. 30), & pltf. not entitled to recover.—BROWNLEE v. MACINTOSH (1913), 26 W. L. R. 906; 48 S. C. R. 588.—CAN.

PART VIII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.—M. (c).

1841 i. Agent's interest in conflict with principal's.]—In an action for commission for finding a purchaser for deft.'s orchard, evidence showed an agreement between pltf. & the purchaser for pltf.'s employment as agent to sell the fruit:—Held: this was not a ground for a non-suit, but it should have been left to the jury whether pltf.'s interest conflicted with his duty.—HOWARD v. BLACK (1916), 16 S. R. N. S. W. 169; 33 N. S. W. W. N. 14.—AUS.

1841 ii. —.]—Deft. desired to sell his interest in certain lands & contracts, & having met R., a real estate agent, was introduced by him to pltf. Deft. signed a document, agreeing to pay 5 per cent. commission to R. or to pltf. Some months later an exchange was effected between R. & deft., & in respect of this exchange pltf. claimed his commission:—Held: R. could not have taken a commission, he having acquired the property, & pltf., who was a partner, or at least had interests in common with R. in the transaction, could not recover commission, having placed himself in a position incompatible with his duty as agent, he rather serving the interests of R. than those of deft. *Salomons v. 1839. London broker buying in his own name.]—Petitioner, a London broker, sought to prove in the bkpy. of a customer for £20,000 commission. The stats. of the corp'n. provided that no person should act as broker without the licence of the Mayor & Aldermen, & that no broker, under a penalty, should act by fraud & collusion nor buy & sell for his own use. Petitioner entered into a bond on these terms:—Held: petitioner had not forfeited his right to prove by acting in contravention of the stats. & his bond; but he could not recover in respect of any transactions in which he had acted as broker & principal, that being contrary to common law.—*Re MOLINE, Ex p. (c) Breach of Duty.

Breach of duty generally, see Sect. 2, ante.

1841. Agent's interest in conflict with principal's.]

—A co., having spent all its money, applied to deft. to supply additional capital by taking shares. Deft. agreed to do so on terms, one of which was that he should have representatives on the board.

on account of purchase-money, for which he gave a receipt. Deft. alleged that at the time he was led by pltfs. to believe that the purchaser was a client of theirs; & pltfs. admitted that they never told deft. that it was their intention to buy for themselves. As a matter of fact pltfs. were themselves the purchasers:—Held: an agent employed by the owner to sell land at a commission & himself becoming the purchaser was not entitled to remuneration, & pltfs., having as a fact represented to deft. that they were making the sale to another person, failed in their claim for commission. Salomons v. Pender (1865), 34 L. J. Ex. 95, cited.—CALGARY REALTY CO. v. REID (1911), 19 W. L. R. 649; 1 W. W. R. 218.—CAN.

1841 v. —Secret agreement to share commission with co-agent.]—The agent of a co. for sale of land for commission agreed with the manager of the co. to divide the commission with the latter, & this agreement was kept from the knowledge of the co.:—Held: (1) there was no bar to the agent's right to recover commission, as the interests of the agent or manager were not thereby placed in conflict with their duty; (2) the co. could recover the half commission if it had been paid to their

The co. having approved this agreement in general meeting, deft. appointed pltf. to act as his representative to look after his (def't.'s) interests, for which def't. was to pay pltf. £200 a year out of his own pocket so long as pltf. remained a director. In an action brought by pltf. to recover remuneration calculated at the rate of £200 a year, the jury found that def't. had agreed to pay pltf. £200 a year so long as he remained a director, & they further found that the agreement did not contemplate that pltf. should promote the interests of def't. even though such interests were not identical with those of the whole body of shareholders:—Held: (1) the bargain was not corrupt, the co.'s assent to & approval of the agreement between pltf. & def't. being sufficient to divest the transaction between the parties of any character of illegality; (2) pltf. was entitled to recover his remuneration.—KREGOR v. HOLLINS (1913), 109 L. T. 225, C. A.

1843. Agent wrongly delegating his duty.—Deft. having agreed to sell for pltf. certain bank shares by auction or otherwise, advertised them for sale, & received a reply from the bank, offering to find a purchaser. Deft., without pltf.'s knowledge, instructed the bank to sell the shares, & received from the bank the purchase-money, which he paid over to pltf., after deducting his commission:—Held: (1) def't. was not entitled to commission, as he had voluntarily divested himself of his authority, & the bank was not interested in getting the highest price; (2) the amount retained must be paid over to pltf.—BEABLE v. DICKERSON (1885), 1 T. L. R. 654.

1844. Delay in delivery.—HURST v. HOLDING, No. 1936, post.

1845. Negligence.—If an auctioneer employed to sell an estate is guilty of negligence, whereby the sale becomes nugatory, he is not entitled to recover any compensation for his services from the vendor.—DENEW v. DAVERELL (1813), 3 Camp. 451.

1847. — Broker.—If the duties of a sworn broker are executed in such a manner that no benefit results from them, he is not entitled to recover either his commission or even a compensation for his trouble.

Pltf., a ship's broker, drew up a memorandum for a charterparty so unintelligible that no charter could have been made out from it:—Held: he was entitled to no commission.—DAMOND v. HOLIDAY (1824), 1 C. & P. 384.

1848. Non-disclosure of material facts.—A house agent is not entitled to commission on the sale of property where he has kept a material fact from the principal's knowledge & made a secret profit.

Pltf. concealed from defts., who had commissioned him to sell a property, the fact of a sale from the purchaser to a public authority at a profit of £15 to himself & also the fact that the public authority was desirous to acquire part of the property in question.—Held: he could not recover the agreed commission.—PRICE v. METROPOLITAN HOUSE INVESTMENT AGENCY CO., LTD. (1907), 23 T. L. R. 630.

1849. Agent not acting personally & on the spot.—An agent is not entitled to commission unless he remains upon the spot, & attends to the management of the estate.—CHAMBERS v. GOLDWIN (1804), 1 Smith, K. B. 252; 9 Ves. 254; 32 E. R. 254.

1850. Misconduct—Factor.—A factor who has been guilty of gross misconduct in selling the goods of his principal is not entitled to deduct for commission in an action for money had & received to the use of his principal.—WHITE v. CHAPMAN (1815), 1 Stark. 113.

1845 i. Negligence.—If an agent does not perform his appropriate duty, or is guilty of gross negligence or gross misconduct or gross unskillfulness in the business of his agency, he is not only liable to his principal for damages sustained thereby, but also forfeits all his commission.—UNITED AGENCY & TRUST CO. v. AMM BROTHERS, S. A. L. R. Trans. Prov. Div. (1917), 439.—S. AF.

1845 ii. — Failure to make reasonable inquiries.—A commission agent had induced his principal to enter into a contract for the sale of land by the representation that the purchaser was able to complete the purchase. The representation was made without fraud, but it was false, & reasonable inquiry would have proved it to be false. Owing to the purchaser's inability the purchase was not completed:—Held: the agent not entitled to commission.—Nocton v. Ashburton, [1914] A. C. 932, & Low v. Bouvier, [1891] 3 Ch. 82, cited. Semble: the commission agent was also liable to the principal to make good to him any loss to which he had been put by the agent's breach of duty.—FITZGERALD v. METCALFE (1917), N. Z. L. R. 486.—N. Z.

1845 iii. — Principal's right of equitable set-off.—Pltf., as brokers for the sale of indigo seed, sued defts. to recover the amount alleged to be due to them by defts. as commission on account of certain sales of indigo seed made by them on behalf of defts.:—Held: the ct. might properly take into consideration by way of an equitable set-off the loss occasioned by pltf's. to defts. through pltf's. negligence in not carrying out defts.' instruction respecting the selling of the seed.—NAND RAM v. RAM PRASAD (1905), 1 L. R. 27 All. 145.—IND.

1845 i. Non-disclosure of material facts.—Deft. placed his land in the hands of pltf's., land agents, for sale at a named price, promising them a commission of $500 if they sold at that price. Pltf's. professed to have made a sale at the price named to A. "subject to owner's confirmation." A. was a clerk or salesman in pltf's. employ, of which fact def't. was not informed; def't. also was not informed by pltf's., who did business at the place where the land was situated, of the value of the land:—Held: pltf's. had failed in their duty as agents & were not entitled to commission.—ARNOLD v. DREW (1913), 24 W. L. R. 51; 4 W. W. R. 435; 11 D. L. R. 72.—CAN.

1848 ii. —Pltf. alleged an oral agreement by def't. to pay commission on the sale of certain land. The evidence showed that pltf. had taken an option in his own name to purchase, but he alleged that this was to enable him to show to an intending purchaser, who lived some distance away, that the property could be delivered:—Held: even if def't. had agreed at first to pay pltf. a commission if he made a sale, the taking of the option in pltf.'s name imposed on pltf. the onus of proving that, although he appeared as purchaser, def't. had again agreed that pltf. should receive a commission; this pltf. had failed to do.—NIXON v. DOWDLE (1912), 20 W. L. R. 749; 2 D. L. R. 397.—CAN.

1850 i. Misconduct—Agent to sell colluding with purchaser.—Deft. entrusted his property to pltf's. for sale, & the listing was done by S., a clerk in pltf's. office. This clerk introduced def't. to another clerk in pltf's. employ as an intending purchaser, but did not disclose his real position. Deft. asked a certain price, but the clerk holding himself out as a purchaser, who had been informed by S. that the property could be bought for less, refused to give the figure asked, & eventually def't. agreed to accept the lower figure:—Held: if an agent colludes, directly or indirectly, with the other side, & so acts in opposition to the interests of his principal, he is not entitled to any commission.—Kettlewell v. Refuge Assec. Co., [1908] 1 K. B. 545; Salomons v. Pender, 3

Agent making secret profits.]—When a person who purports to act as an agent is not in a position to say to his principal, "I have been acting as your agent, & I have done my duty by you," he is not entitled to recover any commission from that principal. A principal is entitled to have an honest agent, & it is only the honest agent who is entitled to any commission. If an agent directly or indirectly colludes with the other side, & so acts in opposition to the interest of his principal, he is not entitled to any commission (LORD ALVERSTONE, C.J.).—ANDREWS (ANDREW) v. RAMSAY & CO., [1903] 2 K. B. 635; 72 L. J. K. B. 865; 89 L. T. 450; 52 W. R. 126; 19 T. L. R. 620; 47 Sol. Jo. 728.

1850 ii. — Agent to sell inducing purchaser to abandon contracts.]—Pltfs., having rendered services in connection with the selling of defts.' property, left defts.' employ, & taking advantage of the information they had obtained whilst in defts.' employ, deliberately set out to induce the purchasers to break their contracts & enter into fresh ones with another co. which they then formed:—Held: pltfs. were not entitled to recover for the services they had rendered by reason of their after-conduct. — MILLARD v. DOMINION TOWNSHIP CO., LTD. (1913), 25 W. L. R. 695; 14 D. L. R. 294.—CAN.

1850 iii. — Agent misleading principal.]—Pltf., as agent of deft., made arrangements to exchange a hotel belonging to deft. for certain land belonging to G., & to induce deft. to enter into a contract he grossly misrepresented the value of the land. Pltf. had previously been the agent of G. in acquiring this particular land, & had arranged with him to bring it in for the purpose of the exchange, at a certain figure, but none of this was disclosed to deft. Dft. inspected the property she was to receive in exchange for her hotel, & on discovering its real nature, informed pltf. that the deal was off, & instructed him to take the hotel off his list & revoked his authority. Later on, deft. came to an arrangement with G. to exchange the hotel for certain land which was acceptable to her:—Held: (1) the misconduct of pltf. was of such character as to disentitle him to commission for his services, & deft. was justified in revoking the authority; (2) the subsequent exchange was not due to pltf.'s intervention.—NORTHERN COLONISATION AGENCY v. MCINTYRE (1911), 4 Sask. L. R. 340; 17 W. L. R. 270.—CAN.

1850 v. — Agent acting in excess of authority.]—Resp., a commission agent, was authorised in writing by applt. to sell a certain parcel of land. He sold the land, & at same time sold certain chattels on the land which he was not authorised to sell. He then claimed commission on the sale, &, applt. refusing to pay, sued him for commission:—Held: resp., having exceeded his authority, had not earned any commission.—GALLIEN v. GURR (1906), 26 N. Z. L. R. 588.—N.Z.

1850 vi. — Estate agent taking note for deposit.]—Sentile: the taking by an estate agent of a note of a purchaser for a deposit in a proposed sale is not in itself misconduct disentitling him to commission. — HERBERT v. VIVIAN (1913), 24 W. L. R. 803; 8 D. L. R. 340; affd. 11 D. L. R. 839; 4 W. W. R. 891.—CAN.

1852 i. Agent making secret profits.]—The M. Corp., through its manager gave D. the exclusive right to sell a block of land until Feb. 6. D. negotiated with G., who asked for time to provide the funds, & D. on Jan. 24 in consideration of $500 gave him till Jan. 31, & G. eventually purchased at the agreed price. In an action by D. for commission:—Held: his acceptance was a breach of duty to his principals, & disentitled him to recover. Boston Deep Sea Fishing & Ice Co. v. Ansell (1888), 39 Ch. D. 339; Andrews v. Ramsay (1903), 19 T. L. R. 620, cited.—MANTOBA & NORTH-WESTLAND CORP. v. DAVIDSON (1903), 34 S. C. R. 255.—CAN.

1852 ii. —Pltf., interested in seventy-five acres at W., represented on May 6 to deft. that he was the holder of an option for the purchase of this land at $400 an acre, expiring at 6 p.m. that day, & the owners would then raise the price to $500; whereon deft. consented to buy the property for $30,000, represented as the vendors' lowest price. Dft. subsequently discovered that pltf. had received a secret commission of $1,000. Dft. resold the land at a profit to B., & before discovery of the secret commission agreed to pay pltf. one-third of the profit on the resale:—Held: pltf. could not recover one-third of the profit on the resale.—MARCON v. COLERIDGE (1914), 26 O. W. R. 507.—CAN.

1852 iii. —J.—KERSTEMAN v. KING, 15 C. L. J. 140.—CAN.

1852 iv. —Pltfs., real estate agents, were employed by deft. to find a purchaser for property at $22 an acre net to deft., pltfs. to have as commission anything over that price up to $1 an acre that purchaser would pay. To an action for breach of this undertaking, pltf. pleaded that pltfs. had corruptly agreed with purchasers to accept a commission from them. The ct. found that such commission was in respect of pltfs.' services in enabling purchasers to resell at advanced prices:—Held: (1) if pltfs. had received the commission from the purchasers they would have had to account to deft. for it; (2) the agreement of pltfs. with purchasers was not corrupt & pltfs. were entitled to commission. Morison v. Thompson (1874), L. R. 9 Q. J. 622.—CAN.

BRUSTER, No. 1593, ante.

(d) Other Causes.

1854. No commission on goods not sold.]—A. by will devised all his estates to his eldest son in tail male, with remainders over; part of the property consisted of an estate in Jamaica, & therefore testator added the following clause: " & I recommend to my executors, that all sugars, rum, & other plantation produce that is sent to the port of London be consigned to the house of C. & Co. until such time as any of my sons shall set up business of a sugar factor; then my desire is, that the consignments may pass through his or their hands." C., a natural son of testator's, set up the business of a sugar factor during the minority of the devisee, & accordingly got the consignments.

1852 v. —Pltf. appointed an agent for sale, not knowing that the person appointed is agent for a purchaser of the goods which the vendor desires to sell, then the commission which the vendor agrees, in ignorance of the true position, to pay his agent cannot be recovered by the agent. The onus of showing that the vendor knew when he agreed to pay the commission that the agent was also acting as agent for the purchaser rests on the agent.—BARR & LAERY & CO. v. HALL (1906), 26 N. Z. L. R. 222.—N.Z.

1852 vi. — No breach of duty.]—Pltf. was appointed commission agent, at a stated remuneration, to dispose of timber on behalf of defts. He performed his duty, & disposed of $4,200 worth of timber, which was to be paid for partly in land & partly in cash. The defence to his claim was that whilst he was agent for defts. he obtained a commission from the purchasers of the timber, so far as the land given for the timber was concerned. At the time when he made the sale for defts. he was not agent for the purchasers, nor was there any agreement between him & the purchasers that he was to be paid any commission. His evidence was— & it was not contradicted—that the first idea of charging a commission for the land sold was suggested to him by W., one of defts. It was clear that pltf. did not get a commission from the purchasers on the whole transaction, but only on a part of it—namely, the sale of the land:—Held: pltf. was entitled to his commission, on the grounds (1) at the time of the sale there was no agreement between him & the purchasers as to any commission, nor was he in any sense acting as agent for the purchasers; (2) the commission he got was not a commission on the whole transaction; pltf. was, however, bound to account for the profit he made, as the conversation with W. did not show an agreement by defts. to waive any rights they had to claim any profit that he might have made as their agent.—COHEN v. PEDERSEN (1913), 31 N. Z. L. R. 1050.—N.Z.

Upon the devisee's coming of age C. accounted with him, but insisted on being entitled to his commission, not only upon the produce which he had actually sold, but also upon the produce which had been consigned to him, but was not then arrived in the port of London:—Held: (1) the words of the above clause were not imperative, or amounted to words of bequest in favour of C., but were recommendatory only; (2) C. was entitled to a commission only upon what he had actually sold, & not upon what was only consigned but not delivered to him.—BECKFORD v. BECKFORD (1783), 4 Bro. Parl. Cas. 38; 2 E. R. 26.

1855. No commission on bad debts.—The following letter was addressed to an African captain & supercargo by his employers: "Your commissions are 20 per cent. on the net proceeds of your homeward cargo, after deducting the usual charges as arranged by the African Assocn., viz. £4 per ton from the gross sales of the oil when taken from the quay, & £4 15s. when warehoused."—Held: the commission was payable only on the sums actually realised after deducting bad debts as well as other charges.—CAINE v. HORSFALL (1847), 1 Exch. 519; 2 Car & Kir. 349; 17 L. J. Ex. 25; 10 L. T. O. S. 169.

1856. — Except by agreement.—By agreement T., an agent, was to have a commission on all sales effected or orders executed by him, the principal to be responsible for bad debts, & the agent to draw his commission monthly. By the usage of the trade, commission was not allowed on sales which produced bad debts:—Held: notwithstanding this usage, under the terms of this agreement T. was entitled to commission on bad debts.—BOWER v. JONES (1831), 8 Bing. 65; 1 Moo. & S. 140; 1 L. J. C. P. 31; 135 E. R. 325.

1857. No commission on goods not answering required description.—A. entered into a contract with B. to proceed to the coast of Africa & there procure & ship for B. in England palm-oil & other produce, A. to receive as remuneration for his services a commission of 20 per cent. on the net proceeds of the dry merchantable palm-oil received by B.; the agreement further provided that A. should not be entitled to any commission on "any wet, dirty, or unmerchantable palm-oil" that might be received:—Held: A. was entitled to no commission in respect of palm-oil which was in the understanding of the trade "wet" oil, though such wetness did not render the oil unmerchantable, but was compensated for by an allowance to the purchasers of from 1½ to 2 per cent. on the price.—WARDE (WARD) v. STUART (1856), 1 C. B. N. S. 88; 28 L. T. O. S. 85; 5 W. R. 6; 140 E. R. 36.

1858. Factor acquiring interest as executor.—S. from time to time consigned goods from India to T. in London. S. having died & T. being his exor., a claim was made, on the accounts being taken, for factor's commission on the consignments:—Held: (1) T. was not entitled, in so far as he acted as exor., to commission; (2) T. was entitled to commission on goods consigned to him by S. in his lifetime, though they came to his hands after S.'s death.—SCATTERGOOD v. HARRISON (1720), Mos. 128; 25 E. R. 310.

PART VIII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.— M. (d.).

1855 1. No commission on bad debts.—Where a commission agent is to be paid for sales ratified by his principal, the goods delivered & the price paid, the principal has the right to cancel sales to customers who have not paid former debts; upon such sales the agent cannot recover his commission nor upon sales to customers who have become insolvent, though it be subsequent to time extensions allowed by the principal, unless he prove that it be due to the gross negligence or fault of the principal that the latter has not been paid.—DROLET (CO., LTD.) v. TOUSIGNANT (1917), Q. R. 52 S. C. 320.—CAN.

a. No commission where agent acting as principal.—Upon a sale of hides:—Held: upon the evidence, debts were acting as principals, not as agents of the purchasers, & could not charge commission.—MACKLEM v. THORNE (1870), 30 U. C. R. 464.—CAN.

b. Member of agent's firm also in principal's employ.—Pltf. co. claimed from defts. half of the commission received by the latter for the sale of property to M., owner of a newspaper. The newspaper had recently published that M. had bought the newspaper & that G., a member of pltf. co., was to act as manager. G. then saw defts. representing himself as acting for M., saying that M. wanted to look over certain properties suitable for a site for the newspaper offices, nothing being said about G.'s getting any commission in case a sale should be effected, & there being no suggestion that G. was acting for pltf. co. or in any other capacity than as agent for M. Defts. got from the owner of the property in question the right to sell, included it in their list, & eventually the property was sold through defts. to M., G. taking no further part in the business. Defts. admitted that when the deal was about complete, G. suggested that he should receive half the commission:—Held: the statement of defts. that had G. not been an employee of M., G. would be entitled to a share of the commission, did not advance G.'s claim, since, although the custom of sharing commission with another agent would then doubtless have been recognised, what was done in the case then before the ct. was done by G. on the representation that he was acting as manager for M., & pltf. co. was not entitled to any share of the commission.—GLOBE REALTY CO. v. MARTINDALE & BATE (1913), 18 B. C. R. 220.—CAN.

c. Transaction proving unprofitable — Agent accepting payment in full settlement.—Pltf., the manager of a coal co., of which deft. was vice-president, suggested to him the advisability of purchasing certain coal properties consisting of two separate areas & including the surface rights of one of them. It was arranged that pltf. should buy the properties for deft. for $85,150. Dft. commenced prospecting on the properties for coal with drills. While the work was in progress he wrote pltf., stating he would protect him for 11,000 shares in a coal co., to which it was his intention to sell, provided the sale netted him a profit of 22,000 shares, & that he would protect him for $25,000 as the sale of the surface rights progressed. This was the first reference as between the parties to remuneration for pltf.'s services. Later developments from the prospecting showed that there was little coal value in the properties, & a sale of the properties was made on a smaller basis. The parties came together & deft. paid pltf. $5,000 in promissory notes, which deft. alleged were taken by pltf. as settlement in full, pltf. denying this & saying it was made in part payment of the amount due to him:—Held: pltf.'s claim was settled in full when the promissory notes for $5,000 were given to him by deft., & he was not entitled to anything on a quantum meruit.—GRANT v. VON ALVENSLEBEN (1913), 18 B. C. R. 334.—CAN.

d. Abandonment of claim for remuneration.—Pltf.'s father had been employed by defts. to manage their business in Canada, under an agreement whereby he was to be entitled to commission not on the amount of sales, but on actual receipts, i.e., on cash & bills, etc., received. Pltf. was appointed in his father's place after the latter's retirement, but was later dismissed, & defts. then made the father a yearly allowance, with the alleged object of thereby getting rid of any opposition to defts.' business, which the father might feel disposed to make. After his dismissal pltf. claimed from defts. a sum on account of commissions on sales made while he was in their employ, but the amount of which had been received after he left. On defts.' threatening to stop the allowance to his father, pltf. dropped the claim & raised it again after his father's death:—Held: (1) pltf. was in equity estopped from asserting this claim, defts. having paid money to his father in the belief induced by pltf. that he had abandoned such claim; (2) under the contract between pltf. & defts. as disclosed in the correspondence between the parties, pltf. was only entitled to commission on moneys received during his employment & not afterwards. *Its Collie, Ez p. place the shares, debts, agreeing to pay them commission "on allotment on the amount of the issue." Pltfs. were to pay all expenses, such as "clerical labour & postage & receipt stamps on allotment letters." Pltfs. claimed commission on the whole amount of the issue:—Held: pltfs. were only entitled to a pro rata commission calculated on the number of shares actually issued.—BROWNE & WINGROVE v. PICKERING & Co. (1888), 4 T. L. R. 726, C. A.

1861. No commission on profit not realised.]—Pltf., as manager of deft. co. in Argentine, was entitled to receive 10 per cent. of the realised profit on sales of the co.'s land, the value of the land being taken as a basis of calculation at £300 a square league. Lands had been sold on instalments, the lands remaining in the hands of the co. till the last instalments had been paid, & the co. had received in instalments sums amounting to £300 a square league. Pltf. claimed to be entitled to 10 per cent. of the difference between the contract prices, less discount & £300 a square league:—Held: (1) no profits were realised unless the co. received a sum in excess of £300 per square league; (2) the value of the transactions was to be calculated on the basis of the gold dollar, the State standard of value, & not on the amount of paper dollars actually received; (3) any allowance for depreciation must be based upon the actual depreciation, if any, which had taken place, & not upon the percentage which the co. allowed in its books.—O'MEARA v. SANTA FE LAND CO. (1894), 11 T. L. R. 24.

1863. When right arises.]—Pltfs., as agents of defts., purchased goods from wholesale dealers, not having pledged

1864. Acts not amounting to payment by principal.]

—Pltf., as broker, insured deft.'s ship & advanced the premiums. The ship was lost, & £450 claimed from the underwriters, who paid £400, withholding £50, on account of stores which had been saved. Pltf. told deft. he (pltf.) had deducted the premiums from the £450, & if deft. would give him a written authority to receive the stores pltf. would pay him the balance, which would amount to £16. Dft. gave the authority; but pltf. did not pay the balance, & brought an action for the premiums. Dft. pleaded payment:—Held: the above facts did not support the plea.—PALMER v. COSTERTON (1843), 4 Q. B. 525; 114 E. R. 996.

1865. Loss paid on behalf of insolvent underwriter not recoverable from assured.]—An insurance broker, who, when a loss happens upon a policy which he has effected, pays the assured the full amount of the money subscribed, cannot recover back any part of it, upon the ground that he was not aware of the insolvency of one of the underwriters before the loss happened, when he paid the money.—EDGAR v. SWAINSTONE (1809), 2 Camp. 546 n.

1867. Principal cannot set off claim for unliquidated damages for negligence.]—To a declaration for money lent & paid & commission deft. pleaded for a defence on equitable grounds that it was agreed between pltfs. & himself on the following terms, viz., that he should consign certain rice to pltfs.' firm at Buenos Ayres & Monte Video for sale by pltfs. for him upon commission; that pltfs. should make certain advances against the rice & pay the expenses of the consignment; & that pltfs. should sell the rice, & satisfy out of the proceeds the said advances, expenses, & commission, & pay to deft. the balance remaining out of such proceeds. The plea further stated that the rice was duly consigned to pltfs. under the agreement; that the claims in the declaration were the advances, expenses, & commission contemplated by the agreement; & that pltfs. were guilty of such negligence & improper conduct in the care of the rice & management of the sale of it that it fetched much less than it ought to have done, & insufficient to satisfy the advances, expenses, & commission, whereas it would, but for their negligence & misconduct, have realised sufficient, & much more than sufficient, to have fully paid & satisfied same, & the deficiency arising upon the sale, which was the claim for which the action was brought, had entirely arisen from pltfs.' negligence, default, & misconduct:—Held: a bad plea.—BEST v. HILL (1872), L. R. 8 C. P. 10; 42 L. J. C. P. 10; 27 L. T. 490; 37 J. P. 230; 21 W. R. 147.

1869. Promise to indemnify.—Deft. authorised plffs. or their agent to distrain certain goods, which turned out to be privileged from distress, & required them to levy forthwith whilst the goods were on the premises, undertaking to indemnify them for so doing:—Held: (1) deft. was liable under his undertaking to plffs. for the expense which they had incurred in consequence of acting under his authority; (2) the knowledge possessed by deft. of the circumstances under which the goods on which the levy was made had been placed upon the premises was sufficient to remove all ground of suspicion as to the legality of the distress from the minds of plffs., & exempted them from the necessity of making an inquiry upon the subject.—TOPLIS v. GRANE (1839), 5 Bing. N. C. 636; 2 Arn. 10; 7 Scott, 620; 9 L. J. C. P. 180; 132 E. R. 1245.

G., for £9, being the amount of rent due to me; & for your so doing this shall be your sufficient warrant, authority & indemnification against all costs & charges in respect to any law expenses, action or actions that may arise, as well as any other & all charges or expenses which you or your agent may be at or brought against you or your agent on this account." W. H., the servant of R. I., having distrained, an action of trover was brought against him by the tenant for conversion of certain goods, some of which were alleged not to have been in the inventory, in which action plff. was nonsuited:—Held: assuming W. H. had done nothing wrong, the indemnity extended to the costs of defending the action brought against him.—IBBETT v. DE LA SALLE (1860), 6 H. & N. 233; 30 L. J. Ex. 44; 158 E. R. 96.

1872. Promise to pay agent's draft.—The charterer of a ship at 60s. freight per ton wrote to his agent that he was to re-charter her from Taganrog to this country "upon the best terms obtainable, . . . but if there should be a loss, your draft upon us for the difference will meet due honour." The current rate of freight at Taganrog when the ship arrived was 40s. The agent, not finding anyone willing to re-charter her, put a cargo of his own on board, & drew a bill on his principal for the difference between the current rate of freight & the charter rate of freight:—Held: (1) though the ship was lost on the voyage home, & no freight became actually payable, a loss had accrued to the agent the moment he put his goods on board & so rendered them liable to a rate of freight exceeding the current rate; (2) the principal was bound under the terms of his letter to accept the bill.—*YEAMIES v. a. Agent purchasing at principal's request—Agent advancing price.—S., a school trustee, by desire of the board, bought land for the board for a school site, signing the contract with his own name only. The board by resolutions recognised the purchase as their own, & after paying instalments, applied to the town council for money to pay for school premises. The town council did not comply with the requisition, & subsequently trustees were elected, a majority of whom repudiated the purchase. In an action against the board for indemnification:—Held: S. entitled to relief.—SMITH v. BELLEVILLE SCHOOL TRUSTEES (1869), 16 Gr. 130.—CAN.

d. — Principal failing to deliver.—Plff. by his statement of claim alleged that he was authorised by deft. to sell wheat on commission at a fixed price, & sold the wheat, but deft. failed to deliver it, & plff. claimed as damage the difference between the price at which deft. instructed plff. to sell & the price at which plff. had to purchase other wheat owing to deft.'s breach, & commission:—Held: the statement of claim disclosed a cause of action against deft. except as to the

e. Agent making advances—On goods.—Factors advanced money on goods intrusted to them, & after shipping the goods drew bills against them in their own names, & sold the bills with the shipping documents in the market. A loss having occurred on the shipments:—Held: there being no privity between the consignees & the undisclosed principal, the principal was liable to the factors' estate for the full amount of re-drafts representing that loss.—*MIRTONJOY CHUCKERBUTTY v. f. — — — — — Account sales.—Plffs., commission merchants in N., received from deft. a quantity of wheat, with instructions to ship it to L. for sale there, & they made advances upon it, which exceeded the net proceeds of the sales. In an action for the excess thus advanced, plffs. proved that they had mailed to deft. the account sales received by them from their L. agents, with an account between plffs. & deft. founded upon them, & that these account sales were afterwards seen in his possession; & evidence was given that the wheat was in a bad condition when shipped, as deft. knew; & that the prices realised were what might have been expected, & the charges such as were usual:—Held: the evidence was not sufficient to show the price for which the wheat was sold, nor the amount of charges connected with the sales; & a new trial was therefore granted, with costs to abide the event.—CRAIG v. CORCORAN (1864), 23 U. C. R. 441.—CAN.

The goods were shipped to him & lost at sea:—Held: the agent entitled to recover the advance, as the goods still continued the property of the consignors.—GOODERHAM v. MARLATT, (1855), 14 U. C. 1877. Bill drawn on principal by agent at principal's request.—[Defts., the owners of a ship of which pltf. was captain, despatched the latter to M. with instructions to purchase a cargo of timber & draw upon them for the amount. Pltf. proceeded to M., & there purchased some timber from L. for £154 11s. 11d., & drew a bill upon defts. for the amount, at 60 days' sight, in favour of the seller or his order. The bill was dated Sept. 4, 1826, & on Nov. 21, it was duly presented for acceptance & protested for non-acceptance. Pltf. was in Liverpool with the ship under his command from Oct., 1826, until Apr., 1827. It was not proved that pltf. received any notice of the dishonour of the bill either from the then holder or from defts., who had got the cargo. In 1832 pltf. was arrested upon this bill at M., & paid it in order to release himself from the arrest. In a special action of assumpsit brought by pltf. against defts. for not paying the bill, for not accepting it, & for not indemnifying pltf. from all loss, etc., sustained by him from having drawn the bill:—Held: (1) in these circumstances defts. could not insist on the want of proof of notice to pltf. of the dishonour of the bill as a defence to the action; (2) a promise to indemnify was the promise which the law would in this case imply, & as there was no demurrance till 1832, Stat. Limitations did not apply.—HUNTLEY v. SANDERSON & WILKINSON (1833), 1 Cr. & M. 467; 3 Tyr. 469; 2 L. J. Ex. 204; 140 E. R. 483.

1878. Wrongful act on principal's instructions.—Trover.—[If a principal orders his agent to do that which is in itself a wrongful act, & the agent has an action brought against him, he cannot recover from his principal for damage sustained. If the act which the principal desires his agent to do is such as may or may not be a wrongful act, according to circumstances, & the agent sustains damage, there is an implied promise on the part of the principal to indemnify the agent against the consequences of his act. The same exception applies to actions for contribution as to actions for indemnity.]

Bill drawn on principal by agent at principal's request.—Damage to agent's credit from dishonour.—Whether recoverable.—[An agent abroad drew bills on his principal for advances made by the principal's directions; the bills were returned dishonoured, though the principal was perfectly solvent, & the

(which were drawn for payment of 10 hogsheads) not being accepted, expressly ordered pltf's. to deliver the remainder to the order of another person, which they did, & the assignees afterwards brought an action of trover against pltf's., which action, after notice to deft., they settled:—Held: (1) from the order of deft. an implied promise arose to indemnify pltf's. against the consequences of acting upon it; (2) they were entitled to recover from deft. the sum which they had paid the assignees to settle the action, together with costs.—BETTS & DREW v. 1884. Bills accepted by agent against goods—Agent's right to sell below limit.]—Pltfs. were employed by defts. to sell goods on commission, giving defts. bills for their invoiced value. Defts. had placed a limit on the prices of the goods, which pltfs. contended they had no power to do. Pltfs. applied under R. S. C., O. 50, r. 2, for an order to sell the goods, but defts. objected that pltfs. had not given them sufficient time to decide whether to lower the limit:—Held: the order must be refused.—*DANGAR, GRANT & Co. v. 1884 ii. ———.]—Deft., living at C., consigned to pltf. at N. certain tobacco for sale, & drew upon him at same time for $250, which pltf. accepted & paid. The price which deft. asked could not be obtained in M., & pltf. therefore shipped the tobacco to E., where it was sold. The net proceeds, after deducting freight & charges, were only £14 sterling, & he sued deft. upon the common counts for the difference, $278, the expenses of shipping being also deducted. Deft. pleaded never indebted, payment, & set-off. When the draft fell due deft. had written to pltf. offering to raise funds to retire it by drawing upon him again. The account sales received by pltf. from E. had been sent deft., who said, on receiving them, that he did not think he ought to bear the whole loss, but offered $150:—Held: there being no evidence of any special contract, pltf. was entitled to recover his advances without waiting for the sale of the tobacco.—STEWART v. LOWE (1865), 24 U. C. R. 434.—CAN.

n. Payment by agent on order drawn by principal in favour of third party.]—M., formerly deputy sheriff of a district, sued R., the sheriff, for services in the execution of his office. At the trial pltf. produced an order drawn on him by deft. in favour of X., desiring him to pay the latter £50 out of the moneys he had received for sheriff's fees:—Held: in the absence of any further information, mere proof of the payment of that order did not entitle pltf. to recover.—*MOORE v. pay off a bill of sale given by debtor, & to take an assignment of it to themselves. The trustee chosen by the creditors sued the auctioneers in order to test the validity of the bill of sale, & they brought in the official receiver as third party. The action was dismissed with costs :—Held : under the implied indemnity given by the official receiver, the auctioneers were entitled to receive from him the difference between the costs incurred by them as between solr. & client & the costs as between party & party which they received from the trustee, & the official receiver was entitled to be paid out of the estate his own costs & the amount he had paid under his indemnity to the auctioneers.—*Re WELLS & CROFT, Ex p. 1905. ——— Damages recovered in—What agent must show.]—In an action by an agent in

Malta against his principal to recover the amount of damages sustained by him in a suit brought in Genoa upon a breach of contract which he had defended on behalf of his principal :—Held : (1) in order to entitle an agent to recover from his principal under such circumstances, he must show (a) the loss arose from the fact of his agency (b) he was acting within the scope of his authority, (c) the blame was not attributable to any fault or laches on his part ; (2) the liability deft. was under to indemnify pltf. extended to protect him against the expenses & trouble of an action arising out of his agency in the matter ; (3) damages should be decreed against the principal.—*FRIXIONE v. 1906. ———.]—S. brought an action against M., his agent, for an account. W. also brought an action against M. for breach of contract. The defence in the second action was that M. acted in the transaction as agent of S. The master ordered S. should be bound by the sum for which M. should be held liable to W., & W. should be a party to the first action :—Held : (1) the order was right in so far as it provided S. should be bound by the result of W.'s action ; (2) the order was wrong in so far as it sought to bring W. into S.'s action.—SELIEMAN v. MANSFIELD, WHITE v. MANSFIELD (1875), Bitt. Prac. Cas. 57 ; 1 Char. Cham. Cas. 62.

1907. ——— Damages not arising directly out of agency.]—Defts. instructed in 1898 H., an auctioneer in Paris, to put up for auction a thoroughbred mare, P., with a certain description which was in fact accurate. Another thoroughbred mare named P. had been imported into France & sold by H. in 1893. On the second mare being advertised for sale the owner of the mare P., imported in 1893, brought an action against H. & recovered damages in France. In an action by H. against defts. claiming an indemnity & damages :—Held : defts. not liable, as the damages recovered against H. arose, not from any act done by him in pursuance of his employment by defts., but from a mistake as to the identity of the mare P. arising from the fact that some person in France had procured another mare to be entered in the Paris Stud Book as P.—*HALBRONN v. 1900 I. ——— Agent justified in defending.]—Under art. 1725, C. C., an insurance co. is bound to reimburse its agent the law costs caused by his defending an action for damages against him by a person whom he had denounced as pretending to be sub-agent of the co., if insolvent deft. is not able to pay his costs of defence ; but these acts must have been done in his office

1909. — Goods not up to quality.]—Deft., a corn merchant in Ireland, sent written instructions to pltf., a corn factor & del credere agent of deft. in London, to sell oats of a certain quality at a certain price on his (deft.'s) account. Pltf. sold them, as described by deft., in his own name. The oats proved to be of inferior quality, & pltf. was obliged to pay to the vendee the difference in value. In an action to recover the difference, it was objected by deft. that pltf. had no right to sell in his own name & thereby to incur liability:—Held: evidence was admissible for pltf. to show that, by the custom of the London corn trade, a factor was warranted by such instructions in selling in his own name.—JOHNSTON v. USHORNE (1841), 11 Ad. & El. 519; 3 Per. & Dav. 236; 113 E. R. 524.

1910. —]—Deft., having sold to T. through the agency of pltf.s, who were factors, some bark, which he agreed should be equal to sample, drew a bill on pltf.s for the price of the bark, which they accepted. The bark not being equal to sample, & being rejected by T., the buyer:—Held: the consideration of the bill having failed, pltf.s were entitled to recover the amount of it from deft.—HOOPER v. TREFFRY (1847), 1 Exch. 17; 16 L. J. Ex. 233; 9 L. T. O. S. 200; 154 E. R. 8.

1911. Freight paid against instructions.]—Goods being shipped in India for London, on account of A., the bill of lading was forwarded to A., & he indorsed it over for value. The bill of lading, signed by the master, stated freight to have been paid in Bengal, but it was found, after above transfer, that freight never had been paid, through default of the shipper. The brokers employed by the assignees of the bill of lading sold the goods, but, when called upon for delivery, found them to be stopped for freight, which, to obtain possession of the property, they paid, although their principals had formerly directed them not to do so, as freight had been paid in Bengal:—Held: (1) the assignees were not liable for freight; (2) this advance by the brokers was made in their own wrong, though freight had not in fact been paid in Bengal, as the principals supposed.—HOWARD v. TUCKER (1831), 1 B. & Ad. 712; 9 L. J. O. S. K. B. 108; 109 E. R. 951.

1912. Sale of shares—Shares not validly delivered —Wrongful payment by agent.]—Deft. authorised pltf., a broker, to sell certain shares in a ry., the shares then lying at the co.'s office for registration. Pltf. sold them to R. Correspondence took place between pltf. & deft. on account of delay in transfer of the shares, & ultimately deft. wrote a letter to pltf. requesting that all further communication should be made to his attorney. The transfer not having been made, R., after giving pltf. notice, bought the same number of shares at an advance in price, & charged pltf. with the difference, which pltf. paid & then sued deft. for the amount:—Held: (1) pltf. was authorised to sell registered shares only; (2) as no valid transfer could be made except by deed under Cos. Clauses Act, 1845 (c. 16), s. 14, R. was bound to have tendered a deed of transfer before he could have recovered against pltf., & as he had not done so, pltf. made payment to him in his own wrong; (3) the above-mentioned letter did not amount to a refusal to complete the contract so as to dispense with a tender of a deed of transfer.—*BOWLBY v. 1913. — Forged certificates—Payment by agent of excess over amount received by principal.]—Deft. on Mar. 10, 1847, employed pltf.s, stock & share brokers, to sell for him 10 scrip certificates for 50 shares each in a projected ry. co., & delivered the certificates to them for that purpose. Pltf.s, on Mar. 27, sold them to different purchasers, & paid deft. proceeds of sales. The certificates were afterwards discovered to be forged, & pltf.s. were called upon by the purchasers on May 11 to pay them respectively the value put on them by a resolution of the Stock Exchange Committee passed with reference to the forged certificates in that ry. co., of which there were several in the market, & which resolution was come to subsequently to the sales by pltf.s. Pltf.s. paid those sums which were larger than the sums for which they had sold the certificates. In an action by pltf.s. to recover the sums so paid the declaration contained a special count on an alleged warranty by deft. that the certificates were genuine & a count for money paid. Deft. paid into ct. the amount received by him from pltf.s., with interest:—Held: (1) the purchasers were entitled to nothing more from pltf.s. than the sum the purchasers had paid them; (2) pltf.s. could recover no more from deft.—*WESTROPP v. B. knew this when giving the order, but did not disclose it. The shares were sold, & M., in order to give delivery in accordance with the rules of the Stock Exchange, had to purchase other shares

r. Money paid on consideration that failed.]—An agent on behalf of an undisclosed principal received several sums of money from several other

1915. — Brokers acting as principals.—Deft. on various occasions instructed pltf., a country stockbroker, to effect for her purchases & sales of stocks & shares in the usual way through brokers on the London Stock Exchange. On receipt of her instructions, pltf. effected various purchases & sales of stocks & shares in a manner of which the following transaction is an example. Deft. having instructed pltf. to buy certain American ry. shares for her, pltf. gave an order for purchase of the shares to a firm of brokers on the London Stock Exchange, between whom & himself there was an arrangement in such cases they should deal at a "net" price for the shares, i.e., a price arrived at by adding to purchase price such sum as the London brokers might fix as their remuneration for the transaction. The London brokers thereupon bought the shares from a jobber, & sent a bought note to pltf. charging "98½ net" for the shares, the price at which they bought from the jobber not being disclosed. Pltf. then sent a bought note to deft., charging her 98½ for the shares (without adding the word "net") plus a commission of 7s. 6d. & 1s. for stamp. It appeared the amount added by the London brokers for their remuneration did not exceed the usual commission payable in respect of such a purchase. In an action brought by pltf. against deft. for a balance alleged to be due to him in respect of the above-mentioned transactions:—Held: (1) the contracts effected by pltf., being contracts, not made through the London brokers as agents, but as principals, were not in accordance with the authority given to pltf. by deft.; (2) he was not entitled to indemnity from deft. in respect of them; (3) the action was not maintainable.—*JOHNSON v. A corresponding sold note was sent to the sellers, at whose instance pltf. struck out "during Jan.," & wrote "forthwith," but did not communicate the alteration to deft. On Jan. 7 deft. decided to throw up the contract, & sent an order to pltf. to sell at 3s. Pltfs. could only sell at 2s. 10d., & having paid the sellers at the rate of 2s. 11½d., sued deft. for the difference. Pltfs. having been nonsuited:—Held: (1) the alteration was material; (2) pltf. could not treat themselves as principals & recover for goods bargained & sold; (3) the alteration being material, pltf. had paid to the sellers what deft. was not bound to pay, & could not recover for money paid to deft.'s use.—*WHITE v. PART VIII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.— C. (c).

1917 i. In general.—Where a broker enters into a transaction on the Exchange for the purchase or sale of goods on behalf of a customer, & the transaction takes place in the ordinary course of business, the broker's sole interest being his commission, he is entitled to recover from the customer the amount of the loss resulting from the operation. The broker's claim is not restricted to the amount of margin in his hands, but, in the absence of any to fill an order for the sale of stock in consequence of repudiation by the customer & of his joint liability, as a broker, to the purchaser, by the custom of trade governing stock exchange operations in Montreal. Parol testimony is admissible to prove such custom of trade, as well as the price for which the broker was authorised to sell the stock.—PITBLADO v. (1910), Q. on which he could sue the original sellers, & that they had acted as principals in carrying over:—Held: the brokers were entitled to recover on the grounds (1) they carried through the transactions honestly as brokers with no personal interest therein; (2) the averaging of prices was legitimate or had been acquiesced in; (3) deft. was aware of the method adopted in carrying over, & had acquiesced therein. Robinson v. Mollett (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 802, cited.—CLAVERING, SON & Co. v. HOPE (1897), 24 R. 944; 34 Sc. L. R. 721.—SCOT.

1917 ii. — Agent jointly liable with principal.—When, by the custom of trade, in a sale made through an agent, the latter is held jointly liable with his principal for its performance, an action will lie in his favour to recover from his principal whatever he may have expended for that purpose. Hence a broker in Montreal has an action to recover from a customer, together with his commission & charges, an amount expended the for two clients, averaging the prices, & subsequently carried over in the common & cheapest way adopted in that market, at the request of deft., the iron bought for him, & advice notes of all the transactions were sent to deft., who had been for some years engaged in similar transactions. The iron was ultimately sold at a loss, & adverse differences were put to deft.'s debit. In an action by the brokers for balance of account deft. contended with regard to purchase for average prices that the brokers had failed to make contracts

i. Winnipeg grain market—Broker acting as principal.—Deft. wrote to pltf., grain dealers, authorising them to sell oats for 37 per cent. or better, & pltf., who, unknown to deft., were also brokers on the Winnipeg Exchange, sold at 38½ per cent. without disclosing deft.'s name. Deft. refused to deliver, & pltf. had to buy elsewhere at an advance to fulfil their contract, according to Winnipeg Exchange rules. In an action to recover the difference in price:—Held: pltf. were not entitled to bind deft. under the Winnipeg

1918. — Voluntary payment insufficient.]—

Where a broker contracts on behalf of a principal for sale of stock at a future day, & the principal afterwards refuses to make good the bargain, the broker cannot by a voluntary payment of the difference make himself the principal's creditor & recover the amount so paid on an implied assumpsit, but he must show he was under some sort of compulsion, as by the usage of the Stock Exchange, to pay the differences.—*CHILD v. 1919. — Resolution passed after transaction—

Not binding on principal.]—A transaction was completed on Mar. 27. Subsequently the Stock Exchange Committee passed a resolution in regard to forged certificates of the particular stock involved in the transaction. In pursuance of this resolution, the seller's brokers paid moneys to the purchasers in excess of the sums for which they had sold the certificates:—Held: (1) no difference was produced by the Stock Exchange resolution, it being made subsequently to the transaction & there being no rule of the Stock Exchange at the time of sale which required brokers to be bound in respect of their contracts by any resolutions to be made on the subject; (2) the brokers could not recover the above moneys from the seller.—WESTROPP v. SOLOMON, No. 1873, ante.

1920. — ———.]—A jobber failed to deliver stock to the purchaser's broker within the time limit imposed by the Stock Exchange Rules, & the purchaser repudiated the contract. The Stock Exchange Committee subsequently passed a resolution calling on the purchaser's broker to pay for the stock. In an action by the broker against his principal for the sum so paid:—Held: the broker could not recover, notwithstanding the Stock Exchange resolution, which could not make valid a contract already broken.—BENJAMIN v. BARNETT (1903), 19 T. L. R. 564; 8 Com. Cas. 244.

1922. Corn market—Payment of loss.]—Pltfs., brokers in American wheat carrying on business in London, were instructed by deft. in Aug. to sell on the American market 8,000 bushels of wheat for delivery in the following May. Pltfs. carried out the sale through a broker at New York & sent to deft. a sold note containing a condition that, if at any time the market went against deft., pltfs.

should be entitled to require more cover, & in case such cover was not provided to close the bargain. Cover having been several times required & paid, deft. finally failed to comply with a request for further cover, & pltfs. closed the bargain at a loss of £191. The rules of the American wheat market were practically the same as those of the London Stock Exchange:—Held: (1) the broker at New York was an agent of pltfs., employed by deft.'s authority; (2) by the rules of the American market the New York broker was entitled to be indemnified by pltfs.; (3) deft. must, in his turn, indemnify pltfs.—HANNAN v. BEETON (1889), 5 T. L. R. 703, C. A.

1923. Liverpool market—Shares not delivered—

Differences.]—Deft., who resided some distance from Liverpool, authorised pltf., a broker there, to sell certain shares for him. Pltf. sold them to C., another broker of Liverpool. The shares not being delivered on the day, C. bought other shares similar in description & amount at the market price & claimed the difference between the contract & the market price. Pltf. paid him the difference & brought an action for money paid to recover this sum. It was proved to be the usage amongst brokers at Liverpool to be responsible to each other upon these contracts, of which usage deft. was cognisant:—Held: deft. was liable.—BAYLIFFE (BAILIFF) v. BUTTERWORTH (1847), 1 Exch. 425; 5 Ry. & Can. Cas. 283; 17 L. J. Ex. 78; 10 L. T. O. S. 167; 11 Jur. 1019.

1925. Lloyd's—Usage of.]—By the usage of Lloyd's, premiums of insurance are matters of account between the underwriter & the broker, & between the broker & the assured, without any privity between the assured & the underwriter. The broker has a claim, & is entitled to recover not for money paid but for work & labour done, upon the assured for the amount of the premium as soon as the policy is effected, whether he has paid the underwriter or not, & whether the underwriter has, by the policy, confirmed the premium to be paid, or has taken the covenant of the broker to pay it.

By the course of dealing the broker has an account with the underwriter: in that account the broker gives the underwriter credit for the premium when the policy is effected, & he, as agent of both the assured & the underwriter, is considered as having paid the underwriter, & the underwriter as having lent it to the broker again & thus becoming his creditor. The broker is then considered as having paid the premium for the assured. The fact of giving credit in account by the broker to the underwriter & the underwriter by the terms of the policy having acknowledged receipt of the premium are equivalent to actual payment (PARKE, J.).—*POWER v. These transactions were carried out according to the rules of the Exchange, & deft. knew & intended that they should be done in this manner, & from time to time placed money in pltfs.' hands as margins to protect them against losses:—Held: as the evidence failed to 1927. Sugar market—Transfer of fire risk.—(On May 14, 1861, pltf., a broker, bought for deft. at a public sale 3 lots of sugar in bags, the lots being respectively numbered 67, 68, & 69, the prompt day being July 20. By the terms of sale payment was to be made either by cash on July 20, by acceptance at 70 days from the day of sale, or on delivery of the warrants, interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum being allowed to the expiration of 73 days from the day of sale, if payment were made within 21 days. On May 25 pltf. (according to the usage of the trade), at deft.'s request, paid the price of lot 67, obtained a warrant for it, & cleared it at the Custom House. He at the same time, but without any special instructions from deft., paid the price of lots 68 & 69, & obtained the warrants for them. The effect of this payment was that risk of loss by fire was transferred from the seller to the buyer. It was proved to be the common course for brokers, when so employed to clear before prompt one of several lots of sugar in bags bought under one contract, to pay the price & obtain warrants for all the lots, the broker taking discount under the conditions of sale. Deft. not only knew this was the common course among brokers & had been pursued in former instances in relation to sugars bought for him by pltf., but he was informed by pltf.'s clerk shortly after May 25 that pltf. had so paid the price of lots 67 & 68, & obtained the warrants. On June 22 deft. sent instructions to pltf. to clear lot 68. On the same day, & before those instructions could in the usual course of business be acted upon, a fire broke out at the bonded warehouse where the sugars were deposited, & they were destroyed.—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover from deft. the money so paid by him in respect of lot 68 on May 25, as money paid to his use.—*SENTANCE v. 1928. Tallow market—Usage converting agent into principal.—Although a person who as principal employs a broker to transact business for him in a particular market is bound by the usage of that market, though unknown to him, provided the usage is one that merely regulates the mode of performing the contract & does not change the intrinsic character of the contract, yet where the usage is one which gives the broker an interest at variance with his duty, as by converting him into a principal instead of a mere agent to establish privity of contract between two principals, such a usage is not binding on a principal who, being ignorant of the usage, employs a broker to whom the usage is known to perform the ordinary & accustomed duties belonging to the office or employment of a broker. The principal is not bound to inquire what the usage may be, or whether there be any particular usage affecting the market in which he proposes to deal.

Applt., a Liverpool merchant, employed resps., brokers of London, to buy tallow for him in the London tallow market. They having other orders bought in their own name a quantity sufficient to cover all their orders, & by letter informed applt. that they had bought on his account so many tons, but did not mention the name of the seller. A few days after they sent him notice that they were ready to deliver to him so many casks of tallow in fulfilment or part fulfilment of his order, but did not allude to any third party as the seller. Applt. acknowledged the receipt of these notices without observation. There was a usage on the London tallow market for brokers when they received orders to contract in their own names, & if their principals refused to accept or deliver, to buy or sell against them, & charge them with the loss. Applt. was ignorant of this usage. On becoming aware of it, & of the mode in which his order had been executed, tallow having in the meantime fallen, he refused to take the tallow:—Held: (1) as resps. were employed to act as brokers only, the usage which converted them into principals was inconsistent with the employment, & as applt. was ignorant of it when he gave his orders, he was not bound by the usage; (2) as the first notice sent by the brokers was that they had bought on applt.'s account, he was not thereby put on inquiry as to the usage or as to the name of the seller; (3) he was not bound to accept when it turned out that his own brokers might in fact be the vendors, or to pay them the difference between the price at which they bought & that at which they sold in consequence of his having refused the contract.—ROBINSON v. MOLLETT, No. 1527, ante.

against acceptor, & on account stated, deft. pleaded generally to the whole declaration that he retained pltf. to act as his broker in London, & as such broker, to enter into contracts in London for deft., in purchase of stock & shares, & to pay in & about completing such contracts & purchases certain moneys; that, in pursuance of such retainer, pltf. did, as such broker in London, enter into certain contracts for purchase of shares, & did, by virtue of such retainer as such broker, & as incidental thereto, pay for deft., in & about completing such contracts & purchases, certain moneys; that pltf. was not at the time of the retainer & employment, & making such contracts & purchasing such shares, or paying such moneys, a broker duly licensed in London, & the bills were accepted by deft. & received by pltf. on account of money due from deft. to pltf., for his having as such broker entered into the contracts & paid such moneys, etc., on general demurrer:—Held: bad on the ground that the words "incidental thereto" were ambiguous, & it did not appear by the plea that the payment of the moneys therein mentioned was a necessary part of pltf.'s duty as broker; & as the contract in such case was not void, & although pltf. could not recover any recompense for his services, yet he was entitled to recover back the money he had paid at deft.'s request.—PIDGON v. Pltf. did so, but deft. refused to pay for them. Pltf. was sued for & paid the price & then brought an action against deft. for the amount thus paid, & also for his commission as a broker:—Held: (1) pltf. was a broker within 6 Anne, c. 16; (2) not being duly licensed, he was not entitled to recover any commission; (3) he might maintain his action for money which by the usage of the market he had been obliged to pay to the seller, there being nothing to show that payment was made in pursuance of any illegal contract, or that it was a necessary part of the duty of a broker as such to pay the money.—SMITH v. LINDO (1858), 5 C. B. N. S. 587; 27 L. J. C. P. 335; 141 E. R. 237; sub nom. LINDO v. SMITH, 32 L. T. O. S. 62; 4 Jur. N. S. 974; 6 W. R. 748, Ex. Ch.

Auctioneer—Ignorance of legal requirements.]—An auctioneer was employed to sell an estate, the lowest price of which was fixed by the owner & written down by him on a piece of paper which was put under a candlestick at the time of sale, with the privity of the auctioneer, but not signed by the owner, nor any notice in writing given to the auctioneer of the price so set down, nor had the auctioneer given the previous notice of the sale to the collector of the duty, as required by 19 Geo. 3, c. 56 (repealed by S. L. R. 1861), & 28 Geo. 3, c. 37 (repealed by Revenue Act, 1889 (c. 42), s. 36; but being asked at the sale whether he had taken the proper precautions to avoid the duty in case there were no sale, he said that it was his mode to fix a price under the candlestick, & if the bidding did not come up to that price, there was no sale or duty:—Held: the duty having attached though there were no sale, for want of taking the precautions required of the owner by the Acts under such circumstances, & the auctioneer having been sued for the duty on his bond to the Crown & compelled to pay it, he could not recover it over against the owner, he having warranted that proper precautions had been taken to prevent the duty attaching in the event, though both parties were mistaken in the law.—CAPP v. The seller being fearful of purchaser's credit, procured the broker to delay the arrival of the goods till the month's credit had expired & to tender them to the buyer on payment of the price, whereupon they were refused. In an action for money paid:—Held: the broker could neither recover the price, duties, nor commission.—HURST v. HOLDING (1810), 3 Taunt. 32; 128 E. R. 13.

They had in fact delivered about half of that quantity to H., relying on a custom of the port of Liverpool of giving orders for immediate use preference over orders for speculation:—Held: (1) A. was not

1939. Merchant disobeying instructions.]—Deft., a Liverpool cotton merchant, on Apr. 2, 1872, authorised plffs., merchants at Liverpool & Bombay, to purchase 100 bales S. cotton at 8d. per lb., to be shipped by sailing vessel, & to draw for invoice amount at 6 months' sight, which drafts deft. engaged to accept, with shipping documents attached, & to pay same. On Apr. 22 plffs. wrote from Bombay that the S. cotton would be shipped as soon as it arrived there. On June 14 plffs. wrote again from Bombay, inclosing invoice of 100 bales S. cotton at 8½d. per lb., & informing deft. that they had drawn upon him at 6 months' sight for the amount. On July 2, before receiving plffs.' letter & invoice of June 14, deft. wrote to plffs.' Liverpool house that he had waited more than a reasonable time, & that he declined to have anything more to do with the cotton. On July 10 deft. received plffs.' letter & invoice of June 14, & wrote again to plffs.' Liverpool house, calling attention to the price charged in the invoice, & refusing acceptance of their draft. The following day plffs. apologised for what they called the clerical error in the price, said they were prepared to rectify the mistake, & also tendered other cotton shipped at the time deft. wished. Deft. refused to have anything more to do with the matter. In an action for payment for this cotton:—Held: in the circumstances plffs. could not recover.—JEFFERSON v. QUERNER (1874), 30 L. 1940. Stockbroker—Negligence.]—A holder of stock desiring to sell, inquired from a broker the price ex dividend. The broker quoted the official price, which was cum dividend, but did not mention this fact through negligence. The holder believing that this was the price ex dividend, authorised the broker to sell. The broker having in due course to pay to purchaser the amount of the dividend, sought to recover this sum from the seller:—

sold out through the association secretary & sued for differences:—Held: the broker had not proved he ever entered into real transactions of purchase & sale, & therefore he had not in fact fulfilled his instructions, & the action must be dismissed.—*GILLIES v. 1941. Losses occasioned by agent's insolvency—Not arising out of agency.]—Plffs., brokers on the London Stock Exchange, bought for deft. (who was not a member of the Stock Exchange) certain shares for the account of July 15, 1870, & on that day, by his instructions, carried them over to the account of July 29, & paid differences amounting to £1,688. Deft. & various others, principals of plffs., not having paid the amount due from them in respect of contracts for July 15, plffs. became defaulters, & on the 18th, in conformity with the rules of the Stock Exchange, they were declared defaulters, & their transactions were closed, & accounts were made up at the prices current on that day. On the closing of the accounts a further sum became due from them in respect of differences upon the contracts carried over by them for deft. In an action to recover this sum & the £1,688:—Held: deft. was not liable for anything beyond the £1,688, there being no implied promise by a principal to his agent to indemnify him for loss caused, not by reason of his having entered into the contracts which he was authorised to enter into by the principal, but by reason of his own insolvency brought on by want of means to meet his other primary obligations.—*DUNCAN v. 1942. —When direct result of principal's failure.]—Messrs. C., brokers on the London Stock Exchange, on behalf of H., entered into contracts for the purchase of stocks to be completed on July 15, 1870. On July 12 they wrote to H., to the effect that unless he paid them on the 15th a balance (which consisted of the difference between the contract price of the stock, & the value thereof at the market price of the day) owing to them from him, they would be defaulters: but that if such payment were made, they would sell or continue the stocks as he thought fit. H. promised to pay, & directed them to deal with the stocks as they thought best, & they sold part & continued part. H. did not pay on the 15th, but shot himself; on the next day a bank of which he was a partner stopped payment, & on the 19th he died. On the 16th Messrs. C. were (solely by means of H.'s failure to pay them) declared defaulters on the Stock Exchange, & ceased to be members of that body, & in accordance with the rules, all their transactions for H. were closed, & all the stocks they had continued for H. were sold at the price of the day. In consequence of the value of the stocks having into harbour in the night came in collision with & sank a schooner, the owner of which recovered damages against plff. for negligence. In an action by plff. against deft. for indemnity, the declaration alleged, & it was proved, that towing vessels was a dangerous business, & that the danger was much increased by the loss of the rudder. It replaced the rudder, & need not have entered the harbour in the night:—Held: plff. must be presumed to have known that he was doing an unlawful act, & there was no implied contract by deft. to indemnify him against loss.—LEAVITT v. PARKS (1851), 2 All. 282.—CAN.

C. had not paid their debts in full, they were entitled to prove against H.'s estate for the increased balance appearing due to them after the sales were effected.—*LACEY (LACY) v. —Deft. employed pltf., a broker on the Stock Exchange, to purchase shares, which he did. Before the settling day pltf. became a defaulter on the Stock Exchange through inability to meet his engagements, & in accordance with the rules, the accounts which he had open were closed as between himself & the jobbers at the then current prices as fixed by the official assignees of the Stock Exchange. The account in respect of the shares bought for deft. when closed, as above mentioned, showed a balance in favour of the jobbers against pltf. According to the practice of the Stock Exchange, such closing of the account did not affect the client, if he desired to have the contract completed & was not in default to the defaulting broker; & the jobber in that case was bound to complete on the settling day. Pltf., on the same day when he was declared a defaulter & his accounts closed, subsequently informed deft. that he could either have the contract completed as above mentioned, or he might accept the official prices. Deft. said he would do the latter:—Held: deft. having ratified the closing of the account before the settling-day, was liable to indemnify pltf. against the amount for which pltf. was liable to the jobbers on such closing.

In these circumstances, the case seems to me to fall within the ordinary rule by which a principal is bound to indemnify his agent (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—HARTAS v. RIBBONS (1889), 22 Q. B. D. 254; 58 L. J. Q. B. 187; 37 W. R. 278; 5 T. L. R. 200, C. A.

1944. Principal not bound where no express stipulation.]—Where two parties mutually agree, for a fixed period, the one to employ the other as his sole agent in a certain business at a certain place, the other that he will act in that business for no other principal at that place, there is no implied condition that the business itself shall be continued to be carried on during the period named.

A. & B. agreed "in consideration of the services & payments to be mutually rendered" that for 7 years, or as long as A. should continue to carry on business at the town of L., A. should be sole agent at L. for sale of B.'s coals & B. would not employ any other agent at L. for that purpose. There were stipulations in the agreement that B. should have entire control over the prices for which, & credits at which, the coals were to be sold; & if A. could not sell a certain amount per year, or B. could not supply a certain amount per year, either party might, on notice, put an end to the agreement. At the end of 4 years B. sold the colliery itself. In an action by A. for damages for breach of the agreement thereby occasioned:—Held: the action was not maintainable; for the agreement did not bind the colliery owner to keep his colliery, or to do more than employ the agent in the sale of such coals as he sent to L.—*RHODES v. 1945. ——In determining whether under a contract by which a person is appointed to act as agent for a principal for a fixed period a term is to be implied that the principal will do nothing voluntarily to put an end to his business during that period, the first thing to be considered is the language used by the parties. A term which has not been expressed by the parties will not be implied because the ct. thinks it is a reasonable term, but only if the ct. thinks it is necessarily implied in the nature of the contract the parties have made. After about 2 years deft.'s factory was burnt down, & he did not resume business, & therefore did not employ pltf., who brought an action for damages for breach of contract.—Held: (1) the action was maintainable; (2) pltf. was entitled to substantial damages, for deft., having agreed to employ him for 5 years, did not fulfil that agreement unless he sent him a reasonable amount of samples to enable him to earn his commission; (3) deft. was not excused from fulfilling his agreement by the destruction of his factory by fire.—*TURNER v. The fourth clause thereof ran as follows: "All we shareholders having agreed to make this settlement, that in return for the trouble you have been at in getting up this factory we have appointed you for life the agent or broker of this factory, as to that it is to be understood as follows: Whatever cotton may have to be purchased for this factory do you purchase; & whatever yarn may be made in this factory, all that do you sell: & for whatever you may sell on account of the factory do you duly receive from this co. the commission at the rate of 5 per cent. during your lifetime." A decree for dissolution & winding up of the co-partnership having been obtained by some of the co-partners on the ground that it could not be carried on profitably, applt. contended that he was entitled to compensation in respect of his engagement.—Held: there being no agreement by the co-partners to renounce their right of dissolution, or to pay compensation if they exercised such right, even if the partnership were originally intended to exist during applt.'s life, applt. was not entitled to compensation.—*COWAR-JEE NANABHOY v. Where a traveller, having received part of a bill due to his employer in cash & set off the balance against a debt due from himself to debtor, renders to his employer an account of the cash, but omits to mention the set-off:—Seemle: this is not a good ground of discharge, unless done fraudulently & wilfully.—*WILLETS v. 1962. — Disobedience & misappropriation.—A. was engaged by B. to conduct the business of a shipping agent for 2 years. It was the duty of A. in the course of his employment to pay freight, dock dues, etc., to meet which B. remitted the necessary funds. A. wrote to B. for a remittance of £140, including an account of the purposes for which the money was required, one of them being payment of £30 salary due to himself; 10 days afterwards B. sent A. £100, directing him to apply the money for business purposes. A. having appropriated £30 of the money in satisfaction of his salary, B. discharged him. In an action for wrongful dismissal, B. justified it on the ground of A.'s having wrongfully & improperly misappropriated the money, & wrongfully & improperly disobeyed B.'s orders to apply the money to business purposes. The jury having found for pltf.:—Held: (1) the judge at the trial rightly left it to the jury to say whether pltf. had been guilty of any wrongful or improper misappropriation of the money entrusted to him, or of any wrongful or improper disobedience of orders; (2) the judge was not bound to tell the jury that it was not necessary to justify the dismissal that pltf. should have been guilty of any moral delinquency.—*SMITH v. 1963. — Breach of agency agreement.—By a written agreement under which A. was appointed surveyor or agent of B. for 2½ years, it was provided that A. should not receive any money on B.'s behalf, & if he did so the agreement should immediately determine. To an action against B. for dismissing A. before expiration of the term:—Held: the receipt by A. of deposit money from persons to whom he had agreed to let houses on account of B., was a breach of the agreement & a cause of dismissal.—*BRAY v. 1964. — Bankruptcy.—The bkpy. of an agent is not per se a defence to an action for wrongful dismissal, even though the agent is to receive moneys on account of his principal. The fitness of the agent to perform his duties is a question for a jury.—MCCALL v. AUSTRALIAN MEAT CO., LTD. (1870), 19 W. R. 188.

1959 i. Justification of dismissal.—Misrepresentations.—Defts. appointed pltf. their sales agent with exclusive right to handle their coal for five years at 50 cents per ton commission on all coal sold. Pltf. claimed damages for breach of the agreement, & defts. counterclaimed for rescission & damages on account of pltf.'s misconduct & for an account, the misconduct relied on by defts. being a misrepresentation as to the cost of mining the coal made to two of the co-directors, at a time when pltf. was a director & general manager of defts.—Held: he stood in a fiduciary relation to defts., & the representations having been the inducement to defts. to enter into the contract they were entitled to rescind it. Imperial Mercantile Credit Asscn. v. Coleman (1873), L. R. 6 H. L. 189; Gibson v. Jeyes (1861), 6 Ves. 266; Adam v. Newbigging (1888), 13 App. Cas. 308, cited.—DENMAN v. CLOVER BAR COAL ASSCO. (1912), 22 W. L. R. 128; 7 D. L. R. 96; affd. 48 S. C. R. 318.—CAN.

1959 ii. Failure to produce business.—A firm of manufacturers gave the agency for sale of their goods in a certain district to a commission agent on the following terms: "We agree to pay you monthly at the rate of £200 per annum, & to allow you 5 per cent. on all sales of biscuits . . . above £300 per month, this to be calculated on the whole year, at the end of the first year, & according to arrangement thereafter." At the end of two months the firm wrote to the agent stating that as his sales were so much less than he had led them to expect, "on the strength of which we guaranteed you commission on sales £300 per month," they "could not continue the guarantee" beyond one month. The agent stated in reply that his engagement was for one year, & that he had not said or implied that he could within a month or two effect sales of £300 per month. After the end of the third month the firm gave the agent notice that his services would not be required beyond the current month. In an action by the agent for damages for illegal dismissal:—Held: the agreement was an agreement for one year at least, & pursuer entitled to damages for breach of contract.—DOWLING v. HENDERSON & SON (1890), 17 R. 921; 27 Sc. L. R. 738.—SCOT.

1966. — Agency not profitable.]—By an agreement between A. & B. & Co. it was provided (inter alia) that A., who was appointed B. & Co.'s agent, might combine with B. & Co.'s agency an agency for C. until such period within 2 years as A. should, subject to B. & Co.'s approval, accept a third agency, B. & Co. to pay A. till then a specified salary, & A. in return to devote his time & attention to B. & Co.'s business; any alteration in the terms to the agreement were to be made in a specified manner by mutual consent. The agency not proving profitable, B. & Co. determined pltf.'s employment before the expiration of 2 years, paying A. salary to the date when the employment was determined. In an action by A. for damages for breach of the agreement:—Held: (1) if not an express it was an implied term of the agreement that B. & Co. should employ A. for 2 years; (2) A. was entitled to recover.—NIELANS v. CUTHBERTSON (1891), 7 T. L. R. 516.

1967. — Failure to produce business.]—Defts. were appointed by pltf.s. for a term of years sole agents in Spain for sale of bicycles, depôts to be established in the principal towns. Defts. failed to establish sufficient depôts or stock them in an adequate manner:—Held: pltf.s. were justified in terminating the appointment before expiration of the term.—HUMBER & Co. v. FOX & Co. (1894), 11 T. L. R. 12.

1968. Consequences of dismissal—Loss of profits.]

—A count in a declaration in assumpsit set forth an agreement between an attorney & solr. & a co. that "from Jan. then next, pltf. as the attorney & solr. of the co. should receive a salary of £100 per annum, in lieu of rendering an annual bill of costs for general business transacted by him for the co. as such attorney & solr., & should for such salary advise & act for the co. on all occasions, in all matters connected with the co." (the prosecuting & defending of suits, preparing bonds, & some other matters for which he was to be allowed the regular charges, being excepted), " & that he should attend the secretary & board of directors when required." The count then alleged, "That in consideration that pltf. had, at the request of the co. promised to perform his part of the agreement, the co. promised pltf. to perform their part & to retain & employ him as such attorney & solr. of the said co. on the terms aforesaid." The count then alleged for breach that "though for a small space of time the co. did retain & employ pltf. as such attorney & solr. on the terms aforesaid, & did pay him a small part of the salary, & though he was always ready & willing to advise & act for the co. & to accept the salary on the terms aforesaid & in all other respects to fulfil the agreement on his part, yet the co. disregarding, etc., did not, nor would continue to, retain or employ pltf. as such attorney or solr. on the terms aforesaid, but, on the contrary, in May wrongfully dismissed & discharged pltf. from such employment & retainer, & then & from thence hitherto have wholly refused to retain or employ him as such attorney & solr. of the said co. & to pay him the salary as aforesaid, by reason of which last-mentioned premises pltf. has wholly lost & been deprived of the salary, & also of divers great gains & profits which he might & otherwise would have derived from such employment in & about the prosecuting & defending of suits & preparing bonds etc." After a verdict for pltf. with £200 damages:—Held: (1) the count did sufficiently allege a consideration for the promise to retain & employ pltf. as attorney & solr.; (2) the consideration was not exhausted by the promise on the part of the co. to perform the agreement.—EMMENS v. ELDERTON (1853), 13 C. B. 495; 4 H. L. Cas. 624; 22 L. T. O. S. 1; 18 Jur. 21; 10 E. R. 606, H. L.

1969. — Dismissal involving loss of house.]—The managers of a religious society appointed an agent at a salary with "6 months' notice of separation on either side," liberty to occupy & carry on his trade in a house belonging to the society, & afterwards summarily dismissed him for alleged misconduct, & resumed possession of the house, of which they were afterwards forcibly dispossessed by the agent:—Held: an injunction must be granted to restrain the agent from disturbing their possession.—SPURGIN v. 1970. — —.]—A testator by will devised his property upon certain trusts to trustees whom he also appointed exors., & by a codicil willed as follows: "I appoint K. my agent, at a salary of £150 a year, to live in my house called the H., for which such salary he must do my business & business of my exors. & trustees, & not be employed in the service of any other person or persons; to live rent free as long as he continues to be my agent, that is, as long as he does my business honestly & to the satisfaction of my exors. & trustees, or any one of them." K., having refused to deliver up certain leases to the trustees & otherwise to obey their directions, was dismissed from the agency by one of the trustees, such dismissal being afterwards approved by the other of them, but he declined to give up possession of the house called H., & upon ejectment by the trustees against him:—Held: (1) the utmost interest which K. had in the house was an estate so long as he did the business of the trustees honestly & to their satisfaction; (2) the direction in the codicil amounted only to a recommendation to the trustees to continue him as agent; (3) they were the judges whether or not he had done the business to their satisfaction, the burden being on defts. to show that they had dismissed him capriciously, or maliciously, or without reasonable warrant.—BELANEY v. Pltf. sued for specific performance of this agreement, & moved for an injunction to restrain deft. from sending out circulars to customers representing that pltf. had ceased to be deft.'s agent:—Held: (1) cts. of eq. declined to enforce specific performance of a contract of agency, whatever the consideration or terms of the contract; (2) pltf. had no case for an injunction.—BERTRAM v. BALL (1882), 27 Sol. Jo. 39.

1974. — —.]—An agreement for the employment of a manager of a business contained a clause providing that the employer would not, except in case of misconduct or breach of agreement, require the manager to leave his employ. The employer gave to the manager notice purporting to determine the agreement & the service created thereby, & the manager brought an action for an injunction to restrain the employer from acting on the notice:—Held: (1) the clause above mentioned, though negative in form, was affirmative in substance, being equivalent to a stipulation by the employer that he would retain the manager in his employ; (2) an injunction ought not to be granted.—DAVIS v. FOREMAN, [1894] 3 Ch. 654; 64 L. J. Ch. 187; 43 W. R. 168; 8 R. 725.

1975. — Collateral agreement by agent to invest.]—By the articles of assocn. of a limited co. pltf. was appointed agent of the co. in India, & it was provided that he was to take a number of the shares. The directors persuaded him to resign, on condition that he should be freed from all liability on the shares, but they found afterwards they could not legally carry out this condition. They, however, insisted on dismissing pltf., & brought an action against him for the amount due on the shares. Upon a bill filed to restrain the dismissal of pltf., or, in the alternative, the action:—Held: defts. being willing to undertake not to set up the voluntary resignation of pltf., the whole matter was one to be tried at law, as the ct. could not enforce the agreement as to the agency.—MAIR v. HIMALAYA (HIMALAYAN) TEA CO. (1865), L. R. 1 Eq. 411; 13 L. T. 586; 11 Jur. N. S. 1013; 14 W. R. 165.

1976. — —.]—A., upon his appointment as agent to a limited assurance co., agreed to take shares upon the terms that the payment for them should be deducted from his commission as agent, & no deposit was ever paid by him upon them, but he was registered as the holder of the shares. The co., very soon after his appointment, dismissed him, as he contended, wrongfully. On the winding up of the co.:—Held: (1) the co.'s cancellation of A.'s appointment as agent, whether justifiable or not, could not operate as a cancellation of A.'s agreement to become a shareholder; (2) subject to any question of account as to payment for the shares, A. was liable as a contributory.—*Re LIFE ASSOCN. 1973 i. Refusal of specific performance of agency agreement — & of injunction.]—An agreement, dated Aug. 26, 1874, was entered into between a co. & M. F. & Co., the exors., administrators, & assigns for the time being constituting the partnership firm of M. F. & Co., whereby it was agreed that the firm should be agents to the co. for twenty-five years to buy & sell, etc., & particularly to exercise all the powers contained in art. 98 of the articles of assocn., i.e., full power & authority to appoint & employ, in or for the purposes of the transaction & management of the affairs & business of the co., such solrs. as they should think proper. C. & B. were duly appointed solrs. to the co., & acted as such for a considerable time. M. F., one of the members of the firm of M. F. & Co., died in the middle of Mar., 1876. On Aug. 8, 1881, a resolution was passed at a board meeting to the effect that as C. & B., the co.'s solrs., were also the solrs. of the agents, it was desirable, for the interest of the co., that a change should be made, & that H. C. & L. be appointed solrs. of the co. M. F. & Co. sued the co., & prayed for an injunction against defts. to restrain them from committing any breach of the agreement of Aug. 26, 1874, & in particular from carrying into effect the resolution appointing H. C. & L. as solrs. for the co., & to restrain them from doing anything inconsistent with the memorandum & articles of assocn.:—Held: inasmuch as the ct. would not, by a decree for specific performance or by injunction, compel the co. to retain pltf. in the confidential position of agents, it would not restrain defts. or the co. from appointing a solr., which was only a violation of what was ancillary or incidental to the principal part of the contract, viz., the agreement that pltf. should be the agents of the co. for twenty-five years.—NOSSERWANJI v. GORDON (1881), 1 L. R. 6 Bom. 266.—IND.

1977 i. Agent's remedies—Damages.]—Deft., by agreement in the nature of a letter of attorney, constituted pltf. & his descendants his hereditary agents, with authority to collect rents, & promised to pay him an annual salary out of the rents. On an improper revocation of this agency pltf. sued for specific performance & arrears of salary:—Held: the appointment was valid without valuable consideration passing, but the remedy was for damages for breach of contract, & without a valuable consideration the agreement would be nudum pactum, & pltf. would not be entitled to recover, except for work & services actually rendered.—*VISHNUCHARYA v. Deft. maintained that M. had arranged that pltf. would pay him $1,000 in consideration of his giving up the agency, & in settlement of all claims arising out of the dismissal. The evidence showed that deft. was not guilty of any misconduct which would have justified his dismissal:—Held: the dismissal was not justified, & it was only reasonable that deft. should stipulate for some consideration before giving up his agency.—*MCCARTHY v. Defts. terminated the employment of pltf., but continued to do business with customers who had been introduced to them by pltf. during the period of his employment. Defts. contended that they were not liable to pay commission to pltf. on such business:—Held: (1) there had been a breach of the contract under which pltf. had been employed, for which breach defts. were liable to pay a lump sum as damages; (2) the damages were such a sum as pltf. might reasonably have expected to have earned if his relations with defts. had continued; (3) in assessing the damages regard must be had to the chances of human life, the vicissitudes of trade, the probability of the customers continuing to deal with defts., & other similar considerations.—*FAULKNER v. At the end of one year defts. sent their agent-general to England with authority to revoke the agreement, which he did by notice in writing sent through the London post to pltf. at their place of business. An action for breach of contract was commenced & an order for service out of the jurisdiction was obtained. On appeal from the refusal of a judge at chambers to set aside the writ & subsequent proceedings:—Held: (1) there was to be implied from the agreement a contract by defts. not to do anything to prevent pltf. from acting as their representatives in England during the agreed term; (2) the action was founded on a breach within the jurisdiction of a contract which according to the terms thereof ought to be performed within the jurisdiction; (3) order for service

We will forward your commission quarterly. This refers to orders executed." Defts. terminated this agreement without giving any notice, & pltf. brought an action to recover damages. At the trial pltf. tendered evidence of a custom in the glove trade that 6 months' notice must be given to terminate the agency of a commission agent:—Held: (1) evidence of the alleged custom, being inconsistent with the terms of the written agreement, was not admissible; (2) defts. were entitled to terminate the agency without notice.—*JOYNSON v. b. — Employment from year to year.]—A document appointing pltf. agent contained the following passage: "Remuneration allowed by the co. is a nominal salary of one shilling per annum payable in advance & commission as dealt with in separate circular":—Held: this constituted an employment from year to year, & if the service extended over the first year notice of its termination must expire at the end of a succeeding year.—*MACKENZIE v. On the prompt day, Mar. 18, plffs.' clerk lodged the order at the London office of the Docks Co., with this memorandum, "Hold within to our order, & have warrants made out as soon as possible." He was told that warrants would be ready with the goods on Mar. 20. Three hours later a messenger from the office reached the warrant office at the Dock House with a notice that the order had been lodged. Meanwhile B. & Co. stopped payment, & D. being so informed, & having no notice of plffs.' title, on the same day paid C. for the goods, & through a clerk, who reached the Dock House before the messenger had arrived, obtained at the warrant office a warrant for the goods in the name of C., who indorsed the same to D. & gave him a second delivery order. N. & Co. dealt on behalf of pltf. but this was not mentioned. Defts. paid for the chests & kept the India warrants, the goods remaining in the co.'s warehouse. Pltf., being informed of the purchase, paid N. & Co. N. & Co. afterwards directed defts. to sell the indigo & apply proceeds in reduction of a balance due to them from N. & Co., which was done, defts. not knowing that any other person had a claim to the goods & never having been paid, specifically, for the advance which they had made in respect of them. There had been a running account between N. & Co. & defts. for some time, during which defts. held a number of warrants for indigos purchased by them for N. & Co. & for which defts. had made advances. N. & Co. occasionally withdrew the warrants & at or near the same time paid in money to their account with defts. to about the value. There was no express agreement as to this, but an understanding that the warrants were not to be taken away upon credit. The payments were made & entered generally. Applts., stockbrokers in Edinburgh, claimed to retain in their hands an uncompleted transfer of shares purchased & paid for by resp. until a claim by applts. arising out of a subsequent transaction between them & resp. was satisfied:—Held: applts., as stockbrokers, had a general lien on the transfer in question until the claim against resp. was satisfied.—*HOPE & Co. v. B. Lien by Agreement.

(a) In General.

2005. Agreement conferring lien.—Not bill of sale.—By an agreement in writing between a foreign manufacturer & his agent in E. it was provided that advances made by the agent should "be covered & secured by the stock of goods which shall be in his hands," which the foreign principal bound himself not to let fall below a certain value. The principal terminated the agency & claimed to remove the goods without satisfying the agent's claims for the expenses of the agency, & contended that the agreement was a bill of sale & void for want of registration:—Held: (1) the agreement gave no power to seize the goods, but only to retain possession of the goods come to his hands; (2) when the goods came to the agent's hands he had possession coupled with an agreement which gave him a legal, not an equitable, right; (3) the agreement was not void as a bill of sale.—MORRIS v. DELOBBEL-FLIPO (DE FORBEL-FLIPO), [1892] 2 Ch. 352; 61 L. J. Ch. 518; 66 L. T. 320; 40 W. R. 492; 36 Sol. Jo. 347.

2007. Factor becoming surety.—A factor who becomes surety for his principal has a lien on the price of goods, sold by him for his principal, to the amount or the sum for which he has so become surety.—DRINKWATER v. GOODWIN (1775), 1 Cowp. 251; 98 E. R. 1070.

(b) Whether Lien excluded by Agreement or other Circumstances.

2008. Agreement to sell & pay over proceeds.—If A. deposits goods with B. for sale, & B. promises to pay the proceeds to A. when sold, B. has no lien on them (if not sold) for the balance of his general account arising upon other articles.

The lien which a factor has on the goods of his principal arises upon an agreement which the law implies; but where there is an express stipulation to the contrary it puts an end to the general rule of law (LORD KENYON, C.J.).—WALKER v. BIRCH (1795), 6 Term Rep. 258; 101 E. R. 541.

2009. —[.]—An agreement by a broker, that he will sell goods for his principals & pay over the proceeds without setting off a debt due from the principals to him does not deprive the broker of his right of lien or set-off. If he also agrees not to set off a debt due from a prior firm, which, by a previous letter, the principals had agreed to pay him, they having assumed the funds of that firm, the letter & agreement must be set against each other, & the broker will not be allowed to set off that debt against the proceeds of the goods.—McGILLIVRAY v. SIMSON (1826), 9 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 35; 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 53.

2010. Course of business.—The lien of a broker upon policies of insurance which he has effected, & on which he has paid the premiums, may be superseded by a special arrangement or contract, or by his particular mode of dealing with the parties for whom he has effected them. Where he has merely agreed to state monthly accounts & to receive monthly payments, but has never delivered up the policies until after actual payment made to him, his general right of lien is not superseded in any way by this special arrangement. This is so though he has effected the policies through an intermediary, whom he knew to be an intermediary & not the principal, who has received payment from the principal, but has not paid the broker.—FISHER v. SMITH (1878), 4 App. Cas. 1; 48 L. J. Q. B. 411; 39 L. T. 430; 27 W. R. 113, H. L. Annotation:—Consd. & Expld. Hope v. Glendinning, [1911] A. C. 419.

2011. Express instructions.—The general lien of a consignee upon goods consigned to him cannot be set up by him against positive directions given him by the consignor; & if he accepts a consignment accompanied by such general directions he is bound to apply it in accordance with them.

Defts. opened an account with B. & Co., merchants abroad, upon which B. & Co. were to draw in the usual way, remitting such bills as they might draw, but the accounts were to be kept at all times fully covered. B. & Co. were also agents for plfts., & having disposed in their behalf of goods belonging to them, they received in payment certain articles of merchandise which they consigned to defts., transmitting them the bills of lading, & at the same time informing them they had drawn against that cargo bills of exchange in favour of plfts. Defts. did not accept those bills, & upon the arrival of the vessel they took possession of the cargo, sold it, & applied the proceeds to the discharge of a general balance due to them from the firm of B. & Co.:—Held: (1) defts. must have accepted the cargo with knowledge of the lien upon it in plfts.' favour, & of the bills of exchange drawn against it; (2) as between B. & Co. & plfts. such charge was effectual;

p. Agreement to place goods with agent for advances.] S., a principal, out of moneys advanced to him by his agent, as security for which he undertook to place in the agent's hands for sale, sugar to be imported from Batavia—the agent to repay his advances out of proceeds—sent a sum to H., his agent at Batavia, to buy sugar. After S.'s insolvency, H. purchased the sugar & sent it to S., & it was sold by his trustees in bkpy. The agent claimed a lien on the sugar:—Held: (1) the agent had no lien, S. not having agreed to invest the moneys advanced in any particular way; (2) S. having failed before the purchase by H., the sugar consigned was for the benefit of his trustees.—DEAN v. BYRNES (1864), 3 Moo. P. C. C. N. S. 92; 16 E. R. 35.—AUS.

q. Agent acting under del credere agreement.]—A mercantile agent having sold goods & taken the purchaser's bill, which he guaranteed & indorsed to the owner of the goods, & purchaser having become bkpt., & the owner having accepted a composition on the bill & delivered it up:—Held: the agent not entitled to withhold delivery of the goods from purchaser, till relieved of the effect of his guarantee.—STIRLING & SONS v. DUNCAN (1823), 1 Shaw's App. 389.—SCOT.

(3) debts, having knowledge of such charge, were bound either to decline the receipt of the cargo, or, if they received it, to treat it as so charged in pliffs.' favour; (4) debts from B. & Co. to debts. & the general lien, which but for this charge debts. would have had upon the cargo, were postponed to pliffs.' bills of exchange; (5) independently of the bills of exchange so made in pliffs.' favour, pliffs. would have been entitled to so much of the consignment as consisted of the goods delivered to B. & Co. in payment of the goods belonging to pliffs. which B. & Co. had sold.—*FRITH v. 2012. Express instructions to act in principal's name.—An agent intrusted with the possession of goods for the purpose of sale does not lose his character of factor, or the right of lien attached to it, by reason of acting under special instructions from his principal to sell the goods at a particular price & to sell in the principal's name.—*STEVENS v. 2013. Special purpose—Payment of dues.—A factor for the owner of a ship at an English port requests the master to deliver the certificate of registry to him, in order that he may pay the tonnage duties at the Custom House. He cannot, having thus obtained possession of the certificate, retain it as security for the general balance due to him as factor in respect of the ship.—BURN v. BROWN (1817), 2 Stark. 272.

2014. —Deposit for safe custody only.—Where a policy of insurance is left in the hands of an agent for safe custody only, the agent has no lien upon it, even though he has made advances without any other security than the policy; but it is otherwise if the policy was deposited with him as security for his advances.—MUIR v. FLEMING (1822), Dow. & Ry. N. P. 29.

2015. ——G. & Co., merchants & factors in London, acted as correspondents & agents of L. & Co., merchants in Hamburg. In June, 1857, L. & Co. requested G. & Co. to purchase Mexican bonds for them, & "hold them at our disposal." G. & Co. purchased the bonds & wrote to L. & Co. that they had drawn bills upon them for the amount which would balance the transaction. L. & Co. wrote to G. & Co., stating they would honour the bills, & "we request you in the meantime to keep the bonds in a safe custody, & give us the numbers of the same." G. & Co. replied, "We will, until further orders, retain for safe custody the Mexican bonds." The bills drawn by G. & Co. on account of this purchase were duly honoured. Shortly after G. & Co. stopped payment:—Held: (1) the correspondence showed a special agreement between the parties that the bonds were deposited for a particular purpose; (2) G. & Co. had no lien upon the bonds for a general balance.—BOCK v. GORRISSEN, No. 1993, ante.

2017. Only on goods in possession.—A factor has no lien on goods for a general balance, unless they come into his actual possession. 2018. —Goods left in vendor's possession.—On Oct. 15, 1817, debts, as brokers of A., purchased goods of B. & Co. on his account, & agreed with them that such goods should remain on their premises one month, free of rent, & after that time A. should pay rent until their removal. From Nov. 7 to 11 debts. shipped part of the goods by order of A., who directed the remainder to be left on B. & Co.'s premises till further orders. Shortly afterwards B. & Co. requested debts. to remove them, which they did not do, but on Dec. 9 & 10, without any direction from A. they removed them to their own premises, a docket having been previously struck against A. on the 6th & a commission issued on the 10th:—Held: (1) the possession continued in A.; (2) debts. had no lien on the goods for a general balance due from him to them as his brokers.—*TAYLOR v. 2017 iii. —Constructive possession of policy.—An agent effected an insurance for a principal on a vessel, the policy being made out in the name of the agent, but remaining in the possession of the insurance broker. On the sum in the policy becoming due through loss, both principal & agent claimed, the latter in respect of a balance alleged to be due to him by his principal:—Held: the agent had a lien over the policy for his general balance, such lien being equally effectual, whether the policy continued in the broker's custody or his own, the possession of the broker being taken as the possession of the agent.—*WILMOT v. along with goods belonging to himself, & an advance having been made by the agent to the third party on the consignment:—Held: as between the agent & the co-partner (1) the goods of the joint adventure were subject to a lien for money advanced at the time of consignment, but not to a lien for the general balance due by the third party to the agent; (2) the agent was entitled to apply them in extinction of the special advance, so as to enlarge his security over the goods of the third party for payment of the general balance.—*JOHNSTON & MANLEY v. B. accepted the bill. Before the vessel sailed C. stopped payment & sent the bill of lading, indorsed in blank to H., not informing him of his engagement with B. On arrival of the vessel H. sent the bill of lading to B., desiring him to act for him. B. paid the freight, & took possession of the cargo, which was seized by debtors, creditors of C. under a foreign attachment:—Held: B. had not such a property in the goods as to enable him to maintain trover against debtors.

If C. had authorised H. to employ a broker for sale of the goods, & H. had placed them in the hands of B. for the purpose of sale, the argument for pltf. might apply, but all that C. does is to authorise H. to sell, & he has no right to appoint a third person (PARKE, B.).—*BRUCE v. A. & Co. procured the insurance to be effected, & B. & Co. remitted them the premiums, the policy remaining in the hands of A. & Co.:—Held: A. & Co. not entitled to hold the policy as a lien for the general balance due to them, as factors, from B. & Co.—*DIXON v. 2023. — — — — —.]—T., a corn merchant at Longford, who had been in the habit of consigning cargoes of corn to pltf., as his factors for sale at Liverpool, & obtaining from them acceptances on the faith of such consignments, on Jan. 31 obtained from the masters of two canal boats (No. 604 & No. 54) receipts signed by them for full cargoes of oats therein stated to be shipped on board the boats deliverable to T.'s agent in Dublin, in care for & to be shipped to pltf., at Liverpool. At the time boat 604 was loaded, but no oats were then actually shipped on board boat 54. On Feb. 2 T. enclosed these receipts to pltf., & drew a bill on them against the value of the cargoes, which pltf., accepted on the 7th & paid when due. On Feb. 6 W., an agent of debt. who was T.'s factor for sale in London, arrived at Longford & pressed T. for security for previous advances. T. on that day gave W. an order on T.'s agent in Dublin to deliver to W. the cargoes of boats 604 & 54 on their arrival there. Boat 604 had then sailed from Longford, but boat 54 was only partially loaded. The loading was completed on the 9th, & T. then transmitted to W. in Dublin a receipt signed by the master of the boat (in the same form as those sent to pltf.) making the cargo deliverable to W. W. received this on the 10th. On their arrival in Dublin W. took possession of both cargoes for debt.:—Held: the property in the cargo of boat 604 vested in pltf., on their acceptance of the bill, & they were entitled to maintain trover for it, but they could not maintain trover for the cargo of boat 54, since none of it was on board, or otherwise specifically appropriated to pltf., when the receipt for that boat was given by the master. Qu.: whether a document, similar in form to a bill of lading, but given by the master of a boat navigating an inland canal, has the effect of such an instrument in transferring the property in the goods.—*BRYANS v. 2026. Lien on price though no possession of goods.]

—Where a factor is in advance for goods by actual payment, or where he sells under a del credere commission, whereby he becomes responsible for the price, he has a lien on the price, though he has parted with the possession of the goods (CHAMBRE, J.).—HOUGHTON v. MATTHEWS (1803), 3 Bos. & P. 485; 127 E. R. 263.

2027. Ship's papers.—Agent for sale of ship.]

Where A. commissioned B. to sell a ship for him, & having deposited her register with him for that purpose, became bkpt.:—Held: B. had a lien on the register against the assignees of A. for the amount of his demand against A., consisting partly of charges incurred on the ship's account, & partly of other charges.—MESTAER v. ATKINS (1814), 5 Taunt. 381; 1 Marsh. 76; 128 E. R. 737.

2028. Possession after bankruptcy of principal.]

An actual possession given to a factor by a carrier, by order of the shipper, after the latter's bkpcy., is not such a possession as will give him a lien against the assignees, although the goods were shipped on account of the factor, & bills had been accepted by him on the faith of it. Such an order rather operates to defeat his claim of lien, as being an act of ownership exercised by bkpt. Nor is a delivery to a master of a vessel, where the consignor has written to the consignee, apprising him that he has consigned to him, & requesting him, on the faith of such consignment, to accept bills (which he accepts & pays), such a constructive delivery to a consignee as will give him a lien against the assignees; it is not within the principle of the cases, which decide that an equitable right will supply the deficiency of an actual delivery in support of a well-founded lien not perfected by possession. Letters advising of a consignment of goods to a party who has accepted bills on the faith of such consignment are not equivalent in effect to bills of lading indorsed.—NICHOLS v. CLENT (1817), 3 Price, 547; 146 E. R. 348.

2029. Possession after secret act of bankruptcy.]

A trader, after a secret act of bkpcy., consigned goods to a factor, who agreed to advance money thereon, & accepted & paid bills drawn on him by the trader. A commission afterwards issued against the trader on such prior act of bkpcy., after which the factor sold the goods & received money:—Held: he was answerable to the assignees for the value of the goods.—COPLAND v. STEIN (1799), 8 Term Rep. 199; 101 E. R. 1344.

r. Advances to shipbuilders.—Custom-house expenses.]—Agents directed to contract to build a ship, so contracted, making advances to the builders, it being agreed that the principals should supply the rigging, which was delivered to the agents. The agents obtained a transfer of the ship & registered it in the name of one of their partners:—Held: the property in the rigging was the principal, but the agents had a lien on it for the advances made & for

of a land co., claimed to be the property of plffs. The board of directors of both plff. & deft. cos. were composed of same individuals, who also controlled the land co. Defts. acted as agent for the land co. in the handling of its bonds, & when certain of the bonds matured, as a temporary expedient took them up with money in part belonging to plffs. Later, the land co. being unable to redeem, a minute was put through the books of both cos., reciting that plffs. had purchased the bonds:—Held: plffs. were entitled to the bonds subject to defts.

2030. Debts contracted before relationship existed.]—A., a factor, having sold goods of B. in his own name to C., the latter, without paying for these goods, sent another parcel of goods to A. to sell for him, never having employed A. as a factor before. C. then became bkpt., & his assignees claimed the goods sent by him to A. which still remained unsold, tendering the charges upon those goods. A. refused to deliver them up, claiming a lien upon them for the price of the former goods sold by him to C., there being a balance then due from B. to himself:—Held: the assignees entitled to recover.

A factor has no general lien in respect of debts which arise prior to the time at which his character of factor commences. Liens of factors have been allowed for the convenience of trade & with a view to encourage factors to advance money upon goods in their possession, or which must come to their hands as factors; debts which are incurred prior to the existence of the relation of principal & agent are not contracted upon this principle (CHAMBRE, J.).—HOUGHTON v. 2031. Liabilities incurred without authority.—Goods delivered to broker as agent for principal.]

A broker purchasing goods for his principals, without their knowledge, added to the terms of purchase, which the principals had agreed to, a guarantee by himself of their bills. The goods were delivered to the broker, & the principals became bkpts.:—Held: the broker could neither detain the goods as upon a stoppage in transitu, nor had he any lien on them for the money he had paid on his guarantee.—(TURNERY v. SHARP (1812), 4 Taunt. 242; 128 E. R. 322.

A., in New Brunswick, employed B., an agent in London, to charter a number of vessels for the removal of a quantity of deals from the former place, which were to be consigned to B. for sale. A., in breach of the contract, consigned the ships & forwarded the bills of lading to C.:—Held: (1) B. had a lien on all the cargoes for the expenses & pecuniary loss actually incurred by him under the contract in respect of each of the vessels; (2) he was entitled to stay the proceeds of one of the cargoes, before it had been transmitted by the consignee to the shipper, until the whole of such expenses had been paid to him; (3) he was not entitled to any lien for commission or profits which he might have earned if the cargoes had been duly consigned to him.—

article with the added condition that title to the property, for which the note is given, shall remain in the vendor until the note is paid, is not a promissory note or negotiable instrument; & an agent who, having indorsed such instrument as surety to the vendor, pays the amount thereof upon default of the maker, is subrogated by law in the rights of the vendor & is entitled to the ownership of the property sold under agreement.—DORVAL v. 2033. Interest.]—The petitioners, factors of the bkpt., held a large quantity of sugars in their hands at the time of the bkpcy., on which they had a lien for £41,591 15s. 4d. & interest in respect of previous advances. They had deferred the sale of the sugars at the request of bkpt. before the bkpcy., & of the assignees afterwards, in expectation of a rising market; & the sugars were eventually sold to great advantage:—Held: petitioners entitled to apply the proceeds of the sugars in payment of the interest on their debt accruing after the bkpcy., & to prove for the balance of the principal without deduction being made in respect of the interest so received.—*Re LANCASTER, Ex p. Outstanding acceptances.]—A principal gave notice to his factor of an intended consignment of a ship to him for the purpose of sale, & in consequence drew bills on him, which the factor accepted. The principal died, & his exors. directed the captain of the ship to follow his former orders; the captain thereupon delivered the ship into the possession of the factor, who sold same:—Held: the factor had a lien upon the proceeds as well for the amount of money disbursed by him for the necessary use of the ship on its arrival, & for the acceptances by him actually paid, as for the amount of his outstanding acceptances not then due.—HAMMONDS v. BARCLAY (1802), 2 East, 227; 102 E. R. 356.

2035. —Winding up—Goods delivered up under order.]—W. was appointed agent of a co. for the sale of goods manufactured by the co. Part of the arrangement was that the co. should draw on W. against goods assigned to him as agent. W. accepted a bill for £200 at 4 months' date: before the bill arrived at maturity the co. was ordered to be wound up, & goods then in possession of W. were taken by the liquidators & sold by them. W. honoured the bill when it arrived at maturity:—Held: (1) W. had a lien on goods to the extent of the payment by him in respect of the bill; (2) he was entitled to be repaid the amount paid by him, out of the proceeds of the sale of the goods.—Re PAVY'S PATENT FELTED FABRIC CO. (1876), 1 Ch. 2036. Outstanding bills.]—S., who had for many years traded as a timber merchant in his own name, entered into an agreement with F. & Co., also timber merchants, to carry on his business thenceforth as their agent at a remuneration by way of a share of profits. The business was thenceforth carried on under this agreement, but in the name of S. as before. S. dealt with the timber in his possession as if he were the absolute owner of it (except as between himself & F. & Co.) & there was nothing done to inform the outside world of the change which had taken place. In the course of the business F. & Co. drew bills on S., which he accepted in his own name to be protected by F. & Co. Both F. & Co. and afterwards S. filed liquidation petitions. Before S.'s liquidation F. & Co.'s trustee demanded the timber in his hands, which was refused:—Held: to the extent of the current bills, S.'s estate had a lien on the timber.—*Re FAWCUS, Ex p. 2038. Bankruptcy of principal—Goods in order & disposition of principal.]—A Scotch firm had a branch in London, which was wholly conducted by an agent & manager at a salary, but in their name. By contract, he was to have a lien on goods consigned to him for bills accepted by him for the firm. The firm became bkpt. in Scotland:—Held: (1) the goods under the manager's control at the time were within the "order & disposition" of bkpts.; (2) they passed to the assignees of bkpts. unaffected by his lien.—*HOGGARD v. 2040. Exercise of dominion over goods—Securing possession.]—An agent having a lien is not guilty of a conversion for dealing with goods in such a way as is right & reasonable in order to retain it. A shipping agent having a lien on the bill of lading of goods he has shipped may, if the lien is not satisfied before they have reached their destination, have the goods brought home in order to retain his lien on them, & is not liable in trover for so doing.—*EDWARDS v. 2041. Consideration—Giving up policy subject to lien—Promise to pay amount due—Statute of Frauds.]—Pltf., a broker, having a lien on certain policies of insurance effected for his principal, for whom he had given his acceptances, deft. promised that he would provide for the payment of those acceptances as they became due, upon pltf.'s giving up to him such policies, in order that he might collect for the principal the money due thereon from the underwriters. This was done, & the money was afterwards received by deft.:—Held: this was not a promise for the debt or default of another within Stat. Frauds; & pltf. might recover against deft. as well for the breach of agreement in not providing for the payment of the acceptances, as also upon a count for money had & received.—*CASTLING v. PART VIII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 4.—C.

2042 i. Priority—Lien for advances—Claim of judgment debtor.]—An agent for purchase of goods, who supplied funds for the purchase & for carriage & insurance, consigned the goods, & while in transit A., the principal, failed.

When the agent proceeded to take steps to obtain possession, his right was disputed by a judgment creditor:—Held: (1) the agent was an unpaid vendor & which he indorsed & delivered to the vendor. A. about the same time wrote an order to his agent W. directing him to pay the amount of one of the bills, £750, to C. out of the freight of the ship. By a subsequent written order A. directed W. to satisfy out of the freight the amount of any current bills given by him in payment for the vessel. W., after accepting both orders, discounted for C. the £750 bill. Upon the construction of the orders & circumstances of the case generally:—Held: (1) the second order was not a revocation of the first; (2) the lien of W. on the freight for the amount of the £750 bill was prior to that of the holders of the other bills.—MILN (MILNE) v. WALTON (1843), 2 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 354; 7 Jur. 892; 63 E. R. 156.

2043. — Lien for advances—Joint property—Separate debt.—Three firms, A., B., & C., purchased corn in America, in which purchases they were jointly interested; part was remitted to England; the bills of lading being indorsed in blank were put into the hands of C. on account of the three firms, & C. consigned such part to depts. for sale by them. Depts. sold same, & realised a net sum of £8,960 10s. 7d. C., previously to this consignment, had made other large consignments of corn for sale to depts., being partly corn which they held as factors, & partly corn belonging to themselves. These cargoes so consigned were sold by depts., who received the proceeds. C. drew upon depts., who accepted the bills & duly paid the same. The whole so paid exceeded the sum realised by the sale of all the cargoes consigned including that which produced the £8,960 10s. 7d. Depts. having claimed a lien on this latter sum:—Held: (1) there was no contract, express or implied, giving them any further lien; (2) when all demands on the three firms jointly had been satisfied, those firms had a right to the proceeds, notwithstanding any separate debt due from any one of the consigning firms.—DENISTOUN v. YOUNG (1850), 15 L. T. O. S. 346.

2044. Production—Document subject to lien not privileged from.—A broker who has effected a policy, & has a lien on it for his premiums, may be compelled by the assured to produce it on the trial of an action against the underwriters, & he is a competent witness (notwithstanding his lien) to prove all matters connected with the policy.—*HUNTER v. 2045. Sale—No right of.—A factor who has made an advance to his principal in respect of consignments already made, has no right to sell contrary to his principal's orders, even after demand of payment, & notice that in default he will sell to repay himself. If in such a case the factor does sell, it is no defence that he believed the sale to be, & that it was in fact, for the principal's benefit.

The making of the advance may be good consideration for an agreement that the authority of the factor to sell shall be irrevocable, but such an effect will not arise independent of the agreement (WILDE, C. J.).—SMART v. SANDERS (1848), 5 C. B. 895; 17

2047. Settlement with agent—Answer to claim by principal for price.—The owner of goods being indebted to a factor in an amount exceeding their value, consigned them to him for sale; the factor being also similarly indebted to S., sold the goods to him. The factor afterwards became bkpt., & on settlement of accounts between S. & the assignees, S. allowed credit to them for the price of the goods, & he then proved the residue of his claim against the estate:—Held: as the factor had a lien on the whole price of the goods, such settlement of accounts between the vendee & the assignees afforded a good answer to an action against the vendee for the price of the goods, brought either by or on account of the original owner.—*HUDSON v. C., who was insolvent, wrote at the request of plff. to deft. to reland the goods without saying why; deft.'s clerk, in his master's absence, obtained a custom-house order for that purpose, but before he had relanded the goods, the vendor of other goods sold to C. & shipped in the same vessel, although a stranger to & without authority from plff., ordered deft.'s clerk to stop the goods sold by plff. to C.; when deft.'s clerk promised deft. should hold them for the owner:—Held: deft.'s having taken these goods from the waggoner, & having paid the waggoner's charges & shipped the goods, was not such a determination of the transitus to Guernsey as to authorise deft. to hold goods in assertion of a lien for a general balance due to him from C.—*NICHOLLS v. Deft. consigned goods to the Melbourne house, on an agreement that the advances made to him by pltfs. in London & Melbourne should be retained out of the proceeds of the goods, & the surplus should be handed over to deft. The Melbourne house remitted to deft. a sum as balance, but omitted to retain advances made in London:—Held: (1) pltfs. had merely a right of lien or of retainer which they had abandoned by remitting the balance; (2) a bill to make the remittance available for their debt must be dismissed.—BLIGHT v. 2058. —.]—A., a merchant in England, sent goods of a given value to B., a merchant at Quebec, for sale on his account. Before the goods were sold or the proceeds ascertained, B. shipped three cargoes of timber to A. to credit in account. Two of them arrived. Against the third B. drew a bill for the amount whilst it was in transitu. In the interval A. dishonoured the bill & became insolvent:—Held: B. had a perfect right of stoppage in transitu, & was not bound to wait until the mutual accounts between him & A. were finally adjusted.—WOOD v. JONES (1825), 7 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 126.

signed the cotton to debts., & these parties having failed after shipment of the cotton, & before payment of bills:—Held: (1) the question was, whether debts.' agent had made the advances bond fide; (2) if he had, & had not undertaken to see that the cotton was paid for, pltf., though entitled to all the rights of a vendor, could not stop in transitu, nor recover the value of the cotton from debts.—*OAKFORD v. 2066. —.—[D., a merchant in London, was in the habit of shipping salt for exportation at Liverpool. He usually employed pltf. to purchase the salt & pltf. shipped it, taking receipts in his own name from the mate for each delivery, & when the cargo was complete, taking bills of lading in his own name, which he remitted to D. in exchange for D.'s acceptances for the price of the salt. Pltf. was paid no commission, but he charged D. an advance on the price of the salt. On the present occasion D. had chartered a ship to load a full cargo of salt for Calcutta, & pltf. had placed on board her, in accordance with instructions from D., 1,000 tons of salt which he had purchased for that purpose, & for which he had taken the mate's receipts in the usual course. When this quantity had been placed on board D. stopped payment, & pltf. then ceased loading, & demanded the bills of lading for the salt already on board in his own name. Deft., the shipowner, refused to allow them to be given, filled up the ship, & sent her with salt to Calcutta. The jury found when pltf. put the salt on board he did not intend to pass the property therein to D., but to retain it in himself:—Held: (1) this was the proper question for the jury; (2) on this finding & these facts there was a conversion of the salt by deft. at Liverpool.—*FALK (FALKE) v. Agent consigning goods to principal.—[If an agent buys goods & consigns them to his principal, & allows the property in the goods to pass to his principal, & the goods on the bkpey. of the principal are in the possession of the principal or come into the possession of his trustee, the agent, in the absence of any agreement to the contrary, has no right to have the proceeds of the goods specifically applied in taking up bills of exchange that have been drawn by him on his principal in respect of the price of goods; nor, in the event of the principal or his trustee refusing to accept such bills, has the agent any right to have the goods returned.]

bills for the price, but was insolvent when he received the bill of lading. In an action by A. & Co. to reduce indorsations of the bills they averred they had stopped the goods in transitu:—

Held: A. & Co. were in the position of sellers & as such, were entitled to stop the goods in transitu.—ADAMSON, HOWIE & Co. v. GUILD, ETC. (1868), 6 M. 347.—SCOT.

Sect. 3.—Agent's rights against principal: Sub-sects. 5, 6, 7 & 8.]

But, if the bills have been refused acceptance before the goods have arrived, the agent has a vendor's right of stoppage in transitu. If, however, the agent has made the goods deliverable to his own order & forwarded the bill of lading to an agent of his own with a direction that it is not to be handed over unless the bills of exchange are accepted, then if the bills are not accepted the agent has a right to the goods.

C. & Co., of Para, purchased on commission for T. & Co., of Liverpool, 96 cases of indiarubber which they paid for out of moneys raised by the sale of certain bills of exchange drawn by them upon T. Co. They advised T. & Co. of the bills without reference to the indiarubber, which they afterwards consigned to T. & Co., & forwarded to them by post the bills of lading & invoices, together with a balanced account, showing price of indiarubber & commission & interest, on one side, & amount of the bills or such parts of the bills as had been applied in the purchase of the indiarubber & interest, on the other, also a letter stating the amount of bills remaining unapplied, & containing a direction to T. & Co. to place price of the indiarubber to the credit & the bills to the debit of C. & Co.'s general account. This transaction was in accordance with the usual course of dealing between the two firms. T.

Co. failed while the indiarubber was in transit. None of the bills in question had been paid, some of them had been accepted by T. & Co. before their failure, & the trustee of their estate refused to accept the remainder. C. & Co. having failed:—Held: (1) the relation of C. & Co. & T. & Co. being that of agent & principal, the property in the goods passed to T. & Co. as soon as goods were shipped & bills of lading posted to T. & Co.; (2) it so passed absolutely & not conditionally on payment or acceptance of the bills of exchange; (3) there was no reservation of any lien or charge upon goods in favour of C. & Co.; (4) the trustee of T. & Co.'s estate was entitled to the goods.—*Re TAPPENBROCK, Ex p. SUB-SECT. 6.—AGENT'S RIGHT TO AN ACCOUNT.

necessarily correlative. The right of the principal rests upon the trust & confidence reposed in the agent, but the agent reposes no such trust or confidence in the principal. It does not follow that because the principal may file a bill against his agent the agent may file a bill against his principal (TURNER, V.-C.).—PADWICK v. STANLEY (1852), 9 Hare, 627; 22 L. J. 2073. —.]—The relation of principal & agent is not alone sufficient to entitle an agent to an account in equity when it can be determined at law. A bill for an account by a solr. & agent against his principal stating receipt & payment of moneys, also the transaction of various matters of business for deft., as well as advances by way of loan & payments made by plff., & that deft. had paid to plff. various sums of money, & alleging that the accounts were complex & intricate, & that plff. & deft. were mutually indebted upon an open & running account, cannot be maintained when the facts disclose a case of set-off, without showing any difficulty in taking the accounts at law, & a demurrer to such bill was allowed.

If the principal also paid various sums on behalf of his agent, so that a fresh relationship was created between them, there being accounts to be taken by the principal against the agent, as well as by the agent against the principal, then there arises a case of cross demands or mutual accounts (ROMILLY, M.R.).—*PADWICK v. Disputes having arisen between the parties, pltf. filed his bill, praying for an account of this commission & allowance, but not even alleging any mutuality or complexity of accounts:—Held: (1) the case presented was merely one of contract on the part of defts. to pay a certain commission; (2) it made no difference that the agent, as a rule, could not know what orders had been received from his friends; (3) the proper remedy of pltf. was by an action at law; (4) the bill must be dismissed, with costs.—SMITH v. SUB-SECT. 8.—AGENT'S RIGHTS WHEN APPOINTED SOLE AGENT.

2081. Breach of agreement by principal—Agent's right to commission.—[Deft., a merchant in Spain, agreed to consign to pltf.s, agents in London, all the raisins which should be shipped by him for this country, to sell for him for a certain commission on the "invoice price." In an action to recover the amount of commission on two shipments consigned by deft. in breach of his agreement to third persons:—Held: (1) deft. liable to pay commission; (2) it was competent to pltf.s, to show the proximate value of the consignments upon which they claimed commission, without producing the invoices, the production of the invoices not being a condition precedent.—PLANK v. GAVILA (GAVELLER, (HAYELLER) (1858), 3 C. B. N. S. 807; 30 L. T. O. S. 280, 287; 6 W. R. 210; 140 E. R. 960.

PART VIII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 7.

2077 ii.—To procure delivery of goods bought for principal—Rate of interest.—JOHNSTON v. CANADIAN KLODYKE MINING CO. (1911), 19 W. L. R. 60.—CAN.

2079 i. Remuneration.—[R., who was engaged in the lumber business, employed S. as his agent, & by letter agreed to pay him $10 per 1,000 cubic feet on all timber which S. manufactured for him, which rate (the letter said) "includes purchasing, superintending the making, & attending to the shipping of same," R. paying all travelling expenses. S. bought a quantity of timber for R., which was not manufactured under the superintendence of S., & he was entitled to a reasonable compensation for his service. There having been considerable delay in enforcing payment, caused by R. having obtained an injunction restraining S. from proceeding at law:—Held: S. entitled to interest on the amount of his claim.—RIDLEY v. SEXTON (1871), 18 Gr. 580; 19 Gr. 146.—CAN.

x. Awarded from date of filing declaration for account & interest.—[Where a principal was found indebted to his agent on the taking of accounts, the ct., in exercise of its discretion, allowed interest on the amount from the time of filing the declaration (which contained a count for interest) in an action at law brought by the agent, & to restrain which a bill had been filed.—RIDLEY v. SEXTON (1871), 19 Gr. 146.—CAN.

y. Compound interest, when chargeable—Factor.—[A factor, in making up his account, sought to charge compound interest, but on a suggestion from the ct. withdrew his claim.—DILLON v. KIRBY (1830), 3 L. Rec. O. S. 350.—IR.

z.—[In an accounting for trust funds under a family settlement for the fourteen years following the trustor's death, the factor had accumulated interest on his advances with the principal at the end of eleven years:—Held: in the circumstances, the accumulation must be sustained.—SCOTT v. HANDYSIDE'S TRUSTEES (1868), 6 M. 753; 40 Sc. Jur. 387.—SCOT.

a.—Land agent.—[Semble: land agents may charge compound interest on advances made by them to the use of their principal, if such be the general usage; & evidence of general usage is admissible, in the absence of an express contract, in this as well as in any other description of agency (DOUBLETY, C.J.).—CLENNING v. MOORE (1841), Arm. & O. 219.—IR.

PART VIII. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 8.

b. Manner of appointment as sole agent.—[Mere statement of a price, which an owner of land is willing to take, & reference to a commission, does not vest a real estate agent with a general monopoly of sale. A servitude of that kind needs a specific written contract, or, at least, an equivalent admission of its existence on the part of the owner.—MAINWARING v. CRANE (1902), Q. R. 22 S. C. 67.—CAN.

c. Principal's right to appoint second agent.—[A contract of hiring of services which declares that the lessee shall be the sole representative in a certain territory does not give the latter the exclusive right to sell therein. Thus, if the traveller cannot cover the territory within a reasonable delay, the employer may engage another to represent him in such territory.—PICHER v. MARCEAU (1916), Q. R. 51 S. C. 305.—CAN.

2081 i. Breach of agreement by principal—Damages.—[ROGERS v. NATIONAL PORTLAND CEMENT CO. (1913), 25 O. W. R. 298; 5 O. W. N. 349.—CAN.

2081 ii.—Whether injunction or action at law proper remedy.—[Pltf.s, entered into an agreement with defts. that they should take up the selling 2088. —[An action of assumpsit for money had & received is maintainable by an assured part-owner of a vessel against an insurance broker, who has received from the underwriters the full amount of sums subscribed on a total loss, although there are several other persons interested as part-owners, & who had given deft. notice of their interest, where plff. insured on the whole ship generally, by means of his captain, who gave the order for effecting the insurance.—ROBERTS v. OGILBY, No. 1431, ante.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 1431, ante.

2089. —Broker a part-owner.—Where a shipbroker generally employed an insurance broker to effect insurances on vessels, & amongst others on vessels in which the shipbroker was part-owner, & the insurance broker charged all premiums in a running account which he kept with the shipbroker, & charged him for the amount, allowing him half commission:—Held: the insurance broker might on bkpey. of the shipbroker sue the other joint co-owners of his vessels (who had authorised the insurance), their names being unknown to the insurance broker when the insurance was effected, & no fraud or laches on his part being proved.—ROBINSON v. GLEADOW (1835), 2 Bing. N. C. 150; 1 Hodg. 245; 2 Scott, 250; 132 E. R. 62.

Annotation:—Folld. Brown v. Bradford (1842), 2 Mood. & R. 413.

2091. Agent acting for two of three executors.—Under a written authority from two of three exors. (who alone had proved the will), C. received the amount of rents due from tenants of lands in which testator had a term of years, & gave a receipt for it in the name & on account of the two:—Held: the three exors. could not jointly sue C. for the money unless found by the jury that the two contracted with him on account of themselves & the other exor., or generally on account of the estate, with a view to interference of the co-exor., in case he should choose to take part in the management of it.—HEATH v. CHILTON (1844), 12 M. & W. 632; 13 L. J. Ex. 225; 2 L. T. O. S. 424; 152 E. R. 1352.

2092. Agent not discharged by payment to one of several co-principals.—A firm of solrs. having been employed by the trustees of a will to receive the proceeds of testator's real estate, which had been taken by a ry. co., paid over the money to one of such trustees without the receipt or authority of the other. The money having been lost to the estate by the insolvency & death of the trustee to whom it was paid:—Held: (1) the receipt of one trustee only, though also an exor., was not a sufficient discharge to the solrs. for the money which they had received by the authority of the two; (2) they were liable to make good the loss which had resulted to the trust estate from such improper payment.—LEE v. SANKEY (1873), L. R. 15 Eq. 204; 27 L. T. 809; 21 W. R. 286.

2093. Joint action against agent.—A married woman had freehold & leasehold property devised to her separate use, & she being desirous of building & repairing some cottages upon part of it, & her husband wanting to pay off a debt, it was arranged under the advice of deft., their solr., that a loan of £550 should be raised by the mtge. of the wife's property, & the deposit of two policies of the husband of £500 each on the life of the husband & wife respectively. The mtge. was executed by the husband & wife, & the husband covenanted for the repayment of the loan. The money was to be advanced by instalments, & a joint authority signed by both was given to deft. to receive the first instalment from the mtgees. He received it & paid the husband's debt, but he claimed to retain the balance for a debt due to him from the husband. An action was then brought by the husband & wife for the balance:—Held: the joint action could be maintained.—JONES v. CUTHBERTSON (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 504; 42 L. J. Q. B. 221; 28 L. T. 673; 21 W. R. 919, Ex. Ch.

agreeing to purchase the city properties, handing over their land in part payment.

Deft., who admitted his liability to pay commission in respect of his own land, but relied the claim as to the property in his hands for sale on behalf of his co-vendors, had received from them a commission in respect of the sale of their interests, which he claimed for services rendered:—Held: L. was entitled to his commission on the sale of deft.'s interests & to one-half of the commission to which deft. was entitled on the sale of his co-vendors' interests.—LEWIS v. BUCKNAM (1912), 20 W. L. R. 4; 1 W. W. R. 760; 1 D. L. R. 277.—CAN.

D. 696. O. A. Whitecomb v. Jacob decides that the equity as to following the proceeds attaches to the case of a factor as well as to the case of cestui que trust & trustee; but it decides, secondly, that you could not follow money because it had no earmark; the first part is good law at the present day, the second is not (JESSEL, M.R.). Apld. Patten v. Bond (1889), 60 L. T. 583.

trover from the assignees. Or if a factor sell goods for his principal, & become bkpt. before payment, & his assignees afterwards receive the money for them, the principal may recover it from them in an action for money had & received. So if the factor on such sale take notes in payment from the vendee payable to him at a future day, & his assignees afterwards receive the money due on the notes, the principal may recover it from the assignees in an action for money had & received. If the assignees of a factor (bkpt.) receive bounty-money on any article under an Act of Parliament giving the bounty to the importer, the consignor of that article may recover such bounty-money from them in an action for money had & received. —SCOTT v. SURMAN (1742), Willes, 400; 125 E. R. 1235.

2096. Agent to purchase certain securities.—Different securities purchased.—Where a draft of money was intrusted to a broker to buy Exchequer bills for his principal, & the broker received the money & misapplied it by purchasing American stock & bullion, intending to abscond with it & go to America, & did accordingly abscond, but was taken before he quitted England, & thereupon surrendered to the principal the securities for the American stock & bullion, who sold the whole & received the proceeds:—Held: the principal was entitled to withhold the proceeds from the assignees of the broker, who became bkpt. on the day on which he so received & misapplied the money. —TAYLOR v. Plumer, entirely throws over all the prior decisions as to money not earmarked not being followed; at that time it was well known it could be earmarked in equity, & therefore, when you come to look at it, you will find it an express decision in conflict with others as to the earmarking of money; Lord Ellenborough's statement of the law is law at the present moment, & though I cannot say it always was law it always ought to have been law because it is consonant with principle (JESSEL, M.R.). Apld. *Harris v. a. Agent employed to collect debt.—Note received with mortgage as collateral.—P. was agent of U. to collect certain debts & remit to U., being paid a monthly salary. Among the debts was a claim against deft. S. S. made a note & executed a chattel mtge. under seal. The note was payable to U.'s order & comprised the debt, the mtge. being collateral security. P. delivered both note & mtge. to T., a creditor of his, representing he was U.'s agent & had authority to deal with them, & T. paid P. the difference between his claim & the value of the note. 2097. Agent receiving cheques—Right to follow cheques but not cash.]—A banking firm at S. sent to a bank at C. certain average orders for collection at C. & payment of the proceeds over to bankers in London, who were London agents for both parties. The bank at C. collected some of the orders, & received a cheque for one & cash for the remainder (except two which were returned uncashed). They then paid the cash into their till with other moneys, & stopping payment went into liquidation:—Held: (1) the cheque could be followed by the firm at S., as it was specific property resulting from the special agency; (2) the cash could not be followed.—Re WEST OF ENGLAND & SOUTH WALES DISTRICT BANK, Ex p. DALE & Co. (1879), 11 Ch. D. 772; 48 L. J. Ch. 600; 40 L. T. 712; 27 W. R. 815.

2098. — [.]—The manager of pltf.'s bank obtained the signature of deft. to a cheque, purporting to be drawn upon the bank by deft., under the pretence that it was a receipt (deft. being unable to read it), & then paid him a private debt of his own with the banker's money. The transaction was entered in the books of the bank as a loan from the bank to deft. upon his cheque:—Held: the banker was not entitled to maintain an action against deft. to recover back the money, the cheque having been obtained by his agent's fraud.—FOSTER v. GREEN (1862), 7 H. & N. 881; 31 L. J. Ex. 158; 158 E. R. 726.

2099. Agent depositing principal's funds in bank—Accounts manipulated so as to show large balance due to principal offset by equal balance due from agent.]—A., as agent, but without the knowledge or authority of his principal, B., & the general manager of a bank, without the knowledge or authority of the bank directors, concerted for their own purposes the following scheme, which the ct. held to be entirely void for fraud, & not binding on B. Two accounts were opened with the bank in the respective names of the agent & principal. The agent, on behalf of his principal, requested the bank to honour the agent's cheques, & guaranteed repayment thereof, all moneys standing to the credit of the principal to be charged with such payment. The agent paid to his principal's account £1,500 belonging to the principal, & drew on his own account for a like sum, which he spent in promoting the scheme. He drew other cheques on his own account, & paid the proceeds to his principal's account as moneys belonging to the principal. Thus, in the bank books the agent's account stood with a large debit, & the principal's account stood with an equal credit charged with the guarantee. The principal having brought an action against the bank to recover the whole amount standing to his credit:—Held: he could recover £1,500 thereof, his own money; but not the residue, which never had been his money.—BRITISH & AMERICAN TELEGRAPH CO., LTD. v. ALBION BANK, LTD. (1872), L. R. 7 Exch. 119; 41 L. J. Ex. 67; 26 L. T. 257; 20 W. R. 413.

2100. Agent employed to sell bills & apply proceeds to specific purpose—Proceeds of sale wrongfully applied.]—Where bills of exchange are remitted for sale, & the proceeds directed to be applied to a specific purpose, the property in the bills remains in the remitter until the purpose for which they were remitted is satisfied. And where the money realised by the sale is wrongfully applied by the agent the remitter is entitled to recover the value of the bills in assumpsit, upon an indebitatus count, from a purchaser of them, who had notice of the purpose for which they were remitted, & of the misapplication of proceeds by the agent.—MUTTYLOLL SEAL v. DENT (1853), 5 Moo. Ind. App. 328; 8 Moo. P. C. C. 319; 18 E. R. 920.

2101. Agent employed to sell goods—Goods pawned.]—If one employed to sell goods by commission pawns them, the owners of the goods may maintain trover against the pawnbroker after a demand & refusal, although the duplicate has not been tendered according to Pawnbrokers Act, 1800 (c. 99), s. 5.—PEET v. BAXTER (1816), 1 Stark. 472.

2102. — Goods pledged—Sold by pledgee.]—Pltf., residing abroad, shipped sugars under a bill of lading addressed to A. in London, directing him to sell the sugars on pltf.'s account & place the net proceeds to the credit of B., to whom pltf. was indebted for advances made previously to shipment. The invoice stated pltf. to be the shipper. A., on arrival of the sugars, pledged them to defts. for advances made by them to him, & having become bkpt. pltf. authorised an agent to demand the sugars of defts., but they sold them, & the proceeds were demanded after sale by the agent with pltf.'s authority:—Held: (1) the latter had a sufficient title in the sugars to sue defts. in trover, as the right of possession was in him, as B. had only an equitable interest; (2) defts., by selling the sugars after demand by pltf.'s agent, were guilty of a conversion.—SELLECK v. SMITH, KEELING & DRAKE (1826), 3 Bing. 603; 11 Moore, C. P. 469; 4 L. J. O. S. C. P. 194; 130 E. R. 646.

2101 i. Agent employed to sell goods—Goods exchanged.]—Pltf. employed R. as agent to sell cultivators for them at $27 cash & $30 on time; he was to take cash or good notes, & had no authority to barter. Deft. took three cultivators from R. in exchange for a buggy:—Held: there was no evidence of a holding out of R. as agent with authority to barter, & the ct. below was right in entering a verdict for pltf. in an action of replevin for the three cultivators. *Jenkins v. b. Agent intrusted with goods

*(Goods pledged—Knowledge of pledgee.)—*Where goods intrusted to an agent had been pledged by him to a third party for advances, & an action was brought by the owner to revendicate the goods:—Held: the pledgee could not hold the goods against the owner, seeing that he knew the ownership was not in the pledgor, even though the pledgor had had no notice from the owner forbidding him to pledge.—*JOHNSON v. 2104. ——— Pledged by agent.]—A., owner of a personal chattel, parted with a half-share in it to B., A. to have possession until the chattel was sold. A. intrusted the chattel to B. for the purpose of taking it to an auctioneer for sale. B. did not take the chattel to an auctioneer, but lodged it with C. as security for his debt:—Held: A. had a special property in the chattel which entitled him to possession of it as against C.—*NYBERG (NYBURG) v. 2106. ——— Money paid into agent's banking account—Agent in fiduciary capacity.]—If money held by a person in a fiduciary character, though not as a trustee, has been paid by him to his account at the banker's, the person for whom he held the money can follow it, & has a charge on the balance in the banker's hands.

If a person holding money in a fiduciary character pays it to his account at his banker's & mixes it with his own money, & afterwards draws out sums by cheques in the ordinary manner, the rule in Clayton's Case (1816), 1 Mer. 572, attributing the first drawings out to the first payments in does not apply, & the drawer must be taken to have drawn out his own money in preference to the trust money.—*Re HALLETT'S ESTATE, KNATCHBULL v. 2107. ——— Agent not in fiduciary capacity.]
 —The B. Co. collected advance freights on account of plffs., & the course of business known & assented to by the latter was for the B. Co. to pay the freights when collected into their general account with the P. Bank. They also paid into that account moneys of their own & freights collected for other ship-owners. They paid disbursements on behalf of plffs. by cheques drawn on same account. Accounts were rendered periodically by the B. Co. to plffs. showing freights received, & disbursements made & the balance owing to plffs., or, as sometimes happened, the balance owing by plffs. to the B. Co. The B. Co. having gone into liquidation, & there being a large sum due to plffs. for freights collected by the B. Co., plffs. claimed to be entitled to the amount standing to the credit of the B. Co. with the P. Bank, alleging it was the proceeds of freights collected on their account:—Held: plffs. were not entitled to follow the money in the hands of the P. Bank, as there was no fiduciary relationship between the B. Co. & plffs., but merely the relationship of debtor & creditor.—WILSONS & FURNESS-LEYLAND LINE, LTD. v. BRITISH & CONTINENTAL SHIPPING CO., LTD. (1907), 23 T. L. R. 397.

e. Agent selling principal's land in fraud of principal's rights.]—In an action by plff. against S. & C., & the parties to whom C. had transferred a part of the land in question, claiming a reconveyance & damages for registering a cloud upon plff.'s title as well as for detention of the land, it appeared that S. knew that plff. was in effect the beneficial owner of the land & that P. held the title for her subject only to the payment of his lien; that S. paid P. the amount of the lien & took the title in his own name, falsely representing to P. it was part of the arrangement upon a sale he had made to plff.:—Held:

1 (S.) was a trustee for plff. of the title he had so obtained with a lien for the amount he had paid P.; (2) the defence of purchase by C. for value without notice could not be sustained, C. having actual notice that plff. & not P. was the true owner, & the other parties were not entitled to any better position; (3) upon payment of the lien with interest the land must be reconveyed.—*MURRAY v. 2109. Agent receiving post office orders—Payment into agent's banking account.]—Pltfs. banked with defts. It was the duty of pltfs.' secretary to pay all moneys received by him on behalf of pltfs. into defts.' bank to the credit of pltfs. The secretary without the knowledge of pltfs. kept an account at defts.' bank, into which he paid to his own credit certain post office orders belonging to pltfs., which defts. subsequently cashed. The Post Office Regulations with regard to post office orders provided that, when presented for payment by a banker, they should be payable without the signature by the payee of the receipt contained in the order, provided the name of the banker presenting the order was written or stamped upon it:—Held: (1) there had been a wrongful conversion of the post office orders above mentioned by defts.; (2) the above regulations of the Post Office did not give to post office orders in the hands of bankers the character of instruments transferable to bearer by delivery so as to give defts. a good title to the post office orders, independently of the authority given to pltfs.' secretary.—*FINE ARTS SOCIETY, LTD. v. 2110. Agent trading abroad for principal—Original goods sold—Proceeds invested in further goods for trading purposes.]—S., supercargo of a ship trading to the East Indies, borrowed of B. £600 for use in the purchase & sale of goods, & gave a bottomry bond to pay £40 per cent. if the ship traded for 3 years; he also gave B. a bill of sale of the goods then purchased & put on board & of the produce & advantage that should be made thereof. The ship traded in the East for 3 years, but S. died on the voyage home. The original goods had been sold & there had been several purchases & sales:—Held: (1) S.'s possession of the goods after the giving of the bill of sale was not fraudulent as in the case of a bkpt., & he was in effect trading on account of B.; (2) B. was entitled to follow the specific goods which S. was bringing home, & to be paid his advance out of the produce of them.—*BUCKNAL v. 2112. Bank manager investing misappropriated funds in overdue bills—Bills sold to company.]—D., formerly manager of the O. Bank, then in liquidation, by means of moneys belonging to that bank he had misappropriated, bought some overdue bills of exchange which were drawn upon & accepted by the E. Bank, also then in liquidation. A few days later he sold three bills to the C. Co., which had been registered two days previously, & of which he was sole director:—Held: (1) the C. Co. could not be taken to be affected with notice of the fraud committed by D., as he could not be taken to have communicated that fraud to the C. Co., for which he was acting in the transaction merely as agent, not as a partner; (2) the right of the O. Bank to follow their money into the bills was an equity affecting the bills themselves; (3) the C. Co., though holders for value, had no better title to the bills than D. would have had if he had not parted with them.—Re EUROPEAN BANK, LTD., Ex p. ORIENTAL COMMERCIAL BANK, LTD. (1870), 5 Ch. Broker intrusted with securities for transfer—Securities pledged.]—The English exors. of a deceased English owner of shares in an American co. desired to be entered in the New York registry in respect of them to enable them to receive the dividend & if necessary to sell. On the instructions of their broker they signed in blank a form of transfer & power of attorney, which was indorsed on the share certificates, & sent them to the broker in London to be forwarded to New York for registration. The broker fraudulently deposited the certificates with deft. banks as security for advances & afterwards became bkpt.:—Held: the state of the certificates put deft. banks on inquiry; & the exors. were entitled to the shares, & were not estopped from denying the title of the banks to them.—*COLONIAL BANK v. The manager of pltf. bank improperly & fraudulently purchased a mining concession with moneys belonging to the bank, & afterwards sold & ceded his rights of action to defts.:—Held: in the absence of any allegation that defts. purchased with knowledge of the manager's fraud, there was no ground of action to compel defts. to account to the bank for all profits made by them out of the concession.—CAPE OF GOOD

2115. Drawer of bill instructed by acceptor not to part with bill without permission—Drawer parting with bill for own purpose.]—A bill was drawn by A. & accepted by B. for the purpose of being discounted & having the proceeds applied in the payment of other bills accepted by B., but the other bills before they became due were paid by B., who directed A. to hold the first-mentioned bill for his B.'s use, & not to part with it without his authority. A., however, for his own purposes indorsed it to C. for valuable consideration, having first informed the latter that it belonged to B. & that he, A., had no authority to part with it:—Held: the property in the bill was in B., the acceptor, who might in these circumstances maintain trover for the bill against C.—*EVANS v. Factor employed to sell goods on del credere commission—Proceeds of sale in hands of sub-agent employed by factor.]—Plffs., landowners in New Zealand, employed M. & T., factors in Scotland, to sell for them certain cargoes of corn upon a del credere commission. M. & T., who employed defts., corn factors & brokers in London, generally in their business, employed them to sell these cargoes in the London market, upon a commission not del credere, & differing in its terms from that agreed on between plffs. & M. & T. The course of business was for plffs. to indorse bills of lading to M. & T., who in turn indorsed them to defts., but by neither of such indorsements was it intended to pass, nor did there pass, the property in the goods. Plffs. were aware M. & T. employed others to effect the sales, but they were not parties to the sub-contracts, & gave credit to M. & T. only. On the face of such sub-contracts M. & T. appeared as principals. Defts. from time to time sold portions of the cargoes, & made general remittances to M. & T. as well on account of such cargoes as of their sales effected by them for M. & T. M. & T. having become insolvent at a time when they were indebted to defts. in respect of transactions other than those concerning plffs.' cargoes, plffs. brought an action against defts. to recover the balance due in respect of their cargoes, after giving credit for remittances already made by defts. to M. & T.:—Held: plffs. were not, as owners of the cargoes, entitled to follow their proceeds in the hands of defts. irrespective of the state of the general account between the latter & M. & T.—*NEW ZEALAND & AUSTRALIAN LAND CO. v. 2119. Treasurer keeping corporation's moneys in own banking account—Funds transferred to another bank & deposit receipt given as security to surety.]—A person who receives by way of security from a defaulting agent a deposit of money, which turns out to have been withdrawn from the funds of his principal, cannot, where the circumstances are suspicious, be allowed to insist on ignorance of the truth.

A., treasurer of a municipal corpn., for whom B. was surety to the extent of £2,000, kept a banking account in his own name, which was shown to have been in continuation of an account kept as treasurer, & several sums of money paid in to that account were shown to have been corpn. money. A. drew out from his account a sum of £2,300 & placed it at interest, upon a deposit note, in another bank in the name of his daughter. Being indebted to the corpn. in a sum greater than that amount, he was required to account, but refused, & the corpn. having informed B. of the debt & A.'s refusal to account, B. went to A. & demanded an indemnity, when A. gave him the deposit note for £2,300, stating at the same time that he had sufficient means to meet any demand of the corpn. against him. Upon a bill by the corpn. for the purpose of recovering the £2,300:—Held: it was to be considered as part of the corpn. moneys, although B., by his answer, stated that at the time when the deposit receipt was delivered to him he believed it was the proper money of A.—*BERWICK-ON-TWEED CORPN. v. SECT. 3.—CONTRACTS MADE BY AGENT.

SUB-SECT. 1.—IN GENERAL.

A. Principal's Right to sue on Contracts made by Agent acting within Scope of his Authority.

For cases where contracts must be enforced by the principal, the agent having no right to sue thereon, see Part X., post.

2120. General rule.—Where a contract, not under seal, is made with an agent in his own name for an undisclosed principal, either the agent or the principal may sue upon it, deft. in the latter case being entitled to be placed in the same situation, at the time of the disclosure of the real principal, as if the agent had been the contracting party. This rule is most frequently acted upon in sales by factors, agents, or partners, in which cases either the nominal or the real contractor may sue; but it may be equally applied to other cases; & we do not say that where a person lends money nominally on his own account, but really on account of & as the loan of another, the real lender may not sue for the money. But where money is lent by another in his own name ptf. who alleges that he was in reality the lender must prove that fact distinctly & clearly, he must show that the loan, though nominally that of another, was really intended to be his own (DENMAN, C.J.).—SIMS v. PART IX. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 1.—A.

2122.—By the law of England, speaking generally, an undisclosed principal may sue & be sued upon mercantile contracts made by his agent in his own name, subject to any defences or equities which without notice may exist against the agent (SIR MONTAGUE E. SMITH).—BROWNING v. PROVINCIAL INSURANCE CO. OF CANADA (1873), L. R. 5 P. C. 263; 28 L. T. 853; 21 W. R. 587; 2 Asp. M. L. C. 35, P. C.

A principal may sue upon a contract entered into on his behalf by an agent, although his name was wholly concealed at the time of the contract (MALINS, V.-C.).—LANGTON v. WAITE, No. 2121, ante.

But in all other cases the contract shall confer & impose no rights or liabilities on any principals except those who shall sign same or the confirmation slip." In the case of the contracts in question, the buyer, who was not a sugar broker or sugar merchant, signed a confirmation slip, but neither the contracts nor any relative confirmation slips were signed by the principals of the selling brokers. In actions by them against the buyer in which the buyer maintained that he had no contract with them.—Held: (1) the effect of the above clause was to exclude the right of disclosed principals to enforce contracts made on their behalf, unless the principals themselves signed the contract or a confirmation slip; (2) the principals of the selling brokers had no right to enforce these contracts against the buyer.—RAMSBOFF & WISSELER v. agent of B., owner of an estate, entered into an agreement for the sale of it with C., who appeared to act on his own account, but in fact was D.'s agent. A. & C. bound themselves in a penalty for the performance of the agreement, & C. paid A. a deposit of the purchase-money. On a breach of the conditions of sale on the part of the vendor:—Held: an action lay for money had & received at the suit of D. against B. to recover back the deposit, without proof of the money being paid over by A. to B.

On the agreement C. only may be liable, but the question here is, whose money was paid as a deposit? If it was the money of a principal paid through the medium of an agent, it may be recovered back by the principal upon the contract under which it was paid being rescinded. I therefore think that the action is rightly brought in the name of the present pltf. (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—NORFOLK (DUKE) v. WORTHY (1808), 1 Camp. 337.

2126. Action for price of goods—Sold by factor under del credere commission.]—Where a factor, having a del credere commission, sold goods for pltf., to deft. without disclosing their names, deft. knowing that he was factor, & pltf.s, according to the settled course of dealing between them, drew on the factor for the amount, who before the bills became due stopped payment & afterwards became bkpt.:—Held: notwithstanding the del credere commission, pltf.s. might have assumpsit against deft. for the price of the goods, the balance of the account current between the factor & deft., being at the time he stopped payment in favour of the factor, but at the time of action brought in favour of deft.

The factor is agent; the parties to be considered as principals are the owner & the buyer. The owner has a right to look for payment to the buyer, unless by some act in which he has concurred he has deprived himself of that right. When he gives a del credere commission, he means to obtain an additional security, that is, the security of the factor; & it would be extremely hard if, instead of having an additional security, he should find that he had only substituted one for another, that he had shifted the responsibility from the buyer to the factor (BAYLEY, J.).—HORNBY v. SMITH (1884), 5 R. & G. 331.—CAN.

2126 iv. — Negotiations by agent before agency established.]—A person offered, in his own name, to sell to the Govt. certain machinery which at the time did not belong to him. Before acceptance of the offer applt. agreed with the vendor to buy the machinery & employ the vendor as his agent to effect a sale of it to the Govt. The Govt. then sent to the agent a request to deliver the machinery at the price originally asked, but under somewhat different conditions. Without disclosing the agency the agent delivered the machinery, & it was accepted by the Govt. Applt., before payment, gave notice to the purchasers that he was the owner of the machinery, & that the sale had been made on his behalf by the agent. The purchasers on these representations agreed to treat him as the person entitled to payment, the agent acquiescing in this arrangement:—Held: (1) as the original offer to sell was not accepted in terms by the purchasers, the request by the latter to deliver was really a new offer to purchase, which was accepted by delivery in accordance therewith; (2) as the agency was in existence at the date of the offer, & the agent did in fact sell on the principal's behalf, the principal was entitled to sue for the purchase-money, & the purchasers were not discharged by unauthorised payment to the agent.—*MOONEY v. 2126 v. — Costs of action.]—Pltf. sued for balance of the price of a carriage sold to deft. Deft. denied purchasing the carriage from pltf. & proved he had bought it from V., pltf.'s agent, of which agency he was unaware. Judgment was given for pltf. for the amount, but with costs against pltf. of the defence as well as of the claim. The ct. will not give pltf. costs in such a case, even where deft. has not paid the sum claimed into ct.—LABELLE v. PATRIS (1873), 4 R. L. 530.—CAN.

f. Action for specific performance of contract of sale—Land sold by agent.]—W. purporting to be the owner of land sold it through an agent, O., to deft., C., & a conveyance was executed. W. was merely agent for pltf., who was the real owner, & subsequently brought an action against deft. for specific performance or damages:—Held: W. being the authorised agent of pltf., the latter could avail himself of the contract even though W. purported to act as owner.—*MCCARTHY v. The agreement was signed by D. "for the proprietors," & it was sworn by D. that pltf.s. were the proprietors of the land, & that he acted as their agent in making the agreement:—Held: it appeared by the agreement that it was made by D. as agent for the proprietors of the land, & they could take the benefit of it.—*HERSEY v. 2135 i. Where principal undisclosed—Being one of several firms for which agent known to act.]—By the memorandum & articles of assocn. of N Co. K. was appointed secretary, treasurer, & agent of the co., with power to raise or borrow such sums of money as he might think expedient. K. was also secretary, treasurer, & agent of three other mil. cos. On Oct. 31, 1878, the directors of N. Co. passed a resolution: "That the unallotted shares be filled up in the name of K., secretary, treasurer, & agent, who is empowered to mtge. them at a fair rate of interest to enable him to obtain funds for the use of the co." On Nov. 11, 1878, P. advanced money upon terms contained in a writing of that date, signed by K., in which K. acknowledged receipt of the money, for which three hundred and thirty-five shares in N. Co. were duly handed over as security, & he agreed to repay it within three months. On Jan. 17, 1879, an order was made for the winding-up of N. Co., & on Feb. 4, 1879, P. gave notice on the official liquidators of the co. of his claim against the co. for the money advanced by him on Nov. 11, 1878. On Apr. 24, 1879, P. filed his affidavit in support of his claim against the co. The co. resisted the claim:—Held: when P. advanced the loan to K. he was led to believe that K. was obtaining it on behalf of the four mil. cos. of which he was secretary, treasurer & agent, but P. was not aware & was not informed for which of the cos. the loan was obtained, & the money was in fact advanced to K. as to an agent acting on behalf of an undisclosed principal, & P., when he discovered that the money was obtained for N. Co., was entitled to claim against the co. & to rank as a creditor of the co. for the amount advanced to K.—PURMANUNDARR v. CORMAK (1881), L. R. 6 Bom. 326.—IND.

M. & Co. having become bkpt. & the oil not having been delivered:—Held: C. had in fact bought from B., & B. had sold as a principal, & not as A. & Co.'s agent, & C. could not claim the oil from A. & Co.—*HAYMAN, THOMAS & SONS v. 2140 i. leased the premises in question, which were included in the assignment, to deflt., & said he believed he mentioned to him at the time ptlf.'s name as owner, & referred deflt. to him with regard to a proposition to purchase. Afterwards the firm & deflt. had dealings together, & deflt. claimed that after crediting the rent they were still indebted to him. Ptlf., being examined, swore that he had no knowledge of deflt.'s occupation, or of the premises, but that F. was authorised to rent the place, & to use his name in the suit:—Held: it was properly left to the jury to say whether deflt. had taken the premises from ptlf. through F. as his agent, or from the firm, & the evidence warranted a verdict for deflt. —*CRAWFORD v. 2143 i. Agent—Held out as principal.]—H. had been connected with a business for a number of years, but after the business had been taken over by pltf., who retained H. as a clerk, H. represented to deft. that he was still owner of the business; deft., who had a running account with the business, believing H. to own it, had supplied him with goods. Pltf. had given no public notice of any change of ownership, & used the old stationery. On being sued by pltf. for goods supplied before & after pltf. took over, deft. admitted having bought the goods, but claimed to set off the value of goods supplied to H. & tendered the balance on proof that pltf. was owner of the business:—Held: deft. was entitled to set off the value of goods supplied to H.—*WELLS v. 2143 ii. — Intervention by prin-

2144. — Sale to broker—Knowledge of broker imputable to third party.]—Pltf. placed goods in the hands of H. to sell in his own name, & defts. bought them of H. through C., their broker. Defts. did not know the goods belonged to pltf., but C. did from having been previously in the employ of H., but not from anything communicated to him while acting as defts.' broker in the transaction:—Held: (1) defts. were affected by such knowledge of their broker; (2) they were not entitled to set off a debt due to them from H. against pltf.'s claim for the price of the goods. Qu.: whether H.'s ignorance of C.'s state of knowledge would make any difference.—*DRESSER v. To an action for goods sold & delivered, defts. pleaded the goods were sold to them by M., then agent of pltf.s., & intrusted by them with the possession of the goods as apparent owner thereof; that M. sold them in his own name & as his own goods with consent of pltf.s.; that defts. at the time of sale & delivery did not know, & had not the means of knowing, that pltf.s. were the owners of the goods, or that M. was their agent; & that, at the time of the sale & delivery, & before defts. knew pltf.s. were the owners of the goods, or that M. was pltf.s.' agent, M. became & continued indebted to defts. for goods sold, etc., to an equal amount, which they were willing & offered to set off:—Held: a bad plea, for not averring defts. did not know, & had not the means of knowing, that M. at the time he sold goods to them was a mere agent.—SEMENTA v. BRINSLEY (1865), 18 C. B. N. S. 467; 34 L. J. C. P. 161; 12 L. T. 265; 11 Jur. N. S. 409; 13 W. R. 634; 144 E. R. 520.

2146. — Pleading.]—In order to constitute a valid defence within the rule in George v. Clagett, No. 2140, ante, the plea should show that the contract was made by a person whom pltf. had due to him personally by the manager:—Held: pltf. entitled to set off the amount due to him from the manager, & the principal was bound by the agent's act though he exceeded his authority.—SMITH v. GROUETTE (1885), 2 Man. L. R. 314.—CAN.

2145 i. — Third party ignorant of principal's existence at time of sale.]—A. sold goods belonging to an undisclosed principal to B., & then failed. B., hearing A. had stopped payment, allowed him to set off against the price a debt due from him to the firm he was employed by. In an action by the undisclosed principal against B. for the price:—Held: the transaction by which payment was made discharged B., as A. had dealt with him without disclosing his principal.—ANDERSON, Mcgregor & Co. v. SMITH (1847), 19 Sc. Jur. 308.—SCOT.

Sect. 3.—Contracts made by agent: Sub-sect. 2. E.]

intrusted with possession of the goods; that the person sold them as his own goods in his own name as principal with authority of pltf., & deft. dealt with him as, & believed him to be, the principal in the transaction, & that before deft. was undeceived the set-off accrued. It is not necessary in such a plea to negative "means of knowledge" that the seller was dealing as an agent.

To a count for goods sold & delivered defts. pleaded that the goods were sold & delivered to them by S., then agent of pltf., & intrusted by them with possession of the goods as apparent owner thereof; that S. sold the goods in his own name & as his own goods with consent of pltf.; that at the time of sale defts. believed S. to be owner of the goods & did not know pltf. were owners of them or interested therein, or that S. was agent; & that before defts. knew pltf. were owners of the goods, or S. was agent in the sale thereof, S. became indebted to defts., etc., claiming a set-off. Replication that, before sale by S., defts. had means of knowing he was merely apparent owner of the goods, that same were intrusted to him as agent, & that S. was agent, & as such sold the goods to defts.:—Held: (1) the plea was good; (2) the replication was no answer to it.—BORRIES v. IMPERIAL OTTOMAN BANK (1873), L. R. 9 C. P. 38; 43 L. J. C. P. 3; 29 L. T. 689; 22 W. R. 92.

2147. — Third party knowing agent to be such.]—Deft., a tailor at W., ordered some gin of pltf., a wine merchant in London, through B., who professed himself an agent of pltf. The gin was sent to deft. with an invoice. When called upon to pay deft. set off a debt for goods supplied to the agent B.:—Held: deft. had no right to do this knowing B. to be an agent.—WINTLE v. DAVIES (1852), 19 L. T. O. S. 65, 123.

2148. — Custom.]—Pltf. was a hop grower & defts. were hop merchants. Pltf. instructed C., a hop factor, to sell hops for him. C. sold them to defts., who paid partly by cash & bill, & partly by setting off a sum then due from C. on other transactions. Defts. did not deal with C. in the belief that C. was selling his own hops & not those of an undisclosed principal; & the learned judge found that C. in fact told defts. he was only selling on behalf of the owner. Defts. set up a custom of the hop trade, that a merchant had a right to treat the factor as the only principal & to settle by payment to, or composition with, him only:—Held: (1) defts. were not entitled to set off C.'s debt against pltf.; (2) the custom was not proved, & in any case was too wide to be reasonable.—COOPER v. STRAUSS (1898), 14 T. L. R. 233.

believe, & did in fact believe, the agent was selling on his own account.

L. & Co. sold cotton to C. in their own names, but really on behalf of an undisclosed principal. C. knew L. & Co. were in the habit of dealing both for principals & on their own account, & had no belief on the subject whether they made this contract on their own account or for a principal. In an action brought by the principal for the price of the cotton:—Held: C. could not set off a debt due from L. & Co.—COOKE & SONS v. ESHELBY (1887), 12 App. Cas. 271; 56 L. J. Q. B. 505; 56 L. 2150. — Third party sub-agent.—Proceeds of sale placed to agent's account.]—A., a merchant, employed B. as agent to sell goods; B. employed as his sub-agent C., with whom he had a running account. B. became bkpt., & his assignees claimed from C. a balance then appearing to be due for sale of goods, which afterwards appeared to be the property of A., who also claimed the amount. C. interpleaded:—Held: (1) A., owner of the goods, had a right to recover the price from the sub-agent; (2) the mere fact of entering the amount by C. in his books to the account of B. was not an appropriation of the money so received in payment of the debt of B. to C. within the principle laid down in George v. Claggett, No. 2140, ante, so as to bar the right of A.

If A. desires B. to pay a sum, & B. employs C. & there is any mistake, A. cannot bring an action; it must be brought by the person whose money it was at the time. In the case of goods it is different. If A. employs B. to sell goods, & he employs C., & C. employs D., & so on, the goods remain the property of A., & when sold, the moment A. hears of the sale he has a right to go to the buyer & demand the price; unless he had a defence by reason of the decision in George v. Claggett, No. 2110, ante, he would be bound to pay A. (POLLOCK, C.B.).—FRITH v. CAZENOVE (1848), 12 L. T. O. S. 177.

2147 i. — Third party knowing agent to be such.]—When the buyer of goods from an agent knows that he is only an agent, he cannot set off a claim against the agent in an action by the principal for the price, although the ownership of the goods may have been transferred to another principal before he bought & without his knowledge. So far as the claim of set-off is concerned, it is immaterial whose agent the buyer thought him to be. Boulton v. Jones, 2 H. & N.

Debt., vendee of the goods, set off a debt due to him from R. & Co. upon another account, alleging that pltf. had not appeared at all in the transaction, & that credit had been given by R. & Co. & not by pltf. —Held: where a factor, dealing for a principal but concealing that principal, delivers goods in his own name, the person contracting with him has a right to consider him to all intents & purposes as the principal; & though the real principal may appear & bring an action upon that contract against purchaser of the goods, yet that purchaser may set off any claim he may have against the factor in answer to the demand of the principal. 2157. — Debt due to factor—Third party's right to allow credit to factor's assignees.—The owner of goods being indebted to a factor in an amount exceeding their value, consigned them to him for sale; the factor being also similarly indebted to S. sold the goods to him. The factor afterwards became bkpt.; & on a settlement of accounts between S. & the assignees, S. allowed credit to them for the price of the goods, & he then proved the residue of his claim against the estate:—Held: as the factor had a lien on the whole price of the goods, such settlement of accounts between the vendee & the assignees afforded a good answer to an action against vendee for the price of the goods, brought either by or on the account of the original owner.—HUDSON v. 2162. — Third party agent for sale—Not purchaser of goods.]—Applts., foreign merchants, employed a factor to sell goods on their account. The factor employed resps., London brokers, to sell the goods. The factor died on May 5, 1880, insolvent, having pledged the goods to resps. for an advance protected under Factors Acts. The goods were sold by resps. at a price more than sufficient to repay the advance, but the price had not been paid nor the goods delivered when resps. had notice of applts.' claim:—Held: (1) resps. could not retain the surplus proceeds of sale in discharge of the general balance due to them by the factor; (2) applts. had the right to recover the surplus proceeds of sale under Factors Act, 1842 (c. 39), s. 7, as money had & received on their account, & also on the grounds of privity of contract & right to the possession of goods not delivered until after notice of applts.' claim.—*KALTENBACH v. 2163. — Third party aware of factor's position.]—A. bought goods of B., knowing B. was selling them as factor:—Held: he could not, in an action by the principal for the price, set off a debt due to him from B., although it was found A. made the purchase bonâ fide. Seem: payment to B., though made prematurely, would, if made bonâ fide, bind the principal.—*FISH v. 2165. — Secret limitation — Whether third party affected by notice.]—It being within ordinary scope of a factor's authority to sell his principal's goods in his own name, a purchaser who has no knowledge of the agency is entitled to set off against the price of the goods a debt due to him from the factor personally.

A principal had stipulated with his factor that bills of exchange for the price of goods sold should be made payable in such manner as to show the factor's connection with the principal, & they were, in fact, stamped "Agent for W. D. Ltd., C. & G. Ironworks, Glasgow," in pale blue ink, but so that the stamp was concealed or obscured by the agent's signature:—Held: (1) the purchase being from a factor, & not a mere agent, the stipulation was immaterial as regarded purchaser, unless he was affected with notice; (2) the stamping of the bills was not sufficient evidence of notice against purchaser's uncontradicted oath that he was unaware of any agency.—Re HENLEY, Ex p. DIXON (1876), 4 Ch. D. 133; 46 L. J. Bey. 20; 35 L. T. 644; 25 W. R. 105, C. A.

J. seems to treat the law in the manner in which I have endeavoured to express it, namely, that a man is not the less a factor because he has private instructions not to sell in his own name; in other words, there may be a factor who as between himself & his principal is not justified in selling except in his principal's name (CHITTY, J.). That case shows that if a factor sells in his own name, although contrary to the instructions of his principal, it will give a right of set-off as between the purchaser & the factor; it will not take away his character of factor (COTTON, L. J.). Refd. Maspons v. Mildred (1882), 9 Q. B. D. 530, C. A.

2166. — Third party believing factor to be selling on own account to pay himself advances.]—A factor, employed to sell a cargo of goods consigned to him, on Feb. 6 sold to A. one parcel of the goods & delivered to him an invoice in his own name. On Feb. 13 A. applied to purchase another parcel, but some difference occurring as to the price, the factor said he must write to his principals. He did so, & on Feb. 20 informed A. of their answer. A. bought the goods at the price named by the principals, & the factor delivered to him an invoice, & a bought note in the names of the principals, the payment to be at 4 months in cash. On the same day, & on other occasions within that period, A. made payments to the factor, not expressly on account of these goods. It appeared it was the factor's practice, when he sold goods on his own account to pay himself advances, to deliver an invoice in his own name, & when he sold merely as a broker, to deliver a bought note. In an action by the owners of the goods against A. for the price of the parcel sold on Feb. 6, the jury found the factor communicated to A. that he sold the goods for other persons as principals, but A., until Feb. 20, bonâ fide believed he sold to pay himself advances, & using the ordinary precaution of merchants, A. was not bound to make further inquiry:—Held: A. was entitled to set off in this action the payments made by him to the factor.—*WARNER v. Lloyd's broker—Set-off against agent of cargo owners.]—Pltfs.' bankers, acting for owners of a cargo, employed B. & Co. as their agents to collect from underwriters contributions in respect of a general average loss. B. & Co., not being brokers, employed defts., brokers at Lloyd's, to collect the money, & they did so. At the time when defts. received the money there was a debt due to them from B. & Co. Defts., not knowing, & having no reason to suppose, that B. & Co. were acting otherwise, believed that B. & Co. were acting as principals:—Held: (1) defts. were entitled to stand in the position in which they would have stood if B. & Co. had been really principals; (2) defts. were entitled to set off against pltfs.' demand for the money which they had collected the debt due to them from B. & Co.—MONTAGU v. FORWOOD, [1893] 2 Q. B. 350; 69 L. T. 371; 42 W. R. 124; 9 T. L. R. 634; 37 Sol. Jo. 700; 4 R. 579, C. A.

Pltfs. jointly carried on trade as grocers, but R. was the only ostensible person engaged in the business, & appeared to the world as solely interested therein. By the terms of the partnership, R. was to be the apparent trader, & the others were to remain mere sleeping partners. Deft. was a policy broker, & being indebted for grocery (as he conceived) to R., he effected insurances & paid premiums on account of R. solely, to the amount of his debt, under the idea that one demand might be set off against the other. R.'s affairs being much deranged, payment of the money due from deft. was demanded by the firm, & was refused by him upon the ground of his having been deceived by the other partners keeping back & holding out R. as the only person concerned in the trade:—Held: as deft. had a good defence by way of set-off as against R., & had been by the conduct of plffs. led to believe that R. was the only person he contracted with, they could not claim payment of debts supposed to be due to R. alone without allowing the parties the same advantages & equities in their defence that they would have had in actions brought by R.—*STRACEY & ROSS v. 2170. ———.]—In an action by A., B., & C. against D. for money received to their use, D. pleaded that A., B., & C. were partners; that A., with the privity of B. & C., employed D. to sell certain personal property of plffs., as partners, which D. agreed to do; that at the time A. so applied to D., & also at the time of the sale, D. believed A. to be sole owner of the property & to have full authority to dispose of it as his own, D. having no knowledge that B. & C. had any interest in it; that, after being so employed & before the sale, D., at A.'s request, advanced A. money on an agreement that D. might retain the full amount of such money out of the proceeds of the property to be sold, & that the advance was made on the faith of such agreement & not otherwise. The plea then alleged D. sold the property for A., B., & C., suffering A. to deal with the property as his own, & justified retaining the money for the advance under the agreement. Replication that B. & C. did not suffer A. to deal with the property as his own. After verdict for plffs., on motion to arrest the judgment:—Held: the unanswerable facts in the plea constituted a good defence to the action.—GORDON, REID & PHIPPS v. ELLIS (1846), 2 C. No witnesses were called for deft.; but it was objected on his behalf that there was no evidence to go to the jury. The case went to the jury, who found verdict for pltf.:—Held: (1) there must be a new trial, as there was no evidence that deceased owner had authorised the master to employ pltf.; (2) the verdict was against the evidence, which showed pltf. treated the master as the person with whom he contracted.—PEARSON v. 2179. ——Unless principal undisclosed.—Where a person sells goods to another, not knowing at the time the buyer is an agent, the seller, upon afterwards discovering the principal, may resort to him for payment, although he has debited the agent; & he may recover against the principal, unless the latter has in the meantime paid the agent.

Where the seller knows the buyer is an agent, but does not know the name of his principal, he may afterwards, on discovering who the principal is, compel payment from the principal, unless payment has been made to the agent in the meantime.

Where the seller, with full knowledge of both facts that there is a principal, & who that principal is, debits the agent as the person to whom he gives credit, he cannot afterwards resort to the principal, although the latter may not have paid the agent.

At the time of making a contract of sale, the party buying the goods represented that he was buying them on account of persons resident in Scotland, but did not mention their names, & the seller did not inquire who they were, but afterwards debited the party who purchased the goods:—Held: the seller might afterwards sue the principals for the price.—THOMSON v. B. ordered goods from plff., the order being signed "J. B. B." & written on paper headed "James B. Butler, Flour Merchant, sole agent for Norman & Co., Millers, etc." Plff. supplied the goods to B., charged them to him in his books & took in payment B.'s cheque for part & promissory notes for the balance. The notes were dishonoured:—Held: there was evidence to support the finding of the jury that plff. had not in the circumstances given exclusive credit to B., & thereby released deft.—*MATTHEWS v. C. filled in the names of M. & B. as payees, who took the draft & delivered the cattle. The draft was not presented within the time named & was dishonoured. M. & B. brought separate actions against H. for the price:—Held: (1) these facts were not inconsistent with the view that plffs. had given credit to H., the disclosed principal, rather than C., who gave his draft & got delivery of the cattle; (2) there was no conclusive evidence of election, but at the utmost evidence only from which the jury might or might not have inferred the election; (3) the inference of election on these facts should have been drawn by the jury only & not by the ct.; (4) a verdict must be entered for plff. in each case.—*MATE v. ticularly directed that his name should not be disclosed. C. bought the cotton for delivery on a future day of pl'tfs., who, unwilling to trust C., insisted on having the name of C.'s principal. C. having told pl'tfs. the cotton was for debt., but that debt. did not wish his name to transpire, pl'tfs. sold the cotton & delivered to C. a sold note, addressed to him personally, & received from him a corresponding bought note, signed by him personally, & not as agent. Pl'tfs. debited C. in their books. C. delivered to debt. an advice note, "bought on your account of Messrs. C. & D. 100 bales," etc., which debt. accepted & retained without demur. Before time for delivery cotton had fallen in price, & debt. settled differences with C. When time for delivery arrived, cotton had still further fallen in price. Pl'tfs. called on C. to accept the cotton or pay the difference in price, threatening proceedings in case he failed to do so. On C.'s failure to do so pl'tfs. called on debt. to accept the cotton or pay the difference in price, & on his refusing to do so sold the cotton, & brought an action to recover the difference between the contract price & the price realised:—Held: (1) there was evidence to go to the jury to show that debt. had notice of & ratified the contract made on his behalf by C., though it was not the contract he originally authorised him to make; (2) parol evidence was admissible to show that debt. was the principal in an action brought with a view to charging him as such; (3) it was a question for the jury to consider whether, looking at all the circumstances, pl'tfs. had elected, at time of entering into the contract, to give credit to C., dealing with him alone; (4) there was evidence to go to the jury that they had not done so; (5) if they had not done so they had subsequently an election whether to treat C. or debt. as liable to them on the contract; (6) the facts warranted the jury in finding that pl'tfs. had never elected to treat C. as their debtor so as to preclude themselves from bringing the action.—CALDER v. In the course of his dealings with C., B. purchased of him goods belonging to A., which were invoiced to him by C. in his own name, though upon the balance of accounts between them C. was indebted to B. A. afterwards filed an affidavit in the Bkpey. Ct. in which he alleged C. was justly & truly indebted to him in a certain sum for goods belonging to him sold & delivered by C. as factor or agent of A. to B., & for which goods C. received payment by means of goods sold & delivered to him by B., & which goods were used by C. in his trade of a cheesemonger. Upon this affidavit a fiat was worked out against C. to its termination:—Held: this affidavit did not estop A. from suing B. for the price of the goods or afford sufficient evidence to sustain a plea of payment in that action.—MORGAN v. 2192. —.—When goods are sold to an apparent principal for ready money the seller must at his peril obtain immediate payment, & if the buyer is only an agent contracting in his own name, & receives the price forthwith from his principal, the seller who omits to enforce immediate payment cannot at a subsequent time recover the value of the goods from the principal upon the failure of the agent to pay over to the seller their price. The seller of goods to an apparent principal upon discovery that the buyer is only an agent may so conduct himself by demanding payment from, & taking proceedings against, the agent that he will be deemed to have elected to look to the agent only for payment, & will be debarred from any remedy against the real principal.

Defts. instructed R. to buy 700 pieces of cloth. R. obtained the cloth from pl'tfs., who made out the invoices to him. The terms of sale to R. were "cash on delivery." R. forwarded the cloth to debts., making out the invoice in his own name. The value of the cloth was £271 17s. 6d. Upon receipt of the cloth debts. sent R. £55, & debts. were allowed by R., on account of some silk, £19 10s. R. afterwards drew a bill for £200 in favour of pl'tfs. upon debts., which was duly paid. Pl'tfs. charged R. with interest, & not obtaining payment of the balance, requested by letter payment of it by debts.; debts. replied by letter repudiating the liability. After receiving debts.' letter pl'tfs. twice demanded payment of the balance from R. & took proceedings in bkpey. against him. R. having become insolvent, pl'tfs.

q. Action commenced against agent —Principal sought to be joined.]—An application was made by pl'tf. in a city. ct. action to add the wife of debt. as a debt., it being alleged that the goods claimed for, as sold to the husband, went into the stock-in-trade & were used in the business, which the wife carried on by her husband & agent, & that she received the benefit thereof, & further that pl'tf. was not aware of the real proprietorship of the business at the time of the sale of the goods.

The judge dismissed the application, holding that "having sued the agent pl'tf. has made his election, & must abandon & discontinue suit, if he would make the principal liable." On appeal the appeal was allowed with costs.—PERRIN v. COOK (1898), 40 N. S. R. 631.—CAN.

2190 i. Bankruptcy proceedings.]—A. carried on business in the name of A. & Co., but really as agent for debts. Pl'tfs. sold goods to A. & received his promissory note, signed with his name simply, for the price, without being aware of his agency. A. went bkpt., & pl'tfs., who then were aware of the agency, proved against A.'s estate, & received a dividend. In an action to recover balance from debts.:—Held: the proof alone, & certainly the proof followed by acceptance of the dividend, was an unequivocal act of election.—NATHAN v. CLARKSON (1889), 7 N. Z. L. R. 602.—N.Z.

afterwards sued defts. to recover the sum of $71 17s. 6d., the balance due after the payment of $200 :—Held: pltf. were not entitled to recover, because (1) the goods were sold for ready money, & pltf. having failed to enforce immediate payment from R., could not hold defts. liable, who had meanwhile paid R. the value of the goods; (2) by demanding payment from R., & taking proceedings in bkpcy. against him after they knew him to be only an agent, they had made a final & irrevocable election to treat him as their debtor instead of defts.—MACCLURE v. SCHEMEIL (1871), 20 W. R. 168.

2193. — Filing affidavit of debt.—B., a butty-collier working upon defts.' mine gave orders in his own name to pltf. for a supply of gunpowder to be used in the mine. The gunpowder was supplied, & subsequently pltf. became aware that defts. were B.'s principals. B. filed a petition in liquidation, whereupon pltf.' clerk made an affidavit of debt, treating B. as debtor, for the purpose of proving under the liquidation. The affidavit was placed upon the file of the proceedings, although an endeavour was made by pltf.' attorneys to prevent its being so filed. It remained upon the file, but pltf. took no further step in the liquidation, nor did they receive any dividend :—Held: there was no such election by pltf. to treat B. as their debtor as would be a bar to their maintaining an action against defts., the principals.—CURTIS v. WILLIAMSON (1874), L. R. 10 Q. B. 57; 44 L. J. Q. B. 27; 31 L. T. 678; 23 W. R. 236.

Annotations:—Apprvd. Scarf v. Jardine (1882), 7 App. Cas. 345. The case of Curtis v. Williamson simply held that the mere act of making & filing in bkpcy. an affidavit of the kind which was made was not one to which the party would have no locus penitentie under any circumstances, where he had been desirous, when he had fully considered the matter, of withdrawing it before it was put upon the file; & nothing was done, so far as appears, after it was put upon the file (LORD SELBORNE, C.). Refd. Re Davison, Ex p. Chandler (1884), 13 Q. 2194. Judgment is conclusive election.—Although unsatisfied.—If the situation of the principal is altered by dealings with the agent as principal, the principal is no longer subject to an action. Where, on the agent of an undisclosed principal making a contract in his own name, the third party sues the agent for breach of contract & obtains judgment against him, the third party cannot afterwards, upon discovery of the principal, sue the principal in respect of the same breach of contract, although the judgment recovered against the agent remains unsatisfied. There is no distinction in this respect between the master of a vessel signing a bill of lading in his own name for an undisclosed owner &

the ordinary case of agent & undisclosed principal.—PRIESTLY v. FERNIE (1865), 3 H. & C. 977; 34 L. J. Ex. 172; 13 L. T. 208; 11 Jur. N. S. 813; 13 W. R. 1089; 2 Mar. L. C. 281.

2196. ——Pltf. recovered damages against deft.'s husband for breach of an agreement to let a house to pltf., who was to have the option of purchasing the furniture therein. The husband of deft. having become bkpt., deft. claimed the furniture as her separate property. Pltf. now sued present deft. for damages for breach of the same agreement upon which he had sued her husband :—Held: even if the agent who let the house to pltf. was acting on behalf of deft. as well as her husband, they were joint contractors, & an action was not maintainable against deft., judgment having been already recovered against her husband upon the same contract.—HOARE v. NIBLETT, [1891] 1 Q. B. 781; 60 L. J. Q. B. 565; 64 L. T. 659; 55 J. P. 664; 39 W. R. 491.

2194 i. Judgment is conclusive election.—Pltf. sold a judgment against K. to G., who was acting as agent for Mrs. K., to whom he at once assigned the judgment & received $1,000 from her therefor. G., by his instructions from Mrs. K., was limited to $1,000 as the purchase price of the judgment, but, as he was interested in the architect's commission which he expected to receive out of the erection of a building proposed to be erected on the land against which the judgment was registered, he agreed to pay pltf. $1,000 in cash & $500 in addition, & he also agreed to enforce the judgment against K. & pay pltf. half the proceeds he received. G. failed to pay the $500 to pltf., who sued for it in a civ. ct., & took judgment against G. Subsequently pltf. sued G. & Mrs. K. to have assignment set aside or to have Mrs. K. declared trustee for pltf. :—Held: pltf., by taking judgment against G., elected to treat him as the sole principal, & Mrs. K. having bought the judgment without any knowledge of the agreement between pltf. & G., was not bound by its terms.—SEMRICH v. GUENTHER (1901), 10 B. C. R. 371.—CAN.

2194 ii. ——A., prior to signing a bond made in his favour by B., became aware that B. acted as agent. A. obtained decree against B., but the principal debtor as the real owner of the property successfully resisted A. obtaining possession. 2194 iii. — Although unsatisfied.—Where an agent having made a contract in his own name has been sued on it & judgment obtained against him, an action will not lie against the principal on the same contract, although satisfaction has not been obtained on the judgment against the agent, & although pltf. was not until after the recovery of judgment aware of the existence of a principal. household. An action for the price of the goods was brought against husband & wife claiming against them alternatively, & judgment was obtained against the wife under R. S. 2198. — Although for part of claim only.]—

An action was brought against a husband & wife, living together, for the balance of an account for groceries supplied by pltf. to defts. upon the order of the wife. Upon an application for judgment under R. S. C., O. 14, against both defts. the husband denied all liability, while the wife admitted indebtedness for the greater part of the claim. In view of this admission by the wife, the master gave judgment against the wife for part of the sum claimed, with leave to her to defend as to the balance & to the husband to defend the action. Afterwards a jury found there was no joint liability of husband & wife, & that pltf. had given credit to the husband only. Judgment was given against the husband for the balance of the amount:—Held: (1) there being no joint liability of husband & wife, but an alternative liability only, & the debt claimed being one undivided & indivisible debt, the taking of judgment by pltf. against the wife for part of that one indivisible debt was an election by him to accept the liability of the wife in respect of the whole claim; (2) he could not afterwards proceed against the husband in any part of that claim.—FRENCH v. HOWIE, [1906] 2 K. B. 674; 75 L. J. K. B. 980; 95 L. T. 274, C. A.

2199. — Setting aside of judgment will not revive liability.]—Pltfs., a firm of printers, sued deft. for the cost of printing for him a newspaper of which they supposed him to be the sole proprietor. There being no defence to the action, deft. consented to final judgment being signed against him. After judgment had been so signed, pltfs. received information that at the time the work was done T. was a partner of deft. & joint proprietor of the newspaper. They accordingly, with deft.'s consent, applied for an order that the judgment should be set aside, & that the writ should be amended by adding T. as a deft. in the action:—Held: (1) deft.'s consent to the setting aside of the judgment could not enable pltfs. to evade the rule that judgment recovered against one of two joint contractors is a bar to an action against the other; (2) there was no jurisdiction to make the order.—HAMMOND v. SCHOFIELD, [1891] 1 Q. B. 453; 60 L. J. Q. B. 539; 7 T. L. R. 300.

2200. — — —.]—A. & B. were sued in the High Ct. for the price of goods supplied. Judgment was obtained by default against A., & B. had leave to defend, & the action was remitted to the ct. ct. At the trial the ct. ct. judge found the debt was contracted by A. solely as agent for B., & pltf. had given credit to B. alone, & he adjourned the case to enable an application to be made to set aside the judgment against A. This was done, & the judgment was set aside & the action against both defts. was remitted to the ct. ct. At the second trial the ct. ct. judge entered judgment for A. & against B.:—Held: (1) pltf. by signing judgment against the agent had conclusively elected to proceed against him; (2) there was no power to set aside that judgment so as to revive pltf.'s right to proceed against the principal.—CROSS & Co. v. MATTHEWS & WALLACE (1904), 91 L. T. 500; 20 T. L. R. 603.

Subsequently P., while the judgment against K. was still subsisting, issued a writ against H., lessee of the theatre, for payment for the same goods. H. objected that the matter was res judicata. The judgment against K. was set aside two days before the motion in the action against H. came on for argument in the Div. Ct.:—Held: as the judgment against K. had now been set aside, the action was rightly brought against H.—PARTINGTON v. HAWTHORNE (1888), 52 J. P. 807.

2202. Other conduct.]—The seller of goods to an apparent principal, upon discovering that the buyer is only an agent, may so conduct himself by demanding payment from & taking proceedings against the agent that he will be deemed to have elected to look to the agent only for payment, & will be debarred from any remedy against the real principal.—*MACCLURE v. 2203. — Account rendered to agent debiting principal.]—The sub-charterparty of a ship to B. provided that the stevedore was to be nominated by B. & be under the control of the master & was to be paid by the owner. B. employed pltf., a stevedore, to load the ship, & introduced him to deft. as the person who was to load the ship. Deft. frequently came on board while the ship was being loaded & superintended & gave certain instructions relative to the stowage of the cargo. On completion of loading pltf. sent in his account to B. headed "To master & owners," & pressed B. for payment. B. had sent in his account to A., the charterer, & A. had sent in his account to deft., with the item "Stevedore's account charged." Deft. had paid A.'s account, & A. had paid B.'s account. B. became bkpt., & did not pay pltf. In an action by pltf. against deft. for non-payment of his charges:—Held: (1) there was evidence of a contract between pltf. & deft.; (2) deft. was liable to pay pltf.'s account.—*EASTMAN v. Upon the ct. holding that pltf. could not proceed under that Act & setting aside the judgment & execution, pltf. brought an action against the master of the ship:—Held: this was no election; to constitute election final judgment is necessary against one, after which no action is maintainable against the other.

months after the tender a building contract was signed by the building owner, which contained the usual clauses as to employment of specialists, & provided for the steel work a sum in excess of that at which pl'tfs. had undertaken to carry it out. Subsequently the builder gave pl'tfs. an order for the steel work in accordance with their tender. Shortly before conclusion of his work by the builder the architects, at request of pl'tfs., sent the builder a certificate & cheque for £500, stating that this included £150, being part of the sum due to pl'tfs. The builder went into liquidation without having paid pl'tfs. the £150. In an action by the specialists against the building owner to recover that sum:—Held: (1) the mere fact that pl'tfs. entered the name of the builder in their books as their debtor up to the date of his bk'cy. was not a sufficient election to preclude their having recourse to the building owner; (2) in substance the contract with pl'tfs. was made with the builder acting as agent for debt.; (3) pl'tfs. were entitled to judgment.—*YOUNG & Co., LTD. v. A bill was then filed by the trustees of the building society to recover the money from the finance co.:—Held: (1) the manager held the money as agent for the finance co. until he should pay it to some person competent to give a receipt on behalf of the building society; (2) as he never paid it over, it must be taken to be still in the hands of the finance co., which was liable to repay it to the building society.—*HARDY v. sued for balance due for hire of teams & board & lodging of men employed by defts. on railway work. K., an engineer, was in charge of the party. Defts. furnished K. with money sufficient to pay the bills incurred, he sending vouchers for payments, & when his account showed that the advances were nearly exhausted, further advances were sent. Pl'tfs. made out their accounts making K. their debtor, sometimes adding defts.' name after his name, & receipted their accounts without previous payment on K.'s representations that it was necessary that they should be sent to the head office in duplicate & receipted, & defts. believed the accounts had been duly paid out of their advances:—Held: defts. were led by pl'tfs.' conduct to believe that K. had discharged the obligation & had consequently dealt with K. to their prejudice, & pl'tfs. were estopped from denying that they had received payment. Wyatt v. Herford, 3 East, 147, cited.—GENTLES v. CANADIAN PACIFIC RY. CO. (1907), 14 O. L. R. 286; 9 O. W. R. 601.—CAN.

2212. — Bill given by principal according to terms of sale.]—A., a merchant at Liverpool, circulated catalogues of certain goods to be sold by auction, subject to the following condition amongst others: "payment to be made by bills, not exceeding 3 months' date, to be made equal to cash in 4 months." B., a broker at Liverpool, sent a catalogue to C., a merchant in London, who in return gave him directions to buy certain lots, which B. bought. Before the sale began the auctioneer stated that payment by known buyers was to be on the usual credit, 2 & 2 months. B., as a known buyer, received the goods without giving bills, & forwarded them to C. in London, with an invoice stating payment was to be equal to cash at 4 months. A few days afterwards B. drew on C. for the amount at 4 months from the day of the sale, which bill C. accepted & paid at maturity. Within 2 months from the sale B. failed, never having given bills to A. for the price, & A., finding C. was B.'s principal, sued him for the value:—Held: he could not recover, as C. would naturally be induced by A.'s catalogue to suppose B. had given bills for the goods at time of delivery, & accepted B.'s draft under a mistake occasioned by A.

Whenever the broker has stated to his principal & the latter has bonâ fide adopted a different contract from that under which the broker bought, the seller cannot call upon the principal, because the seller sues on the actual contract under which the goods were sold & must show that the principal authorised or ratified that contract, not a different one substituted by the broker (PARKE, J.).—*HORSEFALL v. 2213. Payment to factor—With knowledge that factor has not paid creditor.]—A factor made purchases for his principal, who made payments to him on account. Afterwards the factor was pressed for payment by a letter which came to the hands of the principal, who transmitted it to the factor & with knowledge of the fact, paid him the residue:—Held: the principal was liable over to the sellers for money so paid to the factor after notice.—

Payment to factor—Payment on account accepted by creditor from factor.]—An agent purchased goods factorio nomine, & the seller in his books entered the goods as sold to the principal, & the principal remitted the price to his agent, who, instead of paying the seller, merely made payments to account:—Held: the purchaser was not released from his obligation to pay the outstanding balance by reason of his having put his agent in funds so to do, nor by the seller accepting partial payment from the purchaser.—*WILLIAMS & Co. v. (b) Payment induced by Conduct of Creditor.

To an action for goods sold, deft. pleaded that the purchase was made by T., deft.'s agent, & that deft. within a reasonable time after the sale, & not unduly early, bonâ fide paid T. sufficient money to pay pltfs. On demurrer:—Held: the plea was bad.—HEALD v. KENWORTHY (1855), 10 Exch. 739; 24 L. J. Ex. 76; 24 L. T. O. S. 260; 1 Jur. N. S. 70; 3 W. R. 176; 3 C. L. R. 612; 156 E. R. 638.

2217 ii. — Effect of Contract Act (IX. of 1872), s. 232.]—Deft., who resided in Dholera, employed K. as his agent in Bombay. On Apr. 1, K. received from deft. remittances sufficient to pay for all goods bought from, pltf., & to leave a balance of Rs. 1,727 to the credit of deft. in his account with K. These remittances were made by deft. in good faith, & were received by K. at a time when pltf. gave credit to K., & did not know of any one else to be charged with the price of the goods. On Apr. 2 K. stopped payment, & on Apr. 3 pltf., in consequence of the failure of K. & the non-payment of the price of the goods, transhipped & sold them, the proceeds of the sale being deposited in the bank. On Apr. 4 pltf. discovered that deft. was the principal in the transaction, & brought a suit against him to recover the price of the goods. Deft. contended that, having in good faith paid his agent K. for the goods before the institution of the suit, he (deft.) was not liable to pltf.:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover. The rule of English law, which makes the liability of an undisclosed principal subject to the qualification that he has not bonâ fide paid the agent, or that the state of accounts has not been altered, is not adopted in the above Act, s. 232 of which does not impose upon the right of the other contracting party the qualification laid down by Thompson v. Davenport (1829), 9 B. & C. 78, & Armstrong v. Stokes (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 598, namely, that the principal has not paid the agent, or that the state of the account between the principal & agent has not been altered to the prejudice of the principal. The only qualification to the right of the creditor against the principal is that imposed by s. 234, namely, that he has not induced the principal to act upon the belief that the agent only will be held liable.—*PPELJI TRINAMDAS v. 2219. —.]—A vendor, who has given credit to an agent believing him to be the principal, cannot recover against the undisclosed principal, if the principal has bond fide paid the agent at a time when vendor still gave credit to the agent & knew of no one else as principal.

R. & Co. were commission merchants, acting sometimes for themselves & sometimes as agents. Pltf., a merchant, had had dealings with them, & had never inquired whether they had principals or not, & had always settled with them. On June 15 pltf. contracted to sell to R. & Co. 200 pieces of shirtings at a certain price, payment to be made in 30 days after delivery, with a discount of 1½ per cent. Pltf. delivered shirtings (grey or unbleached), & payment ought to have been made on Aug. 25. On Aug. 24 R. & Co. asked for delay till the next pay-day, Sept. 1. While pltf. was considering what to do R. & Co., on Aug. 30, stopped payment. It turned out R. & Co. had bought the goods for debts in the following circumstances. Debts, merchants, had been in the habit of giving orders to R. & Co. for white & grey shirtings; when white were ordered, R. & Co. went into the market, bought grey shirtings, had them bleached, & charged debts with the price of the grey shirtings & of bleaching, & 1 per cent. on the aggregate as their commission, with the charges of packing, etc. In previous transactions debts. had always paid R. & Co., generally in cash, i.e., on the next weekly pay-day, & had never been brought into communication with those who supplied or those who bleached the goods. In the present case debts. gave a verbal order for 200 white shirtings, the price not being named, nor the mode of payment. R. & Co., having received the grey shirtings from pltf., got them bleached, & sent them to debts., charging the price at which they had bought of pltf., the cost of bleaching, & 1 per cent. on the aggregate of those two sums, with the charges of packing, etc.; & debts., with perfect good faith, paid R. & Co. on the next pay-day after they received them, viz., on Aug. 11. On the above facts, the ct. having power to draw inferences:—Held: (1) pltf.'s delay in taking no steps between Aug. 25 & 30 was not laches such as would have precluded him, if otherwise entitled, from recovering payment from debts.; (2) assuming there was authority from the course of dealing between debts. & R. & Co. to establish privity of contract between debts. & those from whom R. & Co. obtained the goods, after the bond fide payment by debts. to R. & Co. at a time when pltf. still gave sole credit to R. & Co., & knew of no one else as principal, pltf. could not come upon debts. for the price.—ARMSTRONG v. STOKES (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 598; 41 L. J. Q. B. 253; 26 L. T. 872; 21 W. R. 52.

Stokes* is a very remarkable case—it seems to have turned in some measure upon the peculiar character filled by R. & Co. as commission merchants; I think upon the facts of that case that the agents would have been entitled to maintain an action for the money against the debts., for as commission merchants they were not mere agents of the buyer (BRAMWELL, L.J.). Consd. Maspons v. 2220. Delay in claiming against principal after disclosure—Principal prejudiced thereby.]—H., a commission agent, known by pltf. to be such, ordered goods of pltf. in Aug., 1857, in pursuance, though not to pltf.'s knowledge, of debt.'s orders. Pltf. sent the goods to H. with invoices debiting him with the price, & he was entered in pltf.'s books as purchaser. By the course of dealing the price became due in cash, minus discount, on the last Friday in Oct., 1857. H. had been employed for many years by debt., a merchant carrying on business in L. & C., to buy goods for him, debt. giving H. acceptances from time to time, in order to put him in funds to meet the current account. The goods were sold by pltf. in the unfinished state. H. got them finished, & reinvoyed them to debt. as from himself, charging the cost price of the goods, & also the cost of finishing & separately, a commission for himself. H. sent the goods, when finished, to debt.'s shipping agent, to be shipped for debt. to C. On Oct. 13, 1857, debt. suspended payment, having between Aug. & that date sent H. acceptances more than sufficient to cover the price of the goods & of all other goods purchased by H. for him, which bills had been discounted by H. & were then in the hands of third persons, having still to run. H. did not pay pltf. either on the last Friday in Oct., 1857, or at any time. On Oct. 16, 1857, H. sent debt. his account current, including the invoice made out by him for the goods, crediting himself with the price of the goods, & debiting himself with the amount of the bills, the balance being in debt.'s favour. On Nov. 19, 1857, H. first informed pltf. that debt. was H.'s principal in the purchase. Pltf. took no proceedings in the matter till Sept., 1858, when he commenced the present action. After Nov. 10, 1857, & before the suit, debt. arranged with the holders of the bills discounted by H., as above stated, to give them promissory notes for the amount. The notes became due & were dishonoured; whereupon, & before the suit, debt. arranged, by way of composition, to give the holders fresh acceptances at 12s. 6d. in the pound on the amount of the notes. These acceptances were still running when this action was commenced, H. being a party to both renewals. At the trial the jury found that H. purchased as agent for debt.:—Held: assuming on this finding that pltf. had a right on Nov. 10, 1857, to elect whether to sue debt. or H., he must either be taken by his conduct to have elected to look only to H. & not to charge debt., or if not to be taken to have made that election, he had by lying by during an unreasonable time, & thereby inducing debt. to alter for the worse his position towards H., precluded himself from recovering against debt. Qu.: whether pltf. had on Nov. 19, 1857, a right of election between H. & debt. or whether he was not bound to look to H. alone.—*SMETHURST v. credit to the agent, & that the principal has been prejudiced by that supposition. Mere delay in enforcing payment from the agent will not be sufficient for the purpose.

Pltf. sold stores for a ship to T., ship's husband & managing owner. Deft. was part-owner of the ship, & was also interested jointly with T. in the adventure for which the ship was being fitted out. Pltf. applied to T. for payment, but did not obtain it. Three months after the goods were supplied, & again two years after that, deft. settled accounts with T. & gave him credit for the price of the goods, supposing that they had been paid for. More than 3 years after they had been supplied, T. having become bkpt., pltf. for the first time applied for payment to deft., & brought his action for the debt:—Held: there had been no such conduct on the part of pltf. as would discharge deft. from his liability.—*DAVISON v. C. bought of pltf., informing them at the time of the sale that he was buying for principals, though he did not tell them who those principals were. The terms of the sale were "cash on or before delivery"; but, though it was not infrequent in the oil trade in such a case to require payment before delivery, there was no invariable custom to that effect. Pltfs. delivered the oil to C. without insisting on prepayment, & defts., not knowing pltfs. had not been paid, paid C. Shortly afterwards C. stopped payment, & pltfs. sued defts. for the price:—Held: (1) as pltfs. at the time of sale knew the broker was buying for principals, & not on his own account, the fact of defts. having paid the broker did not preclude pltfs. from suing them for the price, unless before such payment they had by their conduct induced defts. to believe they had already been paid by the broker; (2) the mere omission on the part of pltfs. to insist on prepayment was not, in absence of an invariable custom to that effect, such conduct as would reasonably induce such belief.—*IRVINE & Co. v. B., after receiving advice of the purchase & of the acceptance of the bills by A., made large remittances to A. on account of these & other goods, & A., at the time of his stoppage, was considerably indebted to B.:—Held: in these circumstances, it was not competent to C. to sue B. for price of the goods.—*SMYTH v. The promissory note was not paid when it became due, & pltfs. brought an action & recovered judgment against both defts. for the residue of their debt with costs. 2231. — Bill renewed from time to time.—]—Where a creditor takes a bill from the agent of the debtor for the amount of the debt, & renews it from time to time at request of the agent, his so doing will not discharge debtor, unless the latter shows that he dealt with his agent upon the faith of the money being paid, or that in some other mode he has been prejudiced by the fact of the creditor so dealing with the agent.

Where a tradesman, who had supplied goods to a ship, sent in his account to the owner's agent & ship's husband, & took his acceptance at 3 months for the amount, deducting discount for that time, which was the usual credit, & when the bill became due consented to a renewal of it, adding interest, & in like manner took a third acceptance, which was dishonoured, & the agent soon afterwards failed, the balance in his hands in favour of his principal, the shipowner, having during all this time exceeded the amount of the bill which was unknown to the principal, who had never inspected the agent's accounts:—Held: (1) the tradesman might sue the shipowner for the amount of his claim; (2) it was not discharged by the acceptance of the agent.—*ROBINSON v. & for his own convenience; (2) debts. were not bound to prove that an offer was made to pay in cash.—STRONG v. HART (1827), 6 B. & C. 160; 9 Dow. & Ry. K. B. 189; 5 L. J. O. S. K. B. 82; 108 E. R. 412.

—An agent for the seller of goods received from the buyer an order upon his banker for the price to be paid out of funds specifically deposited for that purpose with the banker. The banker offered to pay in cash, deducting discount, or by a bill upon a third person. The agent without buyer's knowledge took the bill, which was dishonoured.—Held: seller could not sue buyer for the price of the goods.—SMITH v. FERRAND (1827), 7 B. & C. 191; 9 Dow. & Ry. K. On special demurrer objecting that the plea did not properly show accord & satisfaction, or set-off:—Held: (1) the plea alleged only that the bill was taken for & on account of the moneys in the declaration & appropriated & retained to & for the liquidation & discharge; (2) the plea should have alleged that the bill was given & accepted in accord & satisfaction; (3) the plea was bad.—*BAILLIE v. 2235. — After every effort made to obtain cash.—]

—The managing owner of a ship paid for repairs with bills which were dishonoured. In an action against the owners:—Held: (1) if it had been shown that pltf. could have had cash from the agent, & instead of taking it, elected to take bills from him, they would then have been in the position of practically having had, so far as the other owners were concerned, not what was really payment, but what was tantamount to it; (2) as they had not had the power to get cash, but had tried to get it & failed, & had merely taken bills on account, there was no election on their part to renounce any right they had which would in any way discharge the claim made upon debts.—THE HUNTSMAN, [1894] P. 214; 70 L. 2237. Creditor taking agent's cheque—After offer of cash.]—If a creditor is offered cash in payment or a cheque upon a banker from an agent of his debtor, & he prefers the latter, this does not discharge debtor if the cheque is dishonoured, although the agent fails with a balance of his principal in his hands to a larger amount.—*EVERETT v. A broker who had received freight under a charterparty on account of the owners of the ship, offered to pay it to the captain, who was also managing owner, by a cheque. This the captain declined, preferring the broker should open a credit for him at a bank in N. in favour of H., which the broker did. The bank paid H. £250, for which H. gave a bill drawn by him in favour of the bank upon the broker, who accepted & paid it when due. The broker having sued the co-owners for the balance of his account:—Held: this was a good payment of £250 by the broker & binding on the co-owners.—ANDERSON v. HILLIES (1852), 12 C. D. Effect of Book Entries in Books of Common Agent holding Funds for both Debtor and Creditor.

2240. Not payment without notice to transferee.]—Where a mercantile firm in England borrows money of another firm, & both have a common agent abroad, if that agent credit the lending firm with sums received for the borrowing firm, in pursuance of an agreement between them, that credit is not a payment. The transfer from one account to another in an agent's books is not payment as between agent & transferee of such account, & the entry is not an acknowledgment, unless the transferee is informed of the fact.—McLARTY v. MIDDLETON (1858), 6 W. R. 379; varied on another point, 6 W. R. 853, C. A.

2241. — Funds misappropriated.]—A debtor to the estate of a deceased person, who places money in the hands of his agent for purpose of paying the debt, is not discharged by the fact that such agent is one of the exors. of deceased.

Pltf. was indebted to the estate of a deceased person of whom debts. A. & D. were exors. A. was also solr. to pltf., & held money belonging to pltf., out of which pltf. directed him to pay off the debt. A. informed pltf. by letter that he had done so, & in an account between pltf. & himself as solr. he credited himself with such payment; but he misapplied the money. D. knew nothing of the transaction, & thought the debt was still owing by pltf., though in the residuary account of the estate of deceased, which was made out & signed by both exors., this debt was scheduled as money received & property converted into money. It appeared D. had signed the account without examination:—Held: (1) the letter & account delivered by A. were not evidence against D.; (2) D. was not bound by the residuary account, as he did not know what he was signing; (3) as A. alone had received the money merely as agent for pltf., his receipt could not discharge pltf. from his liability to the estate.—MILLER v. DOUGLAS (1886), 56 L. J. Ch. 91; 55 L. T. 583; 35 W. R. 122.

E. Other Cases.

Before the settling day H. applied for the purchase-money, which pltfs. agreed to advance, if H. would procure debts' acceptance for the amount, promising to appropriate the purchase-money, when received, to its discharge. The bill was drawn for a period beyond the settling day, & was for a large amount to cover the accruing interest. Debts. consented to this

(1) the loss must fall on pltfs. & not on debts., though debts. knew of the untrustworthiness of W. & did not communicate their knowledge; (2) pltfs. were estopped from denying receipt of payment. Graves v. Key, 3 B. & Ad. 313; Hearne v. Rogers, 9 B. & C. 573; Wright v. Herford, 3 East. 147; Doult v. Grace Smith, [1912] A. C. 716; Irvine v. Watson, 3 Q. B. 414; Darison v. Donaldson, 3 Q. 2240 i. Not payment without notice to transferee—Bill drawn on common agent.]—A. ordered coffee of B. R. & Co. were the general agents of both buyer & seller. The coffee was to be paid for by bill drawn by B. on R. & Co. A bill of exchange for the amount was accordingly drawn by B. on & accepted by R. & Co. The coffee was received by the buyer. R. & Co. on receipt of the bill of exchange credited the account of B. in their books with the amount, & debited the account of A. with a like sum. Before the bill of exchange arrived at maturity R. & Co. stopped payment.—Held: entry of the amount of the bill to the credit of B. in books of mutual agents was not payment for the coffee; & B. did not, by such entry, accept in satisfaction of his demand the credit opened by the purchaser with R. & Co.—MAXWELL v. DEARE (1853), 23 L. T. O. S. 1; 1 C. L. R. 776, P. C.—S. AF.

In possession. These rentals having proved insufficient to pay pltf.'s interest in full, C. from time to time advanced moneys to make up the deficiency, & remitted to pltf. the full amount of interest. Pltf. asserted that the advances made by C. were still due & owing as arrears of interest upon her mtgee., & deft. maintained that C.'s payments extinguished pltf.'s claim for interest & that only the principal moneys were outstanding.—Held: the advances made by C. were never intended to be payments in satisfaction of pltf.'s claim for interest upon the mtgee. Simpson v. Eggington, 10 Exch. 845; Williamson v. Gould, 1 Bing. 171, cited.—GLASCOTT v. CAMERON, (1905), 6 O. W. R. 36; 10 O. L. R. 399.—CAN.

arrangement & on the faith of it accepted the bill. CHICHESTER* (1850), 7 Exch. 95 n.; 21 L. J. Ex. 292 n.; 155 E. R. 871.

The bill was afterwards dishonoured whilst in the hands of a third person, & the rent was not paid by the tenant, whereupon the landlord distrained:—Held: (1) it was a question for the jury, whether the bill was discounted for, or the money lent to, the tenant by the agent, or whether it was an advance by the agent to the landlord; (2) if the bill was discounted for, or the money so lent to, the tenant, the landlord was not entitled to distrain; otherwise he was entitled.—*PARROTT v. Liability for fraud & misrepresentation of sub-agents. See Part VI., Sect. 4, ante.

A. General Principles.

2245. Principal liable for fraud of agent in course of business.]—A principal is liable to an action for the fraudulent misrepresentation of his agent acting in the course of his business.

Pltf. having for some time, on a guarantee of debts., supplied D., a customer of theirs, with oats on credit for carrying out a Govt. contract, refused to continue so to do unless he had a better guarantee. Dft.'s manager thereupon gave him a written guarantee to the effect that the customer's cheque on the bank in pltf.'s favour in payment for the oats supplied should be paid, on receipt of the Govt. money, in priority to any other payment, "except to this bank." D. was then indebted to the bank to the amount of £12,000, but this fact was not known to pltf., nor was it communicated to him by the manager. Pltf. supplied the oats to the value of £1,217; the Govt. money, amounting to £2,676, was received by D. & paid into the bank; but D.'s cheque for the price of oats drawn on the bank in favour of pltf. was dishonoured by dfts., who claimed to retain the whole sum of £2,676 in payment of D.'s debt to them. Pltf. having brought an action for false representation, & for money had & received:—Held: (1) there was evidence to go to the jury that the manager knew & intended the guarantee should be unavailing & fraudulently concealed from pltf. the fact which would make it so; (2) dfts. would be liable for such fraud in their agent; (3) the fraud was properly charged in the declaration as the fraud of dfts. Qu.: whether pltf. could have recovered under the count for money had & received.—*BARWICK v. In an action by the holder:—Held: the receipts were valid as between the co. & the holder acting in good faith, the apparent authority being the real one, & the fact that other persons might be responsible for an offence did not diminish the liability of the co., which was jointly & severally liable.—*WARD v. J. G. after discovering the stock was not Treasury stock gave in payment a note in favour of the co., & it was indorsed over to G. J. G. renewed the note, but refused to meet the renewal when dft. the co. having meantime failed. G. sued on the note & J. G. counter-claimed for damages for misrepresentation & deceit. J. admitted making the misrepresentations, but denied that he did so fraudulently. G. denied knowledge of the deceit of M. in consequence of which J. made the representation. 2248. — Pleading Fraud.]—Where one party has suffered, & another has profited, by the fraudulent representation of an agent of the latter made within scope of his authority, the former is entitled to recover damages.

In an action of deceit, whether against a person or against a co., the fraud of the agent may be treated for the purposes of pleading as that of the principal.

An officer of a banking corp'n., whose duty was to obtain the acceptance of bills of exchange in which the bank was interested, fraudulently, but without the knowledge of the president or directors of the bank, made a representation to A. which, by omitting a material fact, misled A., & induced him to accept a bill in which the bank was interested; & A. was compelled to pay the bill:—Held: A. could recover from the bank the amount so paid.—MACKAY v. 2249. — Form of action.]—An action was brought against L. & H. for fraudulent conspiracy. The jury, negating conspiracy, found plff. had been induced to advance money to L. by certain misrepresentations, most of which were made by L. as agent for H., & with his authority:—Held: (1) H. could not retain the money received by his agent through false & fraudulent representations; (2) there was evidence that H. was himself party to the fraudulent representations; (3) plff. was entitled to recover notwithstanding the form of action.—SHICKLE v. LAWRENCE (1886), 2 T. L. R. 776, C. A.

2250. — Question discussed.]—A contractor having sued the other party to the contract (a public authority) in an action of deceit for damages for fraudulent representations made by the agent of the public authority as to the nature of the works to be executed, one defence was that by a provision in the contract plff. must verify all representations for himself & not rely on their accuracy:—Held: the contract, truly construed, contemplated honesty on both sides, & protected only against honest mistakes. 2252. 2253. Representation false to knowledge of agent but not of principal.]—A principal is liable, in an action of deceit, for the false & fraudulent representations of his agent as to the quality & value of an article, whereby a person has been induced to purchase it for more than its worth, notwithstanding that the principal neither authorised nor knew of the fraudulent conduct of his agent (POLLOCK, C.B., WILDE, B.; diss. 2254. Principal knowing truth but agent innocent.]—Where a principal purposely employs an agent ignorant of the truth in order that such agent may innocently make a false statement believing it to be true, & may so deceive the party with whom he is dealing, the representation by the agent becomes a misrepresentation by the principal so as to vitiate the contract.

Deft.'s son, acting for deft., & with deft.'s authority, represented that certain sheep, which he sold to pltf., were all right. Deft. had fraudulently concealed from his son that the sheep had the rot, & fraudulently gave his son authority to sell them for the best price, intending that the son should represent that they were sound:—Held: deft. liable in an action to recover damages for fraudulent misrepresentation.—LUDGATER v. LOVE (1881), 44 L. T. 694; 45 J. P. 600, C. A.

2255. —.—To an action for not taking a ready furnished house of pltf., according to a written agreement, deft. pleaded that pltf. caused him to enter into the agreement, & deft. was induced to enter into it, by means of fraud, covin, & misrepresentation of pltf., & others in collusion with him. It appeared deft., being in want of a town residence for the purpose of educating his children, applied to C., who had been employed by pltf. to let the house, & to whom all persons making inquiries about it were referred. Deft. asked if there was "anything objectionable about the house," to which C. replied, "nothing whatever." Deft. afterwards agreed to take the house, & an agreement was drawn up by C. & signed by deft., & afterwards by pltf. The agreement did not embody the representation of C. On the day after signing the agreement, deft. discovered that the house next adjoining the house in question was a brothel. Pltf. was fully cognisant of this fact, but the agent was not, nor was pltf. aware that the agent had made any representation on the subject. Deft., on making the discovery declined to take the house:—Held: (1) as the agent's representation was not embodied in the contract, it was not enough to show it was untrue, but it was necessary to prove it was made fraudulently; (2) pltf.'s knowledge of the existence of the nuisance & the representation of the agent, who was ignorant of that fact, that it did not exist, were not sufficient to constitute fraud within the meaning of the plea (LORD ABINGER, C.B., diss.).—CORNFOOT v. 2257. —.]—In an action for fraudulent representation of the value of a term of years of a house on the assignment of it from deft. to pltf., the jury found a special verdict that deft. desired W., her attorney, to obtain the necessary information from a person who had a lien on the house, & to instruct pltf., an auctioneer, to prepare particulars for the sale of the premises by auction. W., on the information received, represented the premises to be let at a rent of £100 per annum. They were let at that rent, but deft., & not the tenant, paid the rates & taxes, but that was not known by W., & was not the usual practice in the district. On this instruction pltf., with the assent of W., who believed the description to be correct, & thought it pltf.'s duty to inquire, described the premises as let at £100 per annum, clear of rates & taxes. Pltf. purchased the premises himself, & for a larger sum than he would have given, if he had known that the landlord paid the rates & taxes.—Held: (1) this special verdict did not disclose any right of action against deft.; (2) there was no finding that pltf. was induced to purchase on the faith of any statement made by W.; (3) the immediate cause of the injury sustained by pltf. arose from his own misapprehension & not from any misrepresentation or concealment on the part of deft.

Principal not liable for fraud outside scope of authority.]—A master is liable for the fraud of his servant committed in the course of his service & for the master's benefit, though it is not necessary that the benefit should accrue to the master; but a master is not liable for misconduct of the servant committed for the servant's own private benefit.

A cheque was given to pltf. by the district board for repairs done to certain roads. On presentation at the Govt. Treasury Office, the amount was not paid to pltf., but was misappropriated by the poddar & a mohurr employed in the Treasury. Pltf. brought a suit for recovery of the amount against those officers of the Treasury as well as the Secretary of State for India.—Held: the Secretary of State was not responsible for the misappropriation by his employees, the misappropriation being within scope of the duties intrusted to them. The fraud & misappropriation were not committed either for the benefit of the Secretary of State or for purposes of the agency. Barwick v. English Joint Stock Bank (1867), L. By the fraud of a clerk employed to pay in the money the Registrar-General was led to overdraw his account.—Held: the Govt. having given no authority to overdraw the account, & such overdraft being outside scope of the dealings of the parties, the Govt. was not liable for such overdraft.—*LONDON CHARTERED BANK OF AUSTRALIA v. On one occasion, when C. had bought wheat of L., B. & L. conspired together, & B. gave L. a receipt for delivery of the wheat, though it had not been delivered; L. in B.'s presence gave C. the false receipt & received the price of the wheat from him. In an action by C. against R., B.'s principal, for the false representation:—Held: (1) even if R. must be taken to have known that it was the course of business of C. to pay the price on production of B.'s receipts, he did not contract with C. that he should give such receipts; (2) he was not answerable for B.'s fraud.—*COLEMAN v. 2262. Representation within implied authority —Agent employed to let property.]—Where a principal employs an agent to let or to find a purchaser for a house, he authorises the agent to state any fact or circumstance which may relate to the value of the property.

Where an agent for sale of a house untruly represented to an intending purchaser that a third person was prepared to buy the house at a high price, & if he could not buy he would rent it at a high rent:—Held: the principal was answerable for the representation by the agent, & could not enforce the contract.—*MULLENS v. 2263. — Bank manager—As to security.]—Pltf.'s wife kept a deposit account at a joint-stock bank. The manager of the bank represented to her that the bank had an equitable mtge. on some houses of a third person, subject to a mtge. of £400, & advised her to purchase the houses for £595, £400 to be paid in discharge of the mtge. & £195 to the bank. Pltf.'s wife consented, & took her deposit receipts to the manager at the bank, who, on presenting them to a clerk, obtained from her £595. The manager then gave her a receipt in his own name, stating that £195 was the balance of purchase-money of the houses, & that £400 was deposited with him to pay off the mtge. He afterwards absconded with the £595. Pltf. having brought an action against the bank to recover the money, the jury found that the manager intended to make the wife believe, & she did believe, that the manager was acting in this transaction as agent for the bank:—Held: the bank was responsible for the money.—*THOMPSON v. 2265. Scope of authority—Auctioneer's statement as to extent of property sold.]—To a claim for specific performance of a contract for the purchase of land, deft. pleaded that he was deceived as to the extent of the property by a parol declaration of the auctioneer, as agent of pltf., to his (deft.'s) agent, at the time of the sale:—Held: evidence of the auctioneer's representation was admissible to show that deft. was induced by fraud to enter into the contract, so as to get rid of the contract altogether, but not for the purpose of obtaining performance of the contract with an abatement of price.

J. conveyed the estate in question to trustees, pltf., on trust to sell for the payment of his debts. Representations made by J. to deft. prior to the sale as to the extent of the estate:—Held: not binding on pltf., as it did not appear that J. was employed by them to show or describe the lands, or was in any way their agent.—*WINCH v. Deft. had no notice of any intention on the part of C. or the solr. to prefer any creditor of C. Subsequently C. made an assignment for the benefit of creditors to pltf., who brought an action against deft. on the ground that the latter was responsible for the fraud of his agent, the solr.:—Held: the solr. was agent of deft. only in the matter of effecting the mtge.; in paying over the money after it was advanced the solr. was acting for another principal, & this act not being one from which deft. derived any benefit or of which he had any knowledge, he was not liable.—*GIBBONS v. 2274. Appointment obtained by fraud.]—If an agent be employed to obtain an appointment, &

he procure it by fraud, the principal cannot take advantage of any agreement such agent may have entered into for the purpose of securing the appointment.—RICHARDSON v. MELLISH (1824), 9 Moore, C. P. 435.

2275. Purchase of business—As to turnover.]—A baker was desirous of disposing of his shop & the goodwill of his business, & an advertisement stating that the house was doing twelve sacks a week was inserted in a newspaper by a broker in consequence of a conversation with the baker's wife, who managed the business for him, in which conversation she told the broker that they did between nine & ten sacks a week, upon which he said, "We must make it twelve for the paper." In consequence of the advertisement, a person desirous of purchasing went to the wife, & said to her, "Are you really doing anything like this business?" to which she replied, "Yes, we are doing eleven sacks," & appealed to the man in the shop, who confirmed her statement. The baker himself did not appear at all in any part of the transaction, except that he received the purchase-money, & paid the broker his commission. In an action brought by purchaser on the representation contained in the advertisement:—Held: the baker was personally & individually answerable in damages, inasmuch as, though he did not make any representation himself, yet he made the wife his agent, & was bound by her statements.—TAYLOR v. GREEN (1837), 8 C. & P. 316.

2276. Lease induced by — As to nature of contract submitted for signature.]—Deft., possessed of a leasehold estate for the residue of a 75 years' term, & desirous of underletting same for the whole term, save a few days, at an increased reserved rent, advertised as for sale by private contract "the residue of a long leasehold estate, at a moderate ground rent," with various encomiastic expressions of the investment, & a reference to himself for further information, but not stating he was himself the vendor. This advertisement was seen by pltf. the day before the last day fixed for the sale. He immediately saw deft., & was by him referred to an agent near the premises, who induced pltf. not to inspect the premises closely, & to sign a contract, which the agent stated to be a usual & proper form for the purchase of leasehold estates at a ground rent. This contract, in fact, was an agreement to pay a considerable premium for an underlease from deft., at a rent which appeared to be a full rack rent. The agent at the same time dispensed with payment of the deposit, taking an I.O.U. from pltf., a perfect stranger:—Held: pltf. entitled to have the I.O.U. & the contract delivered up to be cancelled, on the ground of fraudulent misrepresentation.—BARTLETT v. SALMON (1855), 1 Jur. N. S. 277; reversd. on another point, 6 De G. M. & G. 33.

2277. Lloyd's certificate—Complicity of vendor principal.]—B. induced a Lloyd's surveyor to report that a ship had been repaired & hung (i.e., held up so as to show the state of her bottom), & on that report obtained an A1 certificate. In fact, the repairs had not been done, nor had the ship been hung, but B. promised at the time he induced the surveyor to make his report that the repairs would be done, & the ship would be hung:—Held: (1) at the time the report was given on the faith of which the certificate was obtained no fraud had actually been committed, however it might have been contrived by the agent, for the surveyor knew the repairs had not then been done, nor the ship hung, & he relied on the agent's promise that these things should be done; (2) if the principal, the vendor, was an accomplice in a contrivance by the agent fraudulently to get the report, in order to get the certificate, he was liable in an action by the vendee; (3) if not, & if vendor was not a party to any fraudulent representation, he was entitled to succeed.—TINDALL v. BASKETT, BASKETT v. TINDALL (1861), 2 F. & F. 644.

2278. Goods obtained by fraud—Complicity of principal.]—A., agent for sale of manures on commission, had been employed in that capacity by deft., a manure dealer, & being indebted to deft. on balance of account in a sum which he was unable to pay, it was arranged he should obtain manures from other persons & send them to deft. in discharge of his debt. He purchased of pltf. a quantity of manure "at 3 months' credit to sell again," which by A.'s direction was sent by pltf. to A. at F. station, where they were received & taken away by deft., to whom A. had forwarded the delivery note. On the trial of an action by pltf. against deft. to recover the value of the goods the judge stopped deft.'s counsel from calling deft. as a witness, & told the jury if they thought A. represented himself to pltf. as an ordinary buyer on sale for profit, & he was not so, but he procured the goods for the purpose of handing them over to deft., that would be a fraud upon pltf., & he would be entitled to the verdict, even though deft. was no party to the fraud:—Held: (1) that was a misdirection: (2) the question of deft.'s bona fides in the matter ought to have been left to the jury.—DANTEC v. ASHWORTH (1866), 14 L. T. 488; 30 J. P. 695.

2279. Statement as to existence of restrictive covenants—Fact not law.]—W. entered into negotiations with deft.'s agent for the purchase of a house for the purpose of carrying on a boys' school, & was induced to enter into a contract to purchase the house by his representing that there was no covenant which would interfere with W.'s carrying on his school there. W. subsequently discovered the house was subject to a covenant which on its true construction, though not in express terms, prohibited the carrying on of the school. He brought an action for rescission of the contract & return of the deposit made by him, with interest:—Held: (1) the agent's representation was as to a fact, & not a mere statement of law; (2) pltf. was entitled to succeed in his action.—WAUTON v. COPPARD, [1899] 1 Ch. 92; 79 L. T. 467; 47 W. R. 72; 43 Sol. Jo. 28.

2280. Misstatement as to identity of purchaser.]—If, in negotiations for a contract, an agent make a false representation as to the name of his principal, knowing that if he disclosed the true name the other party would not enter into the contract, the ct. will not order specific performance of the contract.

A. signed a contract for the sale of a house to B. Before signing he asked, "Are you buying for C. or his nominees?" B. answered "No." He was, in fact, buying for nominees of C., to whom he afterwards assigned his contract. He & they brought an action for specific performance:—Held: the contract could not be specifically performed.—ARCHER v. STONE (1898), 78 L. T. 34.

Annotation:—Distd. Nash v. Dix (1898), 78 L. T. 445.

2281. Representation by purchaser's agent that no commission payable.]—Defts. agreed with pltf., an estate agent, to pay him commission if he introduced a purchaser for certain property. P. communicated with pltf. for purchase of the property by A., but as A. would not pay the price named by defts., negotiations were broken off. Subsequently P. under the name of N. communicated direct with defts., & assuring them that he had not been introduced by any agent, so that no commission would be payable by defts., induced them to sell the property to A. at a price below pltf.'s limit. Pltf. thereupon claimed commission. Defts. claimed to be indemnified by A. who had been added as third party:—Held: (1) A. was responsible for the representation of his agent, P., that no commission would be payable; (2) he was liable to indemnify defts.—WARMAN v. NEWMANS, LTD. (1901), 17 T. L. R. 509.

Misstatement as to identity of purchaser.]—Pltfs., land agents, were instructed by a railway to purchase certain land, & M., their clerk, saw deft., the owner, who said he would take $1,500, which was the price M. when asked said he thought it was worth. Subsequently M. told deft. he had found a purchaser, A., & M. paid $25 deposit, & deft. acknowledged receipt for this from pltf. & signed a document containing the terms agreeing to pay pltf.'s commission:—Held: pltf. were not bound to inform deft. that the railway co. were buying his land, but they were liable for the misrepresentation of M., & specific performance must be refused.—TOWERS v. NICHOLLS (1911), 19 W. L. R. 646—CAN.

w. Misstatement as to identity of partner.]—A. was induced by the representations of C. to enter into partnership with B., believing him to be proprietor of certain works. D., for 2282 i. General rule—Principal liable.]—A principal is liable for the misfeasance or tort of his agent, when such misfeasance or tort has been done or committed with the subsequent assent, adoption, or ratification of the principal. When it is found that a principal was cognisant of & countenanced the act of his agent it may be inferred that he assented to it.—RAI KISHAN CHAND v. SHRO HARAM RAI (1875), 7 N. W. 121.—IND.

2282 ii. ———.]—Defts.' account at the bank being overdrawn, a resolution of the council was passed authorising the mayor to borrow from some banking institution a sum not exceeding $2,000 to meet current liabilities until the taxes were available, & authorising him & the town clerk to sign the necessary documents therefor, & to affix the corp'n. seal. A promissory note, in accordance with this resolution, was made, & was discounted at the bank of M., the proceeds being placed to defts.' credit. On a later date a similar note was made & discounted at pltf.'s bank, where defts. had kept an account which was now virtually closed, though there was a small balance still remaining to their credit. The last note was in fact fraudulently procured to be made & discounted by T., who was defts.' clerk & treasurer, but of his misdoings pltf. knew nothing. T., as treasurer, then chequed out of pltf.'s bank $1,656 of the amount, & this he deposited to defts.' credit at the bank of M., making payments out of it for authorised corp'n. purposes, every such wrong of the agent as is committed in the course of his employment & for the principal's benefit, though no express command or privity of the principal is proved. It is true, he has not authorised the particular act, but he has put the agent in his place to do that class of acts, & he must be answerable for the manner in which the agent has conducted himself in doing the business in which his principal placed him.—BARWICK v. 2287. Principal not liable when act outside scope of authority.—It is consistent with reason & natural justice that a man should be responsible for the skill, diligence & honesty of the agent whom he employs in the transaction of his business, & whom he holds out to the world as worthy of confidence. But the general rule does not apply to a case of particular malice where the acts done are outside scope of the agent's employment, as in the case of the master of a ship doing piratical acts. The principle upon which the cases have been decided appears to be this, fraud may be incidental to the employment of an agent, whereas force can never be (DR. LUSHINGTON).—THE DRUID (1842), 1 Wm. Rob. 391; 1 Notes of Cases, 444; 6 Jur. 441.

2288. — Or where wrongful act for agent's own benefit.—Where an agent commits a wrong within scope of his employment, & in the interests, or supposed interests, of the principal, & not for his own private & fraudulent purposes, the principal is liable. On the other hand, if the wrong is committed by an agent, not for his principal's purposes or interests, but to carry out the agent's own private ends, the principal is not liable.—MALCOLM, BRUNNER & CO., LTD. v. WATERHOUSE & SONS (1908), 24 T. L. R. 854.

B. Principal's Liability for Agent's Conversion, Misappropriation, or Failure to Deliver Goods and Funds of Third Parties.

2289. Baskets with salesman's trade mark sent to consignor of goods—Sent by consignor's agent to other salesmen.—The name of pltf., a Covent Garden salesman, was registered as an old mark, & was marked upon baskets belonging to him & used by growers of the vegetables consigned to him for sale on commission for the purpose of packing & forwarding their goods to him. Some of the baskets sent by him to one of such growers for such purposes were made use of to send vegetables to other salesmen, & the vegetables were exposed for sale in the baskets by the other salesmen. The business of the grower had been assigned to deft. as trustee for the grower's creditors, & at the time of the wrongful use of the baskets the grower was carrying on the business as agent for deft. —Held: pltf. was entitled to damages (inter alia) for conversion of the baskets against deft., notwithstanding that the wrongful acts had been committed contrary to his orders.—MUNRO v. HUNTER (1904), 21 R. P. C. 296

2290. Bill paid by one principal—Proceeds converted by agent drawing same on behalf of another principal.—S., employed by resp. to carry on his business, credited resp. in account with appls. with the sum of 5,800 taels, which he falsely represented to have been advanced in the ordinary course of business on certain goods intended for shipment. He then drew a bill in the name of resp.'s firm on appls. for the balance of account, & having received the proceeds of such bill, including the 5,800 taels, appropriated them to his own use. On a special case submitted whether resp. was liable to appls. in the sum with interest from the date of receipt by S.:—Held: (1) the proceeds of the bill having been received as above by S., acting throughout within scope of his authority, belonged to resp.; (2) he having thus been paid 5,800 taels without consideration, appls. were entitled to recover back same.—SWIRE v. FRANCIS (1877), 3 App. Cas. 106; 47 L. J. P. C. 18; 37 L. T. 554, P. C.

2291. Bonds deposited with agent for custody—Sold & proceeds converted—Similar bonds of another principal substituted.—Pltfs. & deft. lodged their respective Indian bonds with the same bankers, who afterwards privily & without deft.'s authority sold his bonds. Upon his demand of them they delivered up to him the Indian bonds of pltfs. to the same total amount, & payable to the same obligee (being always the treasurer of the co., who indorsed such bonds in blank before they were circulated), but having different numbers & for different separate sums, & manifestly distinguishable from his own bonds. Deft. did not know they were the property of another, but was told by the bankers that they had exchanged his original bonds for these:—Held: deft., having sold pltfs.' bonds so received from his own agents, who had acted malâ fide in passing them to him, was liable to assumpsit for money had & received to their use.—GLYN v. BAKER (1811), 13 East, 509; 104 E. R. 468.

2292. Deeds & conveyance obtained by managing clerk's fraud—Property sold & converted by him.]

—A widow who owned two cottages & a sum of money secured on a mtge., being dissatisfied with the income derived therefrom, consulted a firm of solrs., & saw the managing clerk, who conducted the conveyancing business of the firm without supervision. Acting as the representative of the firm, he induced her to give him instructions to sell the cottages & call in the mtge. money, & for that purpose to give him her deeds (for which he gave a receipt in the firm's name), & also to sign two documents, which were neither read over nor explained to her, & which she believed she had to sign in order to effect the sale of the cottages. These documents were, in fact, a conveyance to him of the cottages & a transfer to him of the mtge. He then dishonestly disposed of the property for his own benefit:—Held: the firm was responsible for the fraud committed by its representative in the course of his employment.—LLOYD v. GRACE, SMITH, No. 2284, ante.

2293. Funds advanced on mortgage—Misappropriated by secretary of mortgagor granting mortgage under forged power of attorney.]—Pltfs., trustees of a society, entered into negotiations with C., clerk of deft. board, for a loan to defts. on the security of the rates. Pltfs. advanced £500 & paid the money to C., who affixed the board's seal to a mtge. of the rates. C. had no authority to seal & issue the mtge., but when asked for his authority, he forged an authority from the chairman of the board to raise the money. C. embezzled the money, absconded & was eventually convicted:—Held: (1) the fraud of C., & not defts.' negligence, was the cause of the loss; (2) the act of C. not being done for his employers' benefit, defts. were not bound by it; (3) defts. had not held out C. as having authority to borrow, & the action must fail.—CRAFF v. EAST STONEHOUSE LOCAL BOARD (1889), 5 T. L. R. 501, C. A.

2294. Funds received by scrivener in repayment of loan—Not paid over to lender.]—Pltf. having an annuity & having occasion to borrow a sum of money, procured same of R., a scrivener, who was employed to let out money for defts.; the security given for it was out of this annuity, a proportion whereof was set apart to be yearly applied towards this debt, till the whole principal & interest were discharged. R. had received £2,900 for the use of defts. & gave his receipts & had accounted to defts. for above £1,700, but about £1,100 remained in his hands unaccounted for, & he died insolvent. R. was agent for defts., not only in this but in other affairs, & he transacted this matter on their behalf. On a bill by pltf. to redeem:—Held: the sum paid to R. should be allowed to pltf. on account.—CLEVELAND (DUCHESS) v. DASHWOOD (1701), Freem. Ch. 249; 22 E. R. 1189.

2295. Funds received by servant.]—Where money is paid to the servant & he misapplies it, the party has his remedy against the master or servant at election.—CARY v. WEBSTER (1721), 1 Stra. 480; 93 E. R. 647.

2296. Funds paid to clerk of bound bailiff—Not paid over by same.]—J., a bound bailiff of the sheriff, received from the attorney of an execution creditor a writ of fi. fa. to levy on the goods of pltf., the execution debtor. L., son & clerk of J., who managed the business of J. at his office, got the warrant from the sheriff directed to J. to execute the writ, & by authority of J. (in J.'s absence) himself seized pltf.'s goods, & put a man in possession. A day or two afterwards the attorney of pltf. paid the amount due to L. at the office of J., & L. received the sum by J.'s authority. The money not being paid over by L. or J., the sheriff treated the first levy as a nullity, & seized pltf.'s goods again. In an action by pltf. against the sheriff, evidence was given that it was the practice of sheriff's officers, either personally or by some representative at their office, to receive the amount due from deft. & to direct the man in possession to withdraw; that it was the usual course when the execution was paid out for the party whose goods were seized to pay the amount at the bailiff's office, who paid it over to the execution creditor:—Held: (1) the sheriff was responsible for the seizure made by L., under colour of the fi. fa.; (2) as far as pltf. was concerned, the payment to L. was a payment to the sheriff; (3) evidence of the practice was properly admitted.—GREGORY v. COTTERELL & SWIFT (1855), 5 E. & B. 571; 25 L. J. Q. B. 33; 26 L. T. O. S. 125; 2 Jur. N. S. 16; 4 W. R. 48; 119 E. R. 593, Ex. Ch.

Annotations:—Expld. Boulton v. Reynolds (1859), 29 L. J. Q. B. 11. In Gregory v. Cotterell a payment to the assistant of a bailiff was held good on the ground that, the sheriff having power to delegate his authority to his officer, an act good against the officer was good against the sheriff (BLACKBURN, J.). Distd. *Toms v. 2297. Funds obtained by fraud—Forged mortgage.]—Deft. employed S., his attorney, to obtain a loan of £100 for him on mtge., & placed his title-deeds in the hands of S. S. forged deft.'s signature to a mtge. deed to pltfs. for £420, received the money, & concealed the transaction from deft., to whom he afterwards advanced £198, in various sums, & took from him a mtge. to a third person to cover that advance:—Held: pltfs. had no cause of action against deft., even to the extent of £100.—PAINTER v. ABEL (ABEL) (1863), 2 H. & C. 113; 2 New Rep. 83; 33 L. J. Ex. 60; 8 L. T. 287; 9 Jur. N. S. 549; 11 W. R. 651; 150 E. R. 47.

2298. — With connivance of principal—Admissibility of evidence of similar frauds.]—In an action against a co. to recover a sum of money obtained by the co. from pltf. through a fraud of its agent committed with its knowledge & for its benefit, evidence of similar frauds committed on persons other than pltf. by the same agent, in the same manner, with the knowledge & for the benefit of the co., is admissible on behalf of pltf.—*BLAKE v. 2299. Funds received for investment—Misappropriation by clerk—Belief that clerk acting for principal.]—The manager of a local branch of a bank suggested to a lady, who had a deposit account at the local branch, that she would have better interest for her money if she paid off a mtge. due to a third person & a lien held by the bank on two houses, & also purchased the two

PART IX. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 1.—B.

2293 i. Funds advanced on mortgage—Misappropriated by agent of mortgagor.]—Pltf. applied to defts. for a loan through W., who styled himself as valuator for defts., & requested that the money should be paid to pltf. "by cheque addressed to W." Defts. remitted the money by a cheque payable to the order of W. & pltf. The cheque was indorsed by pltf. & W. absconded with the money. Pltf. swore that he did not know he was signing a cheque when he indorsed it. On appeal:—Held: from the evidence it was clear that W. was acting as agent of defts. & pltf. signed the cheque, supposing it to be a necessary step towards getting the money. W.'s duty was to indorse the cheque to pltf. or to see the money reached pltf.'s hand & W. fraudulently neglected that duty. Defts. who put it in W.'s power to commit the fraud must bear the loss.—FINN v. DOMINION SAVINGS & INVESTMENT SOCIETY (1880), 8 A. R. 20.—CAN.

x. Funds received from sale of shares—By secretary of building society acting in private capacity as share broker.]—Pltf.'s agent placed shares of pltf. in deft. society for sale with the secretary of the society, who was primarily a broker on his own account, & who having effected a sale misappropriated the proceeds:—Held: the secretary had been instructed not as secretary but as share broker, & the society was not responsible.—BLYTHE v. NAPIER STARR BOWKETT BUILDING SOCIETY (1907), 26 N. Z. L. R. 674.—N. Z.

2299 i. Funds received for investment—Agent for both parties.]—H., agent of P., managed her affairs generally; he also acted occasionally for L. in finding investments for her money, & on one occasion he represented to L. that P. required a loan of $20,000 for a certain purpose. This sum was handed H. by L., who received from him the receipt. H. paid over part of this sum for the purpose for which it was loaned, & applied the balance to his own use. On H. absconding L. brought an action against P. to recover the balance misappropriated:—Held: there was nothing on the face of the receipt to bind P., & she was not liable to L. for the amount in question.—*LOW v. houses. She agreed to carry out the suggestion, & for that purpose gave him her deposit note. He thereupon obtained the money, & misappropriated it:—Held: (1) the judge rightly asked the jury whether the manager intended & induced the lady to believe he was acting as agent for the bank in the receipt of the money; (2) the jury rightly answered in the affirmative; (3) the bank was liable to refund the amount.—THOMPSON (THOMSON) v. BELL (1854), 10 Exch. 10; 23 L. J. Ex. 321; 23 L. T. O. S. 178; 2 W. R. 559; 2 C. L. R. 1212; 156 E. R. 334.

2300. ———.—[Every member of a firm is personally responsible for the fraud of any person intrusted by the firm to represent & act for it in the business of the firm; & it is immaterial that the individual partner sought to be charged was free from blame or had ceased to be a member of the firm before the fraud was discovered.

Where a sum of money intrusted to a firm of solrs. was fraudulently misappropriated by the firm's confidential managing clerk:—Held: (1) Stat. Limitations did not begin to run until the discovery of the managing clerk's misconduct; (2) a former partner in the firm, having been partner at the time of the misappropriation, was personally liable.—HACKNEY v. KNIGHT (1891), 7 T. L. R. 254.

2301. ———.—[A co. undertook as part of its business to effect investments for intending investors. A clerk in its employment, whom the co. held out as having authority to negotiate investments & to receive the money, received a sum of money from an intending investor for the purchase of certain shares. The clerk appropriated the money to his own use, intending so to do from the beginning:—Held: the co. liable to refund the money.—TROTT v. NATIONAL DISCOUNT CO. (1900), 17 T. L. R. 37.

2302. ———.—[Where money was intrusted by a client for investment to the clerk of a firm of solrs.:—Held: the firm was not liable in respect of the fraudulent appropriation of the money by the clerk, as the client had failed to show (1) the clerk had actual authority to accept the client's money, or (2) there was a holding out of the clerk as having such authority, & the client reasonably believed the clerk to have authority & relied upon it.—TERHILL v. PARKER & THOMAS (1915), 32 T. L. R. 48.

2303. Funds received for telegrams—Embezzled by railway post-office clerk.—[A clerk employed in the telegraph office at a ry. station transmitted messages handed in by the public without using stamps, misappropriating the money paid by the public. By agreement with the Postmaster-General the ry. co. was to receive messages from the public for transmission by telegram & to transmit them at the Postmaster-General's sole risk & expense:—Held: (1) the loss arose out of breach of duty on the part of the clerk, in his character of agent for the Postmaster-General; (2) the co. was not liable.—NORTH EASTERN RY. CO. v. R. (1889), 6 T. L. R. 15, C. A.

2304. Funds remaining after payment of first mortgage—Misappropriated by common agent of first & second mortgagees.—[Resps. were first mtgees., & applt. was second mtgee., of the same property. In 1878 resps. sold under their power of sale. S., the mtgor.'s solr., acted for all parties, & the purchase-money was more than sufficient to pay off both mtges. After satisfying resps.' mtge. S. appropriated the balance of the purchase-money to his own use, & continued to pay interest to applt. as if his mtge. was still in existence, & concealed the fact of the sale from him. He gave resps. a receipt for the amount due to applt. as his agent. In 1892 applt. discovered the fraud, & brought an action against resps. for payment of what was due to him & for an account:—Held: (1) resps. were protected by Trustee Act, 1888 (c. 59), s. 8; (2) they were not "party or privy" to the fraud, & the proceeds were not "still retained" by them, so as to take the claim out of Stat. Limitations, since the money was not in their hands or under their control when the action was brought; (3) S. was not acting within scope of his authority as their agent in committing the fraud.—*THORNE v. 2305. Funds paid to one agent for disbursement on certificate of another agent—Failure of latter to give certificate.—[Pltf., under a contract with the French Govt., was entitled to receive payment out of a fund deposited by that Govt. with defts., bankers, on production of certificates issued by agents of the French Govt. These agents withheld the certificates, & in so doing were guilty of unfair dealing:—Held: pltf. entitled to payment without the certificates.—LARIVIERE v. MORGAN (1872), 26 L. T. 339; 20 W. Goods distrained after tender of rent to bailiff—Bailiff authorised to accept same.—[Where a bailiff, authorised to distrain for rent, is, by the terms of the warrant, authorised to receive the rent, if tendered, the bailiff cannot refuse a tender on the ground that he was forbidden by the landlord's attorney to receive it; & if he subsequently proceeds to sell the tenant's goods, he & his landlord are liable to trover.—*HATCH v. 2308. Goods deposited—As security for loan from principal—Failure of agent to deliver.—[In an action of trover against deflt., for not delivering some wine deposited with her by way of security for an advance of money:—Held: (1) it was not sufficient evidence of conversion to show that her son, who acted as her general agent, refused to give it up; (2) it was necessary to prove that such agent acted under a special direction, in order to make

2309. — With harbour board—Delivery on delivery warrant falsified by owner's agent.—A harbour board furnished owners of goods lying at their warehouses with delivery order forms, which were printed & had three columns, the first headed "Ship," the second "New numbers," & the third "Quantity in words at length." At the bottom of the sheet was a ruled line for signature. In Aug., 1898, N. presented a form to pltf's. for signature referring to one hoghead of tobacco out of 18 pledged by him with pltf's. In column 2 he placed the number 246, but the third was left blank for N. to fill up, as he told pltf's' manager he did not know whether it was a tierce or hoghead. After the signature had been placed on the form he drew a line after the number 246 & wrote in the figures 263, & in the third column put the words "eighteen hogheads." In an action against the harbour board for conversion of the 17 hogheads:—Held: (1) pltf's. could not recover, as N. was their agent to complete the form; (2) they were responsible for his fraudulent act.—UNION CREDIT BANK v. Goods intrusted—Company—Refusal of clerk to deliver except on conditions.—A clerk of a co. authorised to act in the matter of delivering up pltf.'s goods to him, refused to deliver them up, on being applied to by pltf. for them, without a written order for the delivery:—Held: (1) he had no right to attach such condition before delivering them up; (2) this was such refusal to deliver as would bind the co.—BARNETT v. 2311. Goods obtained by fraud for one principal—Deposited as security for loan to another principal.—In trover for wool which pltf's. alleged that defts. had obtained by fraud, it appeared it had been purchased of pltf's. by D. as agent for W. & Co. They pledged it two days afterwards to defts. for an advance made by them to W. & Co. through the intervention of D., who acted as the agent of defts. as well as of W. & Co. Pltf's., in order to show that W. & Co. had obtained the wool without intending to pay for it, they being insolvent to D.'s knowledge at the time of purchase, offered certain contracts in evidence, signed by D. The jury having found that the transaction between D. & W. & Co. was fraudulent, that defts. were not cognisant of the fraud, & that D. was their agent, as well as the agent of W. & Co.:—Held: (1) the contracts were admissible, without calling D. as a witness; (2) defts. were liable for the fraudulent acts & misconduct of their own agent.—IRVING v. MOTLY (1831), 7 Bing. 543; 5 Moo. & P. 380; 9 L. J. O. S. C. P. 161; 131 E. R. 210.

2312. Goods shipped—By clerk without authority—Wrong goods shipped by mistake.—Pltf's. & defts. were forwarding agents. Owing to a mistake of defts.' clerk on the quay, certain goods, which had been intrusted to pltf's. for shipment, were shipped amongst goods intrusted to defts. In an action for conversion:—Held: (1) it was not within the clerk's authority to take the goods of others; (2) defts. were not liable for their clerk's unauthorised act.—HURST v. DUNKERLEY (1850), 6 L. T. 754.

Pltf's. completed their work, & defts. delivered to pltf's. orders to the amount of the certificates of the engineer, etc., upon B. & Co., in whose hands debentures had been deposited, but B. & Co., being their agents, wrongfully refused for an unreasonable time to deliver the debentures or proceeds. In an action on contract defts. pleaded B. & Co. were agents of pltf's. as well as of themselves:—Held: a good defence, for neither party was liable to the other for their common agents' tortious acts.—WILLSON v. T. having left the country, R., defts.' agent at S., followed T. to the United States, & obtained a written authority to sell all the grain in the warehouse belonging to him. Pltf's. alleged that, acting under colour of this authority, he converted wheat belonging to them in the warehouse, for which they brought trover against defts.:—Held: if so, there was evidence to go to the jury to make defts. responsible for R.'s acts.—GILPIN v. 2312 i. Goods shipped—Delivery refused to indorsee of bill of lading.—H. & M. entered into an agreement under which M. was to supply H. with tinplates, money, etc., to carry on the business of packing lobsters, & H. was to forward to M. all goods which he should pack, in order that the supplies might be paid for out of the proceeds of the sales of the goods, M. being paid a commission for selling. This agreement was acted upon for six years, not only in relation to lobsters, but also in relation to beef. At the end of 1882, H. was indebted to M. from $7,000 to $9,000 on account between them. In Dec. of that year, H. shipped one hundred & eighty cases of beef, of the value of $1,000, consigned to the freight agent of the Intercolonial Ry. at Pictou, but addressed to M. He wrote M., forwarding a bill of lading, on which M.'s name was indorsed. M. transferred the bill of lading to pltf. as security for accommodation indorsements, & pltf. brought replevin against the stationmaster of the Intercolonial Ry. at Halifax, who, at the instance of H., refused to deliver the goods:—Held: the goods were sent to the agent at Pictou to be forwarded, & he had no other interest in 2314. — For freight per ton delivered—Delivery refused except for freight on shipping weight.]—Bark was shipped abroad under a bill of lading describing it to be of a certain weight, & making it deliverable to the consignees in London on payment of freight at a certain rate per ton of 20 cwt. "nett weight delivered." On arrival in London, the agent appointed by the managing owner demanded freight on the weight mentioned in the bill of lading, & refused to deliver the bark unless the consignees would pay according to that weight, or (under an alleged custom) incur the expense of weighing over the ship's side or at a legal quay. The consignees paid the money under protest, & brought an action against deft.—one of the joint-owners—to recover back the excess. The jury having negatived the alleged custom:—Held: deft. was liable, notwithstanding he had not interfered or in any way assented to the appointment of the agent by the managing owner & no part of the money had come to his hands.

Some time afterwards pltf. wanted to remove them, & on demand to do so the superintendent refused to permit him:—Held: (1) there was evidence from which the jury might infer that what the superintendent did was authorised by the co., & so find in favour of pltf. in an action of trover against the co., as it was the duty of a ry. co. to have some person at their stations authorised to act as the exigency of the traffic might require; (2) the jury might infer that the superintendent was the person so authorised; (3) it might be inferred that the allowing of the quicks to be planted was by no other mode of warehousing them by the co.—

The correspondence regarding the matter was carried on by F., deft.'s son-in-law, who acted on her behalf. N., having received an offer for all the lands from pltf., communicated it to F., who, acting under deft.'s instructions, telegraphed to N. to accept it. Deft. subsequently refused to complete the sale on the ground that she was misled by F. into believing that the offer was only for a few of the lots:—Held: the terms of the offer being clear, & F. having accepted it by the direction of deft., the latter was liable for the negligence of her agent & was responsible for the damage caused to pltf., an innocent person, by her refusal to carry out the contract, even though she was induced to enter into it by the negligence or misrepresentation of her agent.—

2325. Agent instructing prosecution—Institution & continuance distinguished.]—There is a material distinction, as to liability for malicious prosecution, between the institution of the prosecution & its continuance, after it has been already instituted, without authority, by an agent. The absence of reasonable & probable cause, which might be evidence of malice in the first case, will not be so in the second.—WESTON v. BEEMAN (1857), 27 L. J. Ex. 57; 22 J. P. 115.

2326. Bank manager arresting & prosecuting offenders—Authority as such.]—In an action for malicious prosecution against an incorporated banking co. the jury found that same had been authorised on behalf of the bank by W., the acting manager, & were directed by the judge that it was to be inferred from W.'s position as manager that he had sufficient power in the circumstances for directing a prosecution:—Held: (1) assuming the prosecution to have been authorised by W., the above direction to the jury was on the evidence incorrect; (2) there must be a new trial.

The arrest, & still less the prosecution, of offenders is not within the ordinary routine of banking business, & not within the ordinary scope of a bank manager's authority. Evidence is required to show that such arrest or prosecution is within scope of the duties & class of acts such manager is authorised to perform. That authority may be general, or it may be special & derived from the exigency of the particular occasion on which it is exercised. In the former case it is enough to show commonly that the agent was acting in what he did on behalf of the principal; but in the latter case evidence must be given of a state of facts which shows that such exigency is present, or from which it might reasonably be supposed to be present (per CUR.).—BANK OF NEW SOUTH WALES v. OWSTON (OWSTON) (1879), 4 App. Cas. 270; 48 L. J. P. C. 25; 40 L. T. 500; 43 J. P. 476; 14 Cox, C. C. 267, P. C.

2327. General manager of company arresting employee—Authority as such.]—Pltf., a workman employed in defts.' factory, was discharged with others in consequence of slackness of work. He carried away with his own tools one belonging to defts., which, when he found inquiry was made for it, he returned to the foreman of the factory. When he afterwards called about it at the factory, a detective was present, who asked the foreman if he gave pltf. in charge for stealing the tool, to which the foreman replied he must see defts.' managing director first. Pltf. & the detective went together to the police station, & the foreman afterwards appeared, charged pltf., & signed the charge sheet. The next morning, pltf. having been locked up all night, defts.' managing director gave evidence against pltf., but the charge was dismissed. Upon that the managing director made a remark impugning the magistrate's decision, for a corpn. sent to a collecting justice the name of pltf. as having made default in payment of a rate which had been illegally imposed on him, & instructed the justice to enforce payment. q. Manager of business—Authority as such.]—In an action against a limited co. for damages for malicious arrest & prosecution without reasonable & probable cause, through depositions made by the manager & a clerk carrying on a small branch business of the co., defts., at the close of pltf.'s case, applied for absolution from the instance on the ground, inter alia, that there was no proof that the alleged proceedings had been at the instance of the co. or that the employees in question had authority to take such proceedings:—Held: (1) as there was nothing in pltf.'s evidence to show any emergency, or any general authority in the employees to institute criminal proceedings, pltf. had failed to prove an essential part of his declaration, viz., that the arrest & prosecution were acts of deft. on or of their agents authorised thereto or acting in the course of their employment; (2) in the circumstances disclosed, the declarations of the agent could not be accepted as even prima facie evidence of the fact of agency so as to bind his principals.—KING v. LANE & Co., LTD., 33 N. L. R. 325.—S. AF.

which he was called to order. Pltf. brought an action in a county ct. for false imprisonment; at the end of pltf.'s case the judge refused to nonsuit, & the jury found a verdict of £50 for pltf.:—Held: in the circumstances, the managing director had no power to render defts. liable in the action.—ROWE v. LONDON PIANOFORTE CO., LTD. (1876), 34 L. T. 450; 13 Cox, C. C. 211.

2328. Official of society for protection of animals giving offender into custody—Authority as such under Cruelty to Animals Act, 1849 (c. 92).]—Pltf. was given into the custody of a constable by an inspector of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, & brought an action for false imprisonment against the society & the inspector, who did not appear. In the rules of deft. society its inspectors were described as "constables," & there were directions for giving offenders into the custody of policemen, where within reach, under the supposed provisions of the above Act, which, however, only entitled the public to complain & the police to take into custody:—Held: the inspector was acting within scope of his authority as defined by the rules, & the society was liable.—LINE v. ROYAL SOCIETY FOR THE PREVENTION OF CRUELTY TO ANIMALS & MARSH (1902), 18 T. L. R. 634.

In an action against the proprietors of the restaurant for false imprisonment, the jury found the manager gave pltf. into custody to make him pay the bill:—Held: the proprietors were not liable for the act of the manager.—*STEDMAN v. 2331. Farm manager while scouring stream—Authority as such.]—A farm manager, however extensive his powers may be, has no implied authority to trespass upon a neighbouring farm for the benefit of his employer.

Defts. owned a "sewage farm," & intrusted the entire management thereof to A. Between the sewage farm & certain land occupied by a tenant of pltf. there flowed a stream, for the purpose of scouring which A. trespassed upon the bank occupied by pltf.'s tenant & cut down brushwood growing thereon. The time occupied by the scouring of the brook was eleven days, during which period none of defts. was or could be aware of the trespass; A.'s disbursements for wages on account of the scouring were repaid by defts. in the same manner as his ordinary disbursements. The motive of A. in scouring the brook thus was to improve the property of defts. & the neighbourhood generally:—Held: there was no evidence that the trespass of A. was within scope of his authority.—BOLINGBROKE (VISCOUNT) v. SWINDON NEW TOWN LOCAL BOARD (1874), L. R. 9 C. P. 575; 43 L. J. C. P. 287; 30 L. T. 723; 23 W. R. 47.

VAUGHTON* (1838), 8 C. & P. 252.

2333. Soldiers preventing egress from house—Authority to search for refugee.]—Def't., Lieutenant-Governor of Gibraltar, wishing to obtain possession of T., a Spanish refugee, whom he thought to be harboured in pltf.'s house, adjoining the house of an English merchant residing at Gibraltar, placed a party of soldiers under the command of his military secretary, who ordered them to surround pltf.'s house; & in the course of their duty one of the soldiers prevented pltf.'s egress. In an action for assault & false imprisonment:—Held: (1) there was sufficient evidence to go to the jury that the various proceedings were under the direction & carried on by the authority of def't.; (2) the soldiers being directed to search for T., whose person they did not know, the military secretary in command of them was only carrying out his orders in directing them to prevent all persons from leaving the house; (3) def't. was liable for this particular act.—GLYNN v. HOUSTON (1841), 2 Man. & G. 337; 4 State Tr. N. S. 1368; 2 Scott, N. R. 518; 5 Jur. 195; 133 E. R. 775.

r. Diamond diggers selling trees—Authority from company to search for diamonds.]—On the invitation of a mining co. many diggers settled on the property, which had been conceded to the co. by B. M. Society, & took out claims, for which they paid the co. 5s. per month each. The diggers were not registered claim-holders & could not themselves legally sell, but brought all diamonds found by them to the offices of the co. which sold the diamonds & paid the diggers a percentage of the proceeds:—Held: the co. worked the estate by means of the diggers as its agents or servants, & was responsible for the acts of such agents in the course of their employment, such as the felling of trees.—*PIEL D. s. Mortgagee's agent taking possession.]—A. mtged. a sheep run to B. The deed stipulated that if the mtgor. should make default in payment of the amount on demand, the mtgee. should be at liberty to enter. It was the intention of the parties that the mtgor. should remain in possession until default was made, but there was no express stipulation to that effect. During the absence of A., B. sent an agent to the station with a demand in writing for repayment, which was served on A.'s wife, & in default of payment B.'s agent immediately took possession of the run & the sheep on it:—Held: there was no default which justified B. in entering into possession & seizing the property, & A. was entitled to substantial damages.—*MOORE v. the gallery near to the place where pltf. was standing, upon which deft. said, "I shall be obliged to bring those men to the front who are making the disturbance. Bring those men to the front." Pltf. was making no disturbance, but, according to his statement, he was seized by a man with a white ribbon in his coat & two policemen, & dragged over some benches to the front part of the gallery, & thereby injured. There was nothing to show the position or duty of those who seized him, or whether any instruction as to keeping order had been given them by deft. before the act complained of:—Held: there was no evidence to go to the jury of any liability on the part of deft., as there was not the ordinary relation of master & servant between him & those who assaulted pltf., but only a particular direction as to a particular matter, & the words used by deft. did not authorise the officers to act upon their judgment as to who were the persons making the disturbance.—LUCAS v. MASON (1875), L. R. 10 Exch. 251; 44 L. J. Ex. 145; 33 L. T. 13; 39 J. P. 663; 23 W. R. 924.

2336. Assault by manager of furniture business—Authority to remove furniture let under hire & purchase agreement.]—Deft., proprietor of a furniture business, appointed an agent to be manager of a local branch of his business. The agent, whilst engaged in removing from pltf.'s house some furniture which he had let under a hire & purchase agreement to a person who had been a lodger there, committed an assault on pltf., who was trying to resist the removal. For this assault the agent was convicted & fined. Pltf. then brought an action against deft. to recover damages for the assault:—Held: (1) the jury were justified in finding that the agent was acting within scope of his authority; (2) the conviction of the agent did not, by virtue of Offences against the Person Act, 1861 (c. 100), s. 45, operate so as to release deft. from liability to pay damages.—DYER v. HOUSTON (JOHN) & CO., [1903] 1 K. B. 81; 72 L. J. K. B. 72; 87 L. T. 500; 51 W. R. 99; 19 T. L. R. 66; 47 Sol. Jo. 90, C. A.

Copyright—Infringement of—By singer employed by music-hall proprietor.]—Deft., proprietor of a music-hall, had engaged a singer, who on numerous occasions sang a song, of the copyright of which pltf. was assignee. Deft. at the trial denied that he had directed the song to be sung; he was in the hall when it was being sung, but had never heard the whole of it. The jury found a verdict for pltf., & awarded a penalty of £2 for each occasion on which the song was sung:—Held: (1) inasmuch as the singer was hired by deft. to sing what songs he liked, & no supervision or control was exercised as to copyright, there was evidence of agency & authority to sing the song complained of; (2) there was no ground for disturbing the verdict.—*MONAGHAN v. SECT. 5.—ADMISSIONS BY AGENT.

SUB-SECT. 1.—ADMISSIONS MADE BY AGENT TO PARTIES OTHER THAN PRINCIPAL.

A. In General.

2341. In course of employment.]—What is said by an agent respecting a contract or other matter in the course of his employment, which contract or matter is the foundation of the action, is good evidence to affect the principal; otherwise what is said by him on another occasion.—PETO v. HAGUE (1804), 5 Esp. 134.

2342. —.]—The declarations of an agent are only evidence against his principal where they form part of the contract which he is employed to negotiate on the behalf of the principal.

Where B., through the medium of his agent, chartered a ship to A. & engaged by the charter-party that she was seaworthy, a letter written by the agent to a third person, previous to the charter-party being effected, tendering the ship for hire, was not admissible in evidence, since it did not form a part of the contract on which the action was founded; the agent himself must be called.—BETHAM v. BENSON (1818), Gow, 45.

2343. —.]—An agent can only act within scope of his authority as such; & declarations made by him, as to a particular fact, are not admissible in evidence unless they relate to an act done by him in the course of his particular employment as such agent.—SCHUMACK v. LOCK (1821), 10 Moore, C. P. 39; 3 L. J. O. S. C. P. 57.

2344. —.]—In an action against a sheriff, admissions by the under-sheriff are not evidence unless they accompany some official act of the latter or tend to charge himself.

In an action against the sheriff for taking illegal poundage, declarations of the under-sheriff, after he was out of office, were not admissible to prove that the bailiff charged with the extortion was the sheriff's authorised agent.

PART IX. SECT. 5, SUB-SECT. 1.—A.

2341 i. In course of employment.]—An admission not on oath by an agent is only admissible when it is part of the res gesta or is made in the course of making a contract for his principal.—*Patlie v. 2341 iii. —.]—A principal is not bound by the statements of his agent after the happening of the act sued on unless the agent had authority to make such statements.—BROWN v. LEE (1887), 4 Man. L. R. 177.—CAN.

2341 iv. —.]—The admission or declaration of an agent binds his principal only when it is made during the continuance of the agency in regard to a transaction then depending. The evidence of a person who has ceased to be agent is inadmissible to serve as a commencement of proof against his principal, to contradict the terms of a contract of loan made during the existence of the agency.—KNOX v. BOIVIN (1893), Q. R. 4 S. C. 511.—CAN.

2341 v. —.]—Admissions by an agent of the vendee, made months after the transaction had taken place to a person who had nothing whatever to do with it, are no part of the res gesta & are not admissible to establish a contract of sale of goods & their delivery.—LE BLANC, LAPOINTE, MARTIN & Co. (1911), 1 E. L. R. 261; 40 N. B. R. 468.—CAN.

2346 i. Within scope of authority.]—Declarations of members of a committee appointed by a corp. to superintend the construction of a sewer, made while the work was in progress, & relative thereto, are evidence—being declarations of an agent relative to a matter within his authority.—RILEY v. ST. JOHN CORPN. (1865), 6 All. 264.—CAN.

2346 ii. —.]—Declarations made by an agent beyond apparent scope of his authority cannot bind the principal.—THAYER v. STREET (1863), 22 U. C. R. 352.—CAN.

2345. — Casual conversation.]—The rule that an admission made by an agent in the course of the execution of his agency is binding on the principal does not apply to a mere casual conversation.

Where a statement was made by pltf.'s attorney to deft.'s attorney in a conversation outside the ct. two days before the trial:—Held: the statement was not receivable in evidence against pltf.—PETCH v. LYON (1846), 9 Q. B. 147; 1 New Pract. Cas. 603; 15 L. J. Q. B. 393; 11 Jur. 37; 115 E. R. 1231.

See, further, SOLICITORS.

2346. Within scope of authority—Statements forming foundation of contract.]—Though an agent may within scope of his authority bind his principal by his agreement, & in many cases by his acts, evidence of his declarations is confined to what is, either by the statement itself, or as tending to determine the quality of contemporary acts, the foundation of, or inducement to, the agreement.—*FAIRLIE v. 2347. — Contract in writing.]—Where the question is whether deft. was induced to sign the contract sued on by the fraud of pltf.'s agent, evidence of the representations made by the agent to induce deft. to enter into the contract is admissible, notwithstanding the contract was in writing.—*HOTSON v. Plffs. having pointed out the omission, a clerk of W., A. & Co., by the direction of A., wrote to plffs. stating that the guarantee was intended for them. The clerk, also without knowledge of the other partners, wrote to plffs. certain letters amounting to evidence of an account stated in respect of the amount due on the guarantee. The ct. having held that the guarantee did not bind the firm:—Held: as the firm was not bound by the guarantee, the letters of the clerk respecting it were not evidence of an account stated as against the other partners.—*BRETTEL v. Agent of seller—Statements made when delivery due.]—Defts. by their agent contracted to deliver oil to plff.'s customers on receipt of orders from plff.; on complaint by plff. of irregularity in delivery the agent stated they had no oil to give him.—Held: this statement by defts.' agent of their inability to perform was a breach of contract upon which plff. might sue.—*LEWSON v. B. wrote a letter to his agent, stating he would agree to the prices, if A. would consent to be paid at stated periods, the first payment to be "in Nov." The agent showed this letter to A., & said to him he might consider the £100 to be payable on "Nov. 1." A. afterwards did the work for B. S. was the manager appointed by the liquidator to manage the business as a going concern, but he had nothing to do with the negotiation of the sale of the business, although he had furnished H., at his request, with a statement of its assets:—Held: S. had no authority to give information, & H.'s claim for repayment of any of the purchase-money failed.—Re HAMILTON MANUFACTURING CO., LTD., HALL'S CASE (1912), 23 O. 2359. Clerk—Conversation & threats of overseer.—An agent cannot bind his principal by any act or declaration which is out of scope of his authority.

In an action in a ct. ct. by a collier against his employer (one of the directors of a co.) to recover wages upon the ground that they had been paid in goods in violation of Truck Act, 1831 (c. 37), it appeared that the co. kept a shop for the sale of goods, adjoining their office, where the wages were paid; that the workmen (including pltf.) were paid their wages monthly, but were often paid advances in cash at the office during the currency of the month, & that pltf. had received & expended such at the shop in goods subsequently to Jan., 1851, & that was the amount now sought to be recovered. There was a coal clerk, whose duty it was to ascertain the amount of each man's earnings. It was proposed on the part of pltf. to give evidence of a conversation between H. (the overman under whom pltf. worked) & pltf. in order to show that some constraint was used to induce him to deal at the shop. The judge at first rejected the evidence, but it afterwards appeared that at the time of the conversation a paper was produced by H. containing a list of names of men working in his level, including that of pltf., & H., on being examined respecting it, said, "I had the list from the office from W. H. [the coal clerk]. He is a clerk under B. [the coal agent] in the office. I had the paper from W. H. to remember the names that did not deal at the shop." The judge thereupon held that what was said by H. when he produced the list to pltf. was admissible against deft. On appeal:—Held: (1) the evidence was not admissible, as H. had no authority to bind deft. by any act or declaration relating to the disposal of the men's wages.—OLDING v. SMITH (1852), Cox, M. & H. 620; 19 L. T. O. S. 140; 16 J. P. 600; 16 Jur. 497.

2360. Master of ship—Declaration based on hearsay.—Declarations of the master of a vessel are admissible evidence against the owners because he is their agent. The declaration of the master cannot be rejected on the ground that his knowledge of the fact of which he spoke was derived from hearsay, though it may have but little weight.—THE ACTÆON (1853), 1 Ecc. & Ad. 176; 3 L. T. 123.

2361. — Evidence before receiver of wrecks.—In an action for a collision the examination of the master of pltf.'s ship, taken by the receiver of wrecks under M. S. Act, 1854 (c. 104), s. 448, is not admissible for deft. under s. 449, for the purpose of proving that the damage to pltf.'s ship from the collision was on her starboard bow, such fact being offered for the purpose of showing that pltf.'s ship was in fault, since the question which ship caused the damage to the other is not a matter which the receiver has power under s. 448 to inquire into.—*NOTHARD (NORTHARD) v. Mate or members of crew—Declaration.—The principle of declarations by agents does not extend to the mate of a ship, even when he is in charge of it, or to the crew, so as to make declarations by the mate or members of the crew admissible against the owners of the ship.—THE ACTÆON, No. 2360, ante.

2363. Officers of company—Secretary—Letters promising payment.—In an action upon an agreement to do work for a ry. co. to the satisfaction of a sub-committee & of the general board of directors, letters written by the secretary promising payment:—Held: admissible evidence to prove the work had been so done.—BUSH v. WEISS (1846), 8 L. T. O. S. 137.

2364. Pawnbroker's shopman—Statement relating to transactions within employer's business.—Statements made by the shopman of a pawnbroker who is left in the shop to answer in his master's absence, can only be received in evidence in an action against the master when they relate to transactions which are strictly within the business of a pawnbroker, & are not receivable if they relate to an advance of money not within the terms of Pawnbrokers Act, 1800 (c. 90).—*GARTH v. 2365. Railway officials—Night Inspector—Admissions as to loss of goods.—In an action against a ry. co. for not conveying cattle to market within a reasonable time, a ct. judge allowed evidence to be given of a conversation, which took place a week after the alleged cause of action arose, between pltf. & a "night inspector" at one of the co.'s stations, whose duty it was to forward the cattle, in which conversation the latter, in answer to a question as to why he did not send the cattle on, stated "he had forgotten them":—Held: such evidence was improperly admitted, it not being within scope of the man's authority to make admissions as to bygone transactions.—*GREAT WESTERN Ry. 2366. — Stationmaster—Statement to police as to loss of goods.—In an action against a ry. co. for the loss of a parcel containing money, defts. pleaded Carriers Act, 1830 (c. 68), & plffs. replied that the parcel was lost by the felonious act of one of the co.'s servants. It was proved the parcel was sent on July 27, by defts.' ry., addressed to a clerk of plffs. at U., where there was a station on defts.' ry., that the parcel was not delivered, & that on the same day H., a porter in defts.' service at U. station, disappeared. A superintendent of police at U. gave, after objection by defts., the following evidence: "I know P., the stationmaster at defts.' ry. station at U. In consequence of a communication I went to him on July 30. He told me that H., a parcel porter, had absconded from the service; that a money parcel was missing, & he, P., suspected H. had taken it; would I [the witness] make inquiries after him?" A verdict having passed for plffs.:—Held: the evidence was rightly admitted; for it must be taken that the stationmaster, being the person in charge there, had authority from defts. to set the police in motion, & what he said pertinent to the occasion, when acting within scope of his authority, was evidence against Solicitor's clerk—Admissions made when having costs taxed.]—Where an attorney's clerk admitted, on the taxation of costs before the master, that the suit in which the costs were taxed was conducted by his employer from motives of charity on behalf of pltf.:—Held: the clerk was such an agent as to bind his master by such admission.

A direct & positive agency exists on the part of an attorney's clerk attending to tax costs of an action conducted by his employer. In this case the clerk was clothed with a full & immediate agency by & for the attorney; he appeared & acted as his representative, by his instructions, for his benefit & convenience. To the first entry there was a date, & underneath that date, before the second entry, there were two inverted commas. Both entries were in the handwriting of a person who had formerly been pltf.'s traveller, & the book was such as pltf.'s travellers usually kept:—Held: the entry was admissible to prove the payment without calling the traveller or giving independent evidence that it was made by the traveller during the time he was in pltf.'s service.

I admitted the book, because, upon the face of it, the entry appeared to me to be made by pltf.'s agent during his agency (ERLE, J.).—BASS v. WELLS (1849), 13 L. T. O. S. 70.

SUB-SECT. 2.—ADMISSIBILITY IN EVIDENCE OF STATEMENTS BY AND LETTERS, ETC., FROM AGENT TO PRINCIPAL.

A. Statements.

2380. Officer of company—Chairman—Statement made at statutory meeting.]—A statement made by an agent to his principal cannot be used against the principal by a third party, nor where the agent is common agent of a body of persons, such as chairman of a co., can a statement by him to the members of the body, e.g., at a statutory meeting, be used against the body by one of its own members, e.g., a shareholder.

At the hearing of the application he sought to use, in support of his contention as to the falsity of the prospectus, a statement made by the chairman of the co. 2384. — Letters detailing conversations with third party.]—Letters written by a deceased agent to his principal subsequently to the date of an agreement alleged to have been made by him on behalf of the principal, detailing conversations with the other party, are not admissible on behalf of the principal to prove that no such agreement was entered into, or that the agent was not authorised to make it, & that the principal never knew of nor ratified it. Although the alleged agreement was verbal only, & the agent, & after the writing of the letters, signed a written agreement confirming the verbal one, the letters are inadmissible to prove that the agent was not authorised to sign the written agreement. It makes no difference that the agent is dead, unless the letters were written at the time of the conversations detailed & it was the agent's duty to communicate them to his principal at that time.—*TURNER v. Agent to present bill—Letters acknowledging receipt of payment.]—Defts. sent bills of exchange to their agents abroad, who presented them to the drawees, & wrote defts. that they had received the amount. Defts. afterwards acknowledged the receipt of the letter, & directed the agents to remit the amount to them:—Held: as the letter written by the agents, while acting within scope of their authority as such, was recognised, & its terms adopted by defts., it was admissible in evidence to charge the latter with the receipt of the money.—COATES v. BAINBRIDGE (1828), 5 Bing. 58; 2 Moo. & P. 142; 6 L. J. O. S. C. P. 220; 130 E. R. 981.

Subsequently resp. agreed to reduce the amount of royalty he was to receive; but to what extent applt. & resp. did not agree. Applt. kept no regular books, but his son-in-law & agent at all events for some purposes, kept full accounts, & applt. was in the habit of referring those who dealt with him to this agent, & he had even paid resp. on the statements of this agent:—Held: applt. was bound by the statement of account of such agent, the amount so fixed being less than resp. would be entitled to under the original agreement.—*JEFFERY v. 2389. Master of ship—Letters as to facts of voyages.]—In an action against a shipowner to recover damages for non-delivery of a cargo laden on board deft.'s ship, letters written by the master of the ship to deft., as to facts occurring on the voyage on which the cargo was carried, are admissible as evidence against deft. The opinion of the master stated in such letters is not evidence.—THE SOLWAY (1885), 10 P. D. 137; 54 L. J. P. 83; 53 L. T. 680; 34 W. R. 232; 5 Asp. M. L. C. 482.

SUB-SECT. 3.—ADMISSIBILITY OF AGENT'S EVIDENCE IN REGARD TO INSTRUCTIONS FROM PRINCIPAL.

2390. Question which agent may be asked.]—When the directions which have been given by deft. to his agent cannot be read on the ground of public policy, the agent may be asked whether he did not act under the direction of deft.—COOKE v. MAXWELL (1817), 2 Stark. 183.

2391. —.]—An indictment for perjury charged that in a suit in Ch. it became material to ascertain whether an annuity granted by H. to deft., or by H. to B., as trustee for deft., had been paid up to the year 1828, & deft. falsely swore that it had not been paid, whereas in truth the annuity had been paid by H. to B., & B. had paid it to deft. With a view to showing that B., who had been abroad since 1832, had paid the money to deft., it was proved B. had sent money to his bankers by his clerk, & it was proposed to ask the clerk the following question: "At the time you received this money from B. to pay in at the bankers, what did he say about the money?"—Held: (1) the question might be put; (2) the answer was receivable in evidence against deft.—*R. v. 2392. When insolvent purchaser instructs agent to unship but not to accept goods—Preservation of vendor's right of stoppage in transitu.]—Goods were consigned to A. deliverable in the river Thames; on the arrival of the vessel in the river the master pressed A. to have them landed immediately; A. in consequence sent B., his son, with directions to land them at a wharf where he was accustomed to have goods landed for him & kept until he carted them away to his customers in his own carts, but A. (being then insolvent) at the same time told B. he would not meddle with the goods, he did not intend to take them, & the vendor ought to have them. The goods were, by B.'s direction, landed at the wharf, & there stopped in transitu by vendor. In trover for the goods by the assignees in bkpcy. of A. against the wharfinger:—Held: (1) the declarations so made by A. to B. were admissible in evidence, although they were not communicated to vendor or to the wharfinger; (2) they showed A. had not taken possession of the goods as owner; (3) the transitu was not determined.—*JAMES v. Pltfs. deposited this lease with the bank, informing the manager of this clause. On C., to whom

SUB-SECT. 1.—NOTICE TO AGENT IMPUTED TO PRINCIPAL.

A. In General.

2393. Actual notice & constructive notice—Definitions & distinctions.]—Notice is of two sorts: actual notice, which must be proved as any other fact; & notice by construction of law, as, where notice to an agent is notice to the principal; if the agent comes to the knowledge of the fact, while he is concerned for the principal, & in the course of the very transaction, which becomes the subject of the suit (LORD ERSKINE, C.).—*HIERN v. B. When Agent's Knowledge imputable to Principal.

2395. In general.]—In order to affect a principal with constructive notice of facts within the knowledge of an agent, it is necessary not only that the knowledge should be derived from the same transaction, but it must be knowledge of facts which are material to that transaction & which it was the duty of the agent to communicate.

W. was transferee of a mtge., the draft having been perused & approved by L., his solr. L. employed C., another solr., to procure mtgors.'

The agent stands in place of the principal; & notice therefore to the agent is notice to the prin-

2399 i. —[—]—In same transaction.—Notice to an agent so as to affect his principal must be given in one & the same transaction; all the knowledge which the agent acquires in same transaction is properly notice to the principal, as it is the duty of the agent to communicate that knowledge; but if the knowledge be acquired by the agent in another transaction, such is not his duty, but, on the contrary, it is his duty not to disclose it.—SMITH v. SMITH (1834), 2 Ir. L. Rec. N. S. 157.—IR.

2399 ii. —[—]—*Pltf. sued for rescission of an agreement for sale of land on the ground of misrepresentation. 2399 iii. —[—]—Transactions closely connected.—Though the general rule is that notice to an agent, to affect the principal, must be in the same transaction, yet if, from the one transaction being so recent, or so closely connected with the other, that the party must be presumed to have remembered the previous one, the notice, though not in same transaction, will bind.—*MARJORIE BANKS v. Defts. had the manuscript set up in type, & several proofs were struck, but they refused to perform the contract upon the ground that the manuscript contained libellous matter. Pltf. claimed the return of the £50, & defts. counterclaimed for the cost of the printing already done:—Held: (1) the contract, being one to print & publish libellous matter, was illegal; (2) as it had been partly performed, pltf. was not entitled to recover back the money paid under it; (3) as the knowledge of defts.' agent must be taken to be the knowledge of defts., defts. were not entitled to recover on the counterclaim.—*APTHORP v. 2411 i. — Where reasonable certainty agent will not communicate.]—A bank sued on three promissory notes for $1,000, $4,000 & $1,000 given by M. as collateral security of the debt of S., an indorser of one of the notes & a joint maker with S. of the other two. It was known to the bank's agent that M. agreed to sign only on condition that S. also signed, & the agent took subject to this condition:—Held: the bank was bound by the condition & M. was not liable, S. not having signed. Fynn v. Campbell, 6 F. & B. 1, 370, cited. The fact that M. could not have recovered if he had sued in his own name, & thus he was interested in not communicating the condition to his principal, was not enough to exclude the doctrine of constructive notice. 2412. ———. — The knowledge of the agent is not to be imputed to the principal where, from the circumstances of the case, it is clear that the agent intended a fraud which would require the suppression of the knowledge in question from the principal, since the act done by the agent cannot be said to be done by him in his character as agent, but is done by him in the character of a party to an independent fraud on the principal.—ROLLAND v. 2415. ———. — Where third party & agent conspire to conceal notice.—Deft. made a statement to pltf.'s agent, which was untrue to the knowledge of deft. & of the agent, in order to induce pltf., whom deft. did not believe to know the untruth, to act upon it. The agent communicated deft.'s statement to pltf., who, relying on the truth of the statement, acted on it to her damage. In an action by pltf. against deft. to recover damages for false & fraudulent misrepresentation:—Held: (1) the knowledge of pltf.'s agent of the untruth of deft.'s statement could not be imputed to pltf.; (2) pltf. was entitled to recover damages from deft.—WELLS v. C. Whether Knowledge of Principal presumed.

2416. From agent's knowledge—Of breach of trust.—Where a local agent of a banking co. in that character advances money of the co. by way of loan, & the borrower, to the agent's knowledge, is obtaining the money for the sole purpose of misapplying it, the co. acquires no better title than the agent would have had, had the case been his own, or than the borrower.

An exor. borrowed money from a banking co., of which he was local agent, for the purpose of making a further advance to a mtgor. of a ship, on security of which the testatrix had lent the money, on the pretence that such further advance was made to pay off a prior charge, but really to assist the mtgor., & the security proved ultimately wholly insufficient:—Held: (1) the co. had no claim upon the testatrix's assets; (2) a mtge. of the ship made by the exor. to the co. to secure the advance was invalid.—COLLISON v. 2416 i. From agent's knowledge—Of breach of trust.—Notice to an agent in a transaction is notice to the principal, otherwise it would be in the power of any one, by employing an agent, to practise with impunity the grossest frauds. An agent receiving notes from an exor. payable to him as exor., as security for advances by the principal to him on his own account, & not as exor., affects his principal with notice that it is a dealing with the exor. of the assets for a purpose foreign to the trusts he was to discharge: the principal is thereby a party to the deceit & liable to its consequences, & he cannot retain the notes against those claiming under the will.—DOWNS v. POWER (1914), 2 Ball & B. 491.—IR.

2416 ii. ———. — An extrix. held certain lands in trust for pltf's. with power to sell but not to mtge. same. Wishing to borrow money on the land, a pretended sale was made to M., who then raised £2,000 for the extrix. by mtgng. the land to defts., & immediately re-conveyed the land to the extrix. for a nominal consideration. This scheme was carried out mainly by pltf's. father, who swore at the trial that defts. agent was aware of the plan adopted. If he did not himself suggest it.—Held: defts. were affected through their agent with notice of the fraud & breach of trust committed

& the mtge., together with two subsequent mtges. taken from the extrix. on same lands, should be declared to be fraudulent & void as against pltf's.—GRAHAM v. BRITISH CANADIAN LOAN & INVESTMENT CO (1898), 12 Man. L. R. 244.—CAN.

h. ———. — Of state of disrepair.—A child was killed by falling through the railing of a common stair, where one of the banisters was wanting.—Held: the proprietor of the property was liable in damages to the father of the child, in respect that warning of the state of the stair had been given to the factor appointed to look after the property.—M'CAUSTIN v. The tenant entered into possession, & after the death of the tenant for life, having sent a copy of the contract to the land agent of the remainderman, expended a large sum on the lands, of which expenditure the remainderman knew:—Held: notice of the contract to the land agent did not affect the remainderman, so as to give the tenant an equity against him, by reason of his acquiescence in the expenditure.—O'FAY v. G. thus ascertained that the shares were not fully paid up in cash, but M. believed they were & subsequently sent P., another clerk, to get the transfers effected:—Held: M. was affected by the knowledge of G. that the shares were not fully paid up, & his exors. were rightly placed on the list of contributories in winding up.—Re HALIFAX SUGAR REFINING CO. (1891), 7 T. 2425 i. From notice given to solicitor—In respect of registration of instrument.]—In cases of registry direct notice is requisite. So, as between a registered & an unregistered instrument, the party who has the legal priority by casual circumstances, which in other cases

2428. 2429.—If an agent be held out as having only a limited authority to do on behalf of his principal acts of a particular class, then the prin-

p. Bank manager transferring shares as "manager in trust."—Resp. transferred shares as security to brokers who raised loans on them by transfer to a bank, whose manager transferred them to applicants. s. Express notice to transferee of condition against registration.—Plff. executed a transfer of land to A., his

It took a transfer from A., obtaining also the transfer from plff. to A., & with notice of the stipulation made an advance. B. subsequently registered the transfers & obtained a certificate of title.—Held: the certificate of registration must be set aside, but B. was entitled to hold the transfers as securities.—BERRY v. t. Express notice to transferee of trust.—R., partner in M. W. & Co., received £2,000 of plff.'s money to invest, & he invested it in M. Mills Co. in trust for plff., the transaction appearing in the co.'s books as "R. in trust." He subsequently sent over to plff. in England the stock certificates & paid her the dividends. Becoming indebted to deft. bank, R. transferred to the bank three hundred & fifty shares of M. Mills Co., the transfer disclosing his fiduciary character. R. became insolvent & plff. ceased to get her dividends, the bank retaining them.—Held: the bank had notice that R. was plff.'s agent & was accountable to her for the dividends, having failed to show any authority in R. to sell or pledge the stock. Mangles v. 2432. —[Pltf. was sole partner in an Australian firm. Defts. had dealt with his firm since 1889. In Jan., 1899, pltf. gave to his agent in England a power of attorney to purchase goods in connection with pltf.'s business, & either for cash or on credit, " & for me & on my behalf, & where necessary in connection with any purchases made on my behalf as aforesaid or in connection with my business," to make, draw, sign, accept, or indorse any bills of exchange or promissory notes which should be requisite or proper, & to sign pltf.'s name, or his trading name, to any cheques on his banking account in London. The attorney, purporting to act under the power, obtained from defts. a loan of £4,000, & accepted bills of exchange for that amount in the name of the firm per pro. himself. He represented to defts. that he had full power to borrow, & produced the power, but they accepted his word, & did not read the power. The £4,000 was paid by two cheques of defts. in favour of pltf.'s firm. The attorney indorsed these cheques & paid them into the London banking account of pltf.'s firm. He afterwards drew out the whole sum, & applied it to his own purposes. Pltf. brought an action to restrain negotiation of the bills. Defts. counterclaimed for payment of the money due on the bills, or, in the alternative, for the £4,000 as money had & received by pltf. to their use. The judge found that pltf. had no knowledge of the borrowing by the attorney, & got no benefit from it:—Held: (1) the power of attorney conferred no general power to borrow, & the claim for the money due on the bills of exchange failed; (2) defts. must be taken to have had notice of the terms of the power & that the attorney had no general power to borrow; (3) they could not recover the £4,000 as money had & received by pltf. to their use.—JACOBS v. MORRIS, [1902] 1 Ch. 816; 71 L. J. Ch. 363; 86 L. T. 275; 50 W. R. 371; 18 T. L. R. 384; 46 Sol. Jo. 315, C. A.

2434. —& letter of credit—Secret letter of instructions.—[Defts. entered into an agreement with C. to carry on for them certain mining speculations in America, & furnished him with instructions, a letter authorising him to draw on them for £10,000, & a power of attorney of the most extensive description, "to take & work mines, to purchase tools & materials & erect the necessary buildings, & to execute any deeds or instruments he might deem necessary for the purpose." C., after he had raised £10,000 under the letter of authority, obtained of pltf. in America £1,500, which he applied to defts.' use, & for the amount drew bills on defts., which he indorsed to pltf. He did not show the letter of authority to pltf., & there were no indorsements on it of sums previously raised, & it did not appear that pltf. knew that any money had been raised before by C. Defts. refused to accept the bills:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover £1,500 from defts. as money had & received to his use.

The jury have found that it is the duty of a party advancing money to an agent to look at his power of attorney & letter of credit; negating, thereby, the necessity of calling for his letter of instructions; & properly, too, because the agent's letter of instructions may contain communications which it may be neither safe nor convenient to divulge (BEST, C.J.).

I presume that persons in the situation of pltf. would look at the power before they advanced money, & it would be prejudicial to mercantile interests to restrain a power where the object in view requires an extensive authority. As to the inquiries which it is alleged pltf. ought to have made touching any sums advanced upon the letter of credit, it would have been useless to make them of C., who, of course, would not disclose anything to defeat his own purpose, & impossible to make them with success elsewhere, as, for aught that could be learned in the absence of indorsements, C. might have raised the money before he reached America (GASELEE, J.).—WITHERINGTON v. HERRING (1829), 5 Bing. 442; 3 Moo. & P. 30; 7 L. J. O. S. C. P. 172; 130 E. R. 1132.

2435. —Containing recitals not disclosing full circumstances.]—The operative part of a power of attorney appointed X. & Y. to be the attorneys of pltf. without in terms limiting the duration of their powers, but it was preceded by a recital that pltf. was going abroad, & was desirous of appointing attorneys to act for him during his absence. During pltf.'s absence from England, & again after his return, X. & Y., without his knowledge & purporting to act under the power which empowered them to borrow money on mtge., borrowed moneys from a bank upon the security of charges on pltf.'s property, which moneys they afterwards misappropriated. Upon the occasion of the first advance the power was produced to the bankers & registered by their clerk, but it was not examined by them, nor were they aware that pltf. was in England when they made the second advance. Pltf. went abroad a second time, & before going gave a fresh power to X. & Y., by which, after referring to the former power, & reciting that he had been in England for a short time, & was returning abroad, he appointed X. & Y. his attorneys, giving them power to borrow money for him with or without giving security. During his second absence, & without his knowledge, X. & Y., who themselves had an overdrawn account with the bankers, borrowed from them further moneys, alleging that it was to enable them to make payments for pltf.; & under the second power of attorney they charged pltf.'s property as a security for the loan, applying the borrowed moneys in reduction of their own debt to the bank. Upon this occasion the second power was produced to the solr. of the bank, but he was unacquainted with the former transactions, & neither the bankers nor any of their clerks were aware that pltf. had been in England:—Held: (1) in order to make out that the bankers were so put upon inquiry as to invalidate the transaction, pltf. must show that the recitals in the second power were seen by some agents of theirs who knew of the previous transactions, & would by those recitals have been rendered suspicious of the good faith of X. & Y.; (2) there having been no such notice or knowledge on the part of the bankers, wilful blindness could not be imputed to them, & the last-mentioned charge was valid.—DANBY v. COURTS & Co. (1885), 29 Ch. D. 500; 54 L. J. Ch. 577; 52 L. T. 401; 33 W. R. 559; 1 T. L. R. 313.

2436. Agent acting professedly under letter of credit.—A letter of credit was addressed by debts to K. & Co., merchants in Batavia, in which debts undertook to open in favour of K. & Co. a credit for £5,000 "to be availed of by drafts on us . . . against produce bought & paid for by you, but not immediately ready for shipment." Acting under the letter of credit, K. & Co. drew bills on debts, without having bought & paid for produce, & negotiated them with plffs., a firm of bankers. Plffs. were aware of the terms of the letter of credit. Debts declined to accept the bills. In an action against debts, for the amount of the bills:—Held: (1) the letter of credit must be construed according to its ordinary meaning; (2) no goods having been "bought & paid for" by K. & Co., debts were not liable.—CHARTERED BANK OF INDIA, AUSTRALIA & CHINA v. MACFAYDEN & Co. (1895), 64 L. J. Q. B. 367; 72 L. T. 428; 43 W. R. 397; 11 T. L. R. 289; 39 Sol. Jo. 365; 1 Com. Cas. 1; 15 R. 333.

2437. Agent delivering goods with ticket attached showing true seller.—If an agent employed to sell coals make a bargain in his own name with a tradesman to furnish him with coals on credit, for which, in return, he is to receive goods on credit, & coals & goods are both delivered, the real seller of the coals may recover the price of the tradesman if his name is on the ticket sent with the coals as seller, because the tradesman after that is bound to inquire into the nature of the agent's situation, & should not continue to treat him as a principal.—*PRATT v. 2439. Express notice of charterparty showing goods consigned to party other than seller.—A. chartered a ship in his own name, & consigned it to B. in Cuba, under an agreement that B. should ship goods & consign them to A., & that A. should accept B.'s bills for the value. After B. had accepted the bills on the faith of the agreement, B. sold the cargo to C., who had notice of the terms of the charterparty, & it was consigned to another person:—Held: assuming that the fact of A.'s appearing principal on the charterparty made it incumbent on C. to ascertain the relations between A. & B., yet as B. was actually the principal, & not the agent of A., C. could safely deal with him for the cargo, & the circumstance that B. had committed a fraud on A. did not prevent C. from obtaining a good title to the goods.—ZULUETA v. TYRRE (1851), 15 Beav. 577; 51 E. R. 662.

2440. Express notice of shipmaster's limited authority given by local agent of shipowner.—Deft.'s vessel arrived at G. on Sunday, Jan. 27. On Jan. 28, a clerk of deft.'s local agents made a communication to plff. advising him not to advance moneys or supplies to the master:—Held: an ample notice to plff. putting him on his guard not to make any advances till he had made an investigation.—THE FAITHFUL (1862), 31 L. 2441. Partner of one firm pledging bills of another firm having common partner.—A., being in partnership with B., entered, without the knowledge of B., into partnership with C., an agent of the firm of A. & B., for sale of timber. The firm of A. & C. employed R. F. & Co. as their bankers, & C. brought cheques & bills to the bankers with the names of A. & B. attached to them, which the bankers held as collateral security to cover C.'s overdrafts. Upon A.'s death C. failed & B. became bkpt.:—Held: (1) the bankers were not in a position to prove their collateral security against B.'s partnership estate, as they neglected to ascertain the extent of either A.'s or C.'s authority to pledge B.'s credit, & no account being produced, it was impossible to distinguish any agency transactions from the general dealings of A. & C. with the bankers, whose title could not be higher than that of the persons with whom they dealt.—Re CROUDACE (1860), 15 L. Prior to this date the underwriter had paid many losses on policies effected through A., but neither at the end of 1909, nor at any time, had he ever given any notice to those with whom he had done such underwriting business that A.'s authority to act for him had been determined, nor had he given any notice of the fact at Lloyd's. In an action by pltf. in respect of certain policies ostensibly underwritten by deft. through the agency of A. after Dec. 31, 1909:—Held: deft. was estopped from denying A.'s authority to act on his behalf.—WILLIS, FABER & CO., LTD. v. 2446. Broker authorised to buy under agent's supervision continuing to buy after agency determined.]—L., a broker, was introduced to P. & Co. by A., & was at the interview directed by P. & Co. to make purchases under the superintendence of A. L. made large purchases under the sole order & direction of A., sending him the bought & sold notes & contracts & receiving from him the necessary moneys for payments, & generally treating him as principal, no direct communication taking place between L. & P. & Co. Such course of dealing was admitted by P. & Co. to have been according to their intentions up to a certain period; & no notice having been given by them to L. of any determination of the authority of A.:—Held: L. had a right from what took place at the interview, & the uniform course of action on A.'s part, to consider him as the authorised agent, or a partner of P. &

Co., until expressly informed of determination of his authority or the partnership.—POLE v. LEASK (1863), 33 L. J. Ch. 155; 8 L. T. 645; 9 Jur. N. S. 829, H. L.

SUB-SECT. 4.—WHEN KNOWLEDGE OF PRINCIPAL IMPUTABLE TO AGENT.

2449. Where communication impossible.]—Pltf. was assignee in Calcutta of an insolvent there who was tenant for life without impeachment of waste of lands in England, with remainder to defts. successively. Pltf.'s agents here, acting on his instructions, applied on Aug. 6 to deft. D., manager of the estates, for particulars of the property, upon which there was much valuable timber. Through the delay of defts. nothing was done till Oct. 22, when some information was given in consequence of which pltf.'s agents took possession; & upon their threatening to cut down the trees an agreement, dated Oct. 23, was entered into between them & defts. which provided that pltf. should be deemed as fully entitled to the timber, as if it had been cut & removed on Aug. 15 preceding, that defts. as to their present & future interest would carry the agreement into effect, that pltf. should have no right or interest save such as he had on Aug. 15 or since, & that none of the timber should be felled before Dec. 1. The insolvent had died on Sept. 24. Pltf. himself became aware of this on the next day, but the news did not reach England until Nov. 4. Defts. then repudiated the agreement:—Held: the agreement was wholly void as having been entered into without consideration, & under a total mistake as to the facts existing at its date. Semble: the knowledge possessed by the principal was not knowledge on the part of the agents in this country, who signed the agreement in actual ignorance of the death.—COCHRANE v. 2450. Knowledge of principal not proved.—A deed had been executed between A. & B., the negotiation for which on A.'s behalf had been carried on by C., his solr. B. filed a bill to set aside the deed on the ground that C. had not disclosed certain material circumstances, the knowledge of which would have prevented B. from executing the deed:—Held: unless it could be shown that A. was at the time aware of the circumstances, B. was not entitled to relief.—SOLOMON v. SUB-SECT. 5.—WHERE AGENT ACTS FOR BOTH PARTIES.

2451. Agent acting for—Creditor & insurance company—Company issuing policy forming part of security.—D., having agreed to lend £1,000 to W. upon a policy of insurance on his life, gave directions for effecting it to his attorney, L., the local agent of the W. Insurance Co. L. accordingly transmitted proposals for a policy to the head office without mentioning that D. was the beneficial owner, & obtained a policy therefrom, & delivered it to D. L. was authorised by the co. to receive notices of assignments of policies on their behalf. W. became bkpt.:—Held: there was sufficient notice to take the policy out of the order & disposition of W., & to give the assignment validity as against his assignees, inasmuch as notice to L. was notice to the co., & notice communicated to him in his character of attorney to D. for the purpose of being transmitted to the co. was effectual as a notice to him in his capacity as the co.'s agent.—GALE v. LEWIS (1846), 9 Q. B. 730; 16 L. J. Q. B. 119; 8 L. T. O. S. 158; 11 Jur. 730; 115 E. R. 1455.

2452. — Lessor & lessee—Lessee not relying on agent.—Notice of prior settlements in the confidential agent of lessees who is negotiating a lease will affect the lessees; but where it appeared that no confidence was placed in the agent by the lessees, & that he negotiated the lease as the agent of the lessor only:—Held: the lessees were not affected by notice, actual or constructive, which the agent certainly had.—CHANDOS (DUCHESS) v. BROWNLOW (1791), 2 Ridg. Parl. Rep. 345, at p. 392.

2453. — Vendor & purchaser.—If the same person is agent for both vendor & purchaser, or is himself vendor & agent for purchaser, whatever notice he may have will affect purchaser.—DRYDEN v. FROST (1837), 3 My. & Cr. 670; 8 L. J. Ch. 235; 1 Jur. 330; 40 E. R. 1084.

2454. Broker acting for—Vendor & purchaser—Usage—Failure to communicate.—Defts., London merchants, employed a broker at Liverpool to purchase some wool. The broker negotiated a sale by pltf. to defts. of certain bales deliverable at Odessa, the names of the vessels to be declared as soon as the wools are shipped." In this transaction the broker acted for both pltf. & defts. By the custom of Liverpool, where a contract contained a stipulation that notice of an event should be given by the seller to the buyer, it was usual for the seller to give notice to the broker, who communicated it to the buyer:—Held: (1) defts. were bound by such usage; (2) notice by pltf. to broker of the names of vessels on which the wools were shipped was a performance of that stipulation, although the broker omitted to communicate them to defts.—GRAVES v. LÆGG (1857), 2 H. & N. 210; 26 L. J. Ex. 316; 29 L. T. O. S. 145; 3 Jur. N. S. 519; 5 W. R. 597; 157 E. R. 88, Ex. Ch.

2455. Company director or officer of—Two contracting companies—General rule.—Where one co. is promoted by another & the same persons are directors of both, after the promotion is ended neither co. can be regarded as to future acts unconnected with the promotion as in any fiduciary relation to the other; they are distinct commercial bodies with the same persons as directors, & cannot be regarded as two firms with common partners; & what the directors do as agents of the one co. cannot be properly treated as done by them for the other, & the knowledge which they have acquired as directors of the one co. cannot be imputed to the other co. when they have not disclosed their knowledge to anyone.—LAGUNAS NITRATE Co. v. 2456. Solicitor acting for—Lender & borrower—Not acting for lender in particular transaction.—A customer, desirous of obtaining an advance from his bankers on the credit of a surety, for that purpose employed solrs., who were also the ordinary solrs. of the bankers, but were not employed by them in the transaction in question. The solrs. gave information to the bankers as to the sufficiency of the surety, & debited them with the costs of preparing the instrument of suretyship:—Held: they could not be regarded as having acted for the bankers from the beginning, so as to affect the bankers with notice of any concealment or misrepresentation on the part of the customer towards the surety.—WYTHES v. i. Right to sue.

2457. Agent cannot sue.—K., who carried on business at Riga, entered into a contract through the agency of J. & Co., to sell certain timber to defts. c.i.f. London. Payment was to be "by approved acceptances to seller's or authorised agent's draft." The contract was signed by J. & Co., as agents for K. In accordance with the practice of the Riga timber trade K. sent the bill of lading for the goods to J. & Co., & at same time drew upon J. & Co. for the price. J. & Co. accepted the draft on May 24, 1911, & paid it in due course on May 30, 1911. On May 25, 1911, J. & Co. sent the shipping documents to defts., together with a draft for the price of the goods drawn upon defts., & asked them to accept & return the draft. Defts. kept the shipping documents & took delivery of the goods, but refused to accept the draft as the goods were not in accordance with the contract, & claimed to reject the goods. It was admitted that the goods were not in accordance with contract, & they were sold by order of the ct. for about one-third of their invoice price. An action was thereupon brought against defts. by K. for the price of the goods & by J. & Co. to recover the amount of the draft which defts. had failed to accept:—Held: (1) as J. & Co. were merely agents & not parties to the contract of purchase they were not entitled, in the absence of a contract personally with them by defts. that the draft would be accepted, to maintain an action against defts. for the amount of the draft; (2) the fact that J. & Co. had themselves paid K. did not make any difference, inasmuch as that fact could not be relied upon by defts. as an answer to an action against them by K. on the contract.—

2459. — Broker contracting "in my own name for your account."—F., a broker having some rum for sale, made a contract with L., & gave him a sale

note in these terms: "L., London, Jan. 13, 1861.—I have this day bought in my own name for your account of T. 259 puncheons of Cuba rum, sold at 1s. 9d. per gallon. Landing charges 5s. per puncheon, to be paid by buyer; landing gauge; prompt Mar. 23; brokerage $\frac{1}{4}$ per cent.; money on delivery or £5 per cent.—F., broker." A portion of the price was afterwards paid to T.:—Held: (1) F. could not maintain an action for goods sold & delivered against L. for residue of the price; (2) the action should be brought by T., the principal.—FAWKES v. LAMB (1862), 31 L. J. Q. B. 98; 8 Jur. N. S. 385; 10 W. R. 348.

2460. — Broker contracting "on account of" named principal.—A broker who entered into a contract in the form, "I have this day sold you on account of M. one hundred bales of cotton, etc.—F., broker," is not entitled to sue on the contract, it being clear on the face of the instrument that he does not intend to bind himself as principal. The right of a broker to sue differs from that of a factor or an auctioneer, who have rights of possession or property in goods intrusted to them, & special interests in performance of contracts entered into by them for their principals.—FAIRLIE v. FENTON (1870), L. R. 5 Exch. 169; 39 L. J. Ex. 107; 22 L. T. 373; 18 W. R. 700.

2461. Del credere agent.—An agent upon del credere commission is in the same position with regard to a buyer as any other agent, & cannot sue the buyer in his own name for a debt contracted between the principal & buyer.—BRAMWELL (BRAMBLE) v. SPILLER (1870), 21 L. T. 672; 18 W.

Annotation:—Foldd. Fairlie v. Fenton (1870), 39 L. J. Ex. 107.

2462. Manager of mutual insurance company signing policy as such.—Pltf. was manager of an unincorporated mutual assurance assocn. of which deft. was a member. Deft. entered into a policy of insurance signed by pltf. on the part of the assocn. In this policy were incorporated the rules of the assocn., by which the manager was authorised to levy contributions & sue defaulting members. In an action by the manager against deft. on the policy, the declaration averred that, in consideration of deft. agreeing to comply with the rules, pltf. subscribed the policy. On demurrer:—Held: (1) inasmuch as pltf. incurred no liability by subscribing the policy, the declaration showed no consideration, as between pltf. & deft. for deft.'s promise; (2) the action was not maintainable.—EVANS v.

PART X. SECT. 1. SUB-SECT. 1.—

A. (a) i.

a. Agent—Right to sue extends to executor of deceased agent.—(Certain land belonged to the estate of S., who went abroad about 1815, & had not been heard of. B. & his father had managed the property as agents for many years, & deft. had held the land under & paid rent to them in succession; but the evidence showed that they had never claimed the land as their own, & had received & credited the rent as on account of the S. estate, not knowing who were the owners.—Held: the exors. of B. were entitled to recover, for use & occupation, though the money when received would not form part of the assets of B.'s estate.—BALDWIN v. FOSTER (1891), 21 U. C. R. 152.—CAN.

b. — Principal not interfering.—W. sold land under power of sale to F., who paid part of the price, the balance to be paid in notes. Shortly after A. brought a deed to F. & demanded the notes. The deed was left with F. on his delivering to A. a writing as follows: "Received from A. a deed given by W. for a certain piece of land bought at auction. . . . The above mentioned deed I receive only to be examined, & if lawfully & properly executed to be kept, if not lawfully & properly executed to be returned to A. When the deed is lawfully & properly executed to the satisfaction of my attorney, I will pay the amount of balance due on the deed, $572, provided I am given a good warranted deed, & the mtge., which is on record, is properly cancelled if required." The deed was not returned & A. brought an action for the balance.—Held: If A. was merely an agent of W. in the transaction, he could still sue, as his principal had not interfered.—FAWCETT v. ANDERSON (1835), Cass. Dig. (2nd ed.) 8; Cout. Dig. 348.—CAN.

HOOPER (1875), 1 Q. B. D. 45; 45 L. J. Q. B. 306; 33 L. T. 374; 24 W. R. 226, C. A.

2463. Mayor contracting "on behalf of himself & rest of borough."—The highest bidder for lands sold by auction & pltf., mayor of a corp., on behalf of himself & the rest of the borough, vendors of the lands, signed a contract in which they mutually promised to fulfil the conditions of sale, which stated the title of the corp. to the premises & stipulated they should convey & might resell on default. The only act therein mentioned to be done by pltf. was receiving the deposit:—Held: pltf. could not maintain an action in his individual capacity against purchaser for breach of this contract.—BOWEN v. MORRIS (1810), 2 Taunt. 374; 127 E. R. 1122.

2464. Person contracting "for himself & also under letter of attorney for & on behalf of" named principals.]—C. & Co., merchants in Spain, possessed of mines, gave J. a power of attorney authorising him to sell them for a sum not less than £40,000, J.'s remuneration being a moiety of any sum he might obtain beyond that price. J. contracted to sell the mines to deft. co. by an agreement which professed to be made "between J., acting for himself & also under a letter of attorney for & on behalf of A., B., & C., all three of them co-proprietors with him of various mines in Spain, & carrying on business in co-partnership with him under the style of C. & Co., of the one part, & the co. of the other part." In the body of the agreement C. & Co. were described as the "vendors." There was a stipulation that the mines were to be delivered by vendors to the co. with a good title. The agreement was signed by J. "for self & partners," & was sealed with the seal of the co.:—Held: (1) J. alone could not maintain an action against the co. for breach of this agreement; (2) A., B., & C., being parties to the contract, must be joined as pltf.s.—JUNG v. PHOSPHATE OF LIME CO., LTD. (1868), L. R. 3 C. P. 139; 37 L. J. C. P. 73; 17 L. T. 541.

2465. Person selling as agent.—When entitled to part of price as commission.]—The owner of a colliery placed it in the hands of an agent to sell at a minimum price of £12,000, on the understanding that he should be entitled to the difference between £12,000 & any greater sum which the colliery might fetch. The agent treated with R. & Co., who agreed, in the event which happened, to purchase the colliery for £12,000 & pay the agent £2,000 for his expenses & commission. R. & Co. afterwards declined to purchase the colliery, & the agent filed a bill against them & the owner for specific performance of the agreement. On demurrer by R. & Co.:—Held: the bill was not maintainable.—GLASBROOK v. RICHARDSON (1874), 23 W. R. 51.

2466. Person contracting "as chairman & on behalf of" named principal.]—A contract was made between pltf., "as chairman & on behalf of the T. Assocn.," & deft.; pltf. brought an action in his own name against deft. for breach of the agreement:—Held: (1) there was nothing to show that deft. contracted with pltf. personally; (2) deft. was entitled to judgment.

If an agent professes to contract in the name & on behalf of an alleged principal, & without using language expressing he contracts personally, no rule of law can convert his position into that of a contracting party by reason only of there not having been at the time any principal in existence who could be bound (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, J.)—HOLLMAN v. PULLIN (1884), Cab. & El. 254.

2467. Agent real principal.—Part performance by third party after notice.]—Where pltf. made a written contract for sale of goods in which he described himself as agent of A., & the buyer accepted & paid for a portion of the goods, & had then notice that pltf. was the real principal in the transaction, & not the agent of A.:—Held: pltf. might sue in his own name for non-acceptance & non-payment for the residue of the goods.—RAYNER v. GROTE (1846), 15 M. & W. 359; 16 L. J. Ex. 79; 8 L. T. O. S. 474; 153 E. R. 888.

2468. —.—Plf. who has made a contract as agent for a third person cannot sue as principal without giving notice to deft. before action brought that he is the party really interested.—BICKERTON v. BURRELL (1816), 5 M. & S. 383; 105 E. R. 1091.

2470. Agent having interest.—Third party's right to set up defences available against principal.]—A broker who has advanced money on goods may sue 2465 i. Person selling as agent.—Possession but not property in article sold.]—Dft. in writing acknowledged the receipt from pltf., described as assistant manager of H. Co., of a sewing machine on hire for nine months at $5 a month in advance. He agreed to hire the machine & in default of payment of the monthly rental, or the due fulfilment of the lease, or if the machine should be deemed by the lessor to be in jeopardy, pltf. or the co. might resume possession of it; deft. waived all right of action for trespass, damages, or replevin, by reason of any action taken by pltf. or the co. in resuming such possession. Pltf. had possession of the machine before delivery to deft., but no property in it except as agent:—Held: pltf. under the agreement might maintain replevin in his own name for the machine, on non-fulfilment of the conditions.—COGILLARD v. HUNTER (1875), 36 U. C. R. 316.—CAN.

2467 i. Agent real principal.]—A person who sells goods in reality for himself, but apparently as agent for another person, whom the agent, in the receipt signed by him, declares to be the owner & vendor, is not entitled to sue on the contract as principal.—HALL v. MCBEAN (1893), Q. R. 3 S. C. 212.—CAN.

2470 i. Agent having interest.]—When an agent enters into a contract, in which he has a direct pecuniary interest, he is entitled to sue.—HAY v. HOGG, C. L. J. 67; 1 J. R. N. S. C. 22.—N.Z.

2470 iii. —.—Liability for price & entitled to penalty.]—Where a person "as agent for & on behalf of" a disclosed principal contracted as the first party for the building of certain vessels, & came under obligation to pay the price, while the second party, shipbuilders, agreed to pay to the first party certain penalties in the event of failure to implement his obligation by non-timely delivery, or otherwise:—Held: the agent had a title to sue an action of damages against the shipbuilders.—*LEVY & CO. v. 2470 iv. —.—Action for return of collateral.]—H. C. & Co. being indebted to applt. drew bills of exchange in applt.'s favour on resp., who was trustee for H. C. & Co., & as collateral security transferred to applt. a Govt. subsidy payable to M. C. S. Ry. Co., which the latter had assigned to H. C. & Co. As additional security resp. delivered to applt. certain bonds of M. C. S. Ry. Co. belonging to H. C. & Co., applt. agreeing to return them together with the drafts held by him in the event of the subsidy being paid. In an action to recover the bonds, the amount secured by them having been paid, applt. contended that resp.

For full anns., see S. C. No. 2472, post.

2472.—No rule of law is better ascertained, or stands upon a stronger foundation, than this, that, when an agent names his principal, the principal is responsible, not the agent; but, for the application of that rule, the agent must name his principal as the person to be responsible (LORD ERSKINE, C.).—Ex p. 2473.—It is clear the agent cannot be personally liable where the contract is peculiarly personal, otherwise this absurdity would follow, that if A., professing to have, but not having, authority from B., made a contract that B. should marry C., C. might sue A. for breach of promise of marriage, even though of the same sex (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).—LEWIS v. NICHOLSON, No. 2748, post.

having acted merely as agent the co. was not entitled to recover.—Held: (1) resp. being personally liable on the bills, which the subsidy was intended to pay, was not acting in the transaction merely as agent or servant of H. C. & Co., & the contract to return the bonds was with him personally; (2) the conditions of the contract having been fulfilled & H. C. & Co. having made no claim to the bonds as against resp., resp. was entitled to recover them.—DRUMMOND v. BAYLISS (1877), 2 S. C. R. 61.—CAN.

2470 v. — Contract induced by fraud.—An agent acting as such for a disclosed principal contracted in excess of his authority & was held liable in damages to his principal. The contract so entered into by the agent was induced by fraud on the part of the third party.—Held: title to sue for reduction of the contract on the ground that it had been induced by fraud was not limited to the principal, but extended to the agent, who was liable to relieve his principal of an action at the instance of the other party to the contract & founded upon it.—MILNE v. 2470 vi. — Contract between principal & third party.—A charterparty provided that the owners should employ at the ports of discharge the consignee nominated by the freighters to transact the ship business there inwards & outwards on the customary terms, not exceeding 24 per cent. on amount of freight payable inwards, & 5 per cent. outwards. The freighters nominated pliffs. The owners refused to pay pliffs. commission on the outward freight on the ground that, in the circumstances under which such freight was procured, pliffs. were not under the charterparty entitled to receive commission on it.—Held: pliffs. were sufficiently within the consideration of the charterparty to maintain a suit for the breach of such clauses of it as were inserted for their benefit.—BLACKWALL & CO. v. JONES & CO. (1870), 7 Bom. O. C. 144.—IND.

2474.—A., an auctioneer, being employed to sell an estate belonging to B., entered into & signed an agreement with C. for purchase in his own name, as agent of B., & B. shortly afterwards signed it, & added, "I hereby sanction this agreement & approve of A.'s having signed same on my behalf".—Held: A. was not personally responsible.—SPITTLE v. 2475. Husband—No evidence that wife contracted "otherwise than as agent."—Resp., a married woman living with her husband, ordered articles of dress from applts. with the husband's express authority, & gave applts. her married name. In an action by applts. against resp. for the price the jury could not agree upon the question whether applts. knew she was a married woman, & judgment was entered for applts. In the C. A. judgment was entered for resp. on the ground that there was no evidence that she had contracted "otherwise than as agent" so as to bring the case within Married Women's Property Act, 1893 (c. 63).—Held: (1) it was immaterial whether applts. did or did not know resp. was a married woman, 2470 vii. — Remuneration dependent on amount of profits insufficient.—In an action to recover damages for breach of a contract made by deft. with pltf., it appeared that, in making the contract, pltf. was merely acting as agent for W., & that he had no personal interest in the transaction beyond the fact that his remuneration was dependent upon the amount of profit.—Held: the understanding between pltf. & W., as to the mode in which pltf. was to be remunerated for his services, could not enable the latter to recover in his own name for a breach of the contract.—WURZBURG v. WEBB (1886), 7 R. & G. 414.—CAN.

2471 i. General rule.—Where a party has acted professedly in the capacity of agent, a tortious action against him, & not against his principal, is incompetent.—KING v. SHIRRA (1827), 5 S. 231.—SCOT.

2471 ii. — Effect of agent identifying himself with contract.—H. agreed with a co. that they should have an option to purchase a mining lease for £40 up to a certain date, that the lease should meantime be transferred to W., as attorney for the co., & that in case the co. did not buy the lease should be re-transferred to H. The lease was duly transferred to W., but the co. did not complete the purchase, & owing to its cancellation for non-fulfilment of labour conditions the lease was never re-transferred. H. sued W. "as attorney of the co." for the £40, & obtained judgment.—Held: although the summons ought in law to have been dismissed on the ground that W. was not personally liable, yet he had so identified himself with the contract by becoming transferee of the lease that it could not be said that the order was against natural justice.—Ex p. WOOD (1904), S. R. (N. S. W.) 140.—AUS.

2471 iv. — Administration society.—A general administration society, which leases a property for the owner thereof, is but the latter's agent & cannot be sued by the tenant for cancellation of the lease & in damages.—BERMAN v. GENERAL ADMINISTRATION SOCIETY (1916), Q. R. 51 S. C. 132.—CAN.

2471 v. — Person being broker or agent by profession.—Where a broker orders goods from a merchant on account of another, his employer, & declares that the goods are for his principal, & the merchant takes the bills of the principal for the goods, without insisting on the broker joining in them, the broker is not liable for payment, failing the person for whom they were commissioned.—COWAN & SLOAN v. DAVIDSON & CO. (1814), 17 F. C. 505.—SCOT.

c. Factor — Not liable except on contract entered into.—Defts., factors of W., sold wheat to pltf., who subsequently obtained an award in his favour in an arb. on a separate transaction between himself & W., to which defts. were not parties, although they actively intervened as W.'s agents. In an action by pltf. to recover the balance of account.—Held: he was not entitled to include in his debit against defts. the sum awarded to him as against W.—BRUNSKILL v. RIGNEY (1857), 6 C. P. 509.—CAN.

d. Partner—Acting as agent of co-partners.—Defts., partners in a firm of which the estates of F. & B. were also partners, informed pltf. that the estates would pay him a pension. F. & B. had constituted the firm before defts. joined it, & during the greater part of pltf.'s period of service. Subsequently defts. informed pltf. by letter that they would remit the pension to him quarterly.—Held: on failure of payment of pension, pltf.'s remedy was against the estates of F. & B. & not against defts., who had merely acted as agents.—FICHAUDT, LTD. v. 2477. Person described as agent in bill of lading.—Indebitatus assumpsit for freight payable by deft. to pltf. for & in respect of conveyance by them for deft. of goods in & on board a certain ship. At the trial it appeared pltf. had received on board their vessel a quantity of coals from the B. Co., to be carried to London : that the master signed a bill of lading, by which the coals were made deliverable "to T. (deft.) for the L. Gas Co., or to his assigns, he or they paying freight for the goods 10s. per ton in cash on true delivery." On arrival of the vessel in London deft. produced the bill of lading & received the goods under it, & afterwards offered to pay freight by a bill at 2 months :—Held : deft. was not personally liable, inasmuch as on the face of the bill of lading he was a mere agent to receive the goods for the co., the property vesting in them.—AMOS v. TEMPERLEY (1841), 8 M. & W. 798 ; 11 L. J. Ex. 183 ; 151 E. R. 1203.

2479. Person contracting in name of & expressly as agent for another.—A person who executes an instrument in the name of, & expressly as agent for, another cannot be treated as a party to the instrument so as to be sued upon it, unless he is shown to be the real principal.

Assumpsit on a contract alleged to have been made by deft. to charter a ship to pltf. Plea, non assumpsit. Proof that deft. made a memorandum of charterparty in B.'s name & purporting to be signed by deft. as agent for B., that deft. had no authority to contract for B. & knew that he had none, & that B. refused to adopt the contract :—Held : deft. was not liable as principal in an action on the contract itself.—JENKINS v. HUTCHINSON

(1849), 13 Q. B. 744 ; 18 L. J. Q. B. 274 ; 13 L. T. O. S. 401 ; 13 Jur. 763 ; 116 E. R. 1448.

2480. Person ordering goods for another.—When a person gives an order for another & tells the tradesman for whose use the goods are, he is only to be considered as agent, & not liable himself, unless the tradesman refuse to deliver them to the order of the person for whom they are directed, but will deliver them only to his credit who ordered them.—OWEN v. GOOCH (1797), 2 Esp. 507.

2481.—Pltf., a stationer, sent goods to India on order of deft. On a bill being forwarded to deft., made out to the person to whom the goods had been sent, deft. said the goods were not for him, & he should not pay for them, as he was merely an agent in the matter. The money not being paid, a bill was afterwards made out to deft. Pltf.'s books were not produced, but his son stated that their custom was to insert in their book the name of the person to whom the goods were sent, not of the person who gave the order. The jury having found for pltf., the ct. ordered a new trial.—RICHARDSON v. DOYLE (1847), 8 L. T. O. S. 122, 369.

2482. Person purchasing "as agent of" named principal.—Pltf. was inventor of a machine for rolling iron ; deft. as the agent of J., his father, had purchased one of pltf.'s machines. The defence was that the action was brought against the wrong person, & should have been against J., the father ; it was suggested that this had been done to prevent deft. giving evidence of non-completion of the contract. A verdict having been found for pltf., the ct. ordered a new trial, no objection to be made by deft. that the wrong party had been proceeded against.—BROWN v. JONES (1851), 18 L. T. O. S. 79, 279.

2484.—Goods were bought from pltf. by H., who had formerly been in the employment of S. & Co., & had afterwards set up in business for himself, having a counting-house in the house of S. & Co., as pltf. knew. The goods, by H.'s direction, were invoiced to S. & Co., & pltf. drew for the price upon S. & Co., without whose security H. could not have obtained credit. S. & Co. received a commission from H. In an action against H., H. contended that he purchased as agent of S. & Co., as he used to do when in their employment, but there was evidence that he bought as principal on his own account, & the jury found a verdict for pltf. :—Held : the verdict must stand.—RAILTON v. HODGSON, PEELE v. HODGSON (1804), 4 Taunt. 576 n. ; 128 E. R. 450 n.

24801. Person ordering goods for another—Whether personally liable or liable quod agent a question of fact—Question for jury.—Pltf. sued deft. for lumber furnished on the occasion of the Provincial Agricultural Society's meeting at H. The defence was that the society, which was an incorporated body, was liable, & not deft. personally. The trial judge left it to the jury to find upon the evidence whether deft. had contracted with pltf. personally, or as one of a committee of gentlemen who undertook to superintend, in either of which events he held him to be personally liable ; but the jury were told that if he contracted only as representing or on behalf of the corp., then he would not be personally liable. On motion for a new trial, the verdict being for pltf. :—Held : the ruling was correct.—SIMPSON v. CARR (1849), 5 U. C. R. 326.—CAN.

2480 ii.—Principal ascertainable.—A. received an order from a firm of "steamship owners & brokers" in these terms : "Please supply the S. with the following stores." He delivered the goods, believing the firm were the owners of the vessel, & sued them for the price :—Held : the firm were not liable, in respect that they were acting as agents for the owners, &—since the latter could be discovered by reference to the Register of Shipping—as agents for a disclosed principal.—ARMOUR v. DUFF & Co., [1912] S. C. 120.—SCOT.

charterparty, produced at the trial, was expressed to be made between deft. of the one part & pltf., "as agent of freighter," of the other part, & amongst other things stipulated that, "being concluded on behalf of another party, it is agreed all responsibility on the part of S. (pltf.) shall cease as soon as the cargo is shipped." No principal was named in the charterparty, & it appeared from other evidence that pltf. was himself the real freighter & not merely an agent in the matter:—Held: (1) pltf. was entitled to sue as principal for a breach of the charterparty, notwithstanding he had contracted as agent; (2) the above stipulation, applying only to his character of agent, had not the effect of limiting his responsibility as principal.—SCHMALZ (SCHMALTZ) v. 2493. —.]—By a contract in charterparty form, dated Feb. 3, 1908, between pltf.s, ship-brokers, & defts., timber merchants, in which pltf.s were described as agents for owners of a ship to be named later & defts. as charterers, it was agreed that the ship should load at a foreign port, about the latter half of June, a cargo of timber from agents of the charterers & should deliver same in London on being paid freight at a certain rate. The contract was signed by pltf.s, "by authority of & as agents for owners." Pltf.s were not acting for principals, nor had they made a contract for a ship to carry the cargo, but were themselves principals in the transaction. This was not known to defts. On May 22 pltf.s entered into a charterparty with shipowners for the charter of a ship to carry the cargo, pltf.s being described therein as agents for charterers, at a rate of freight less than that specified in the contract of Feb. 3. Defts.' names were inserted by pltf.s in the charterparty as charterers, & the charterparty was signed by pltf.s, "as agents for merchants." In making the charter, pltf.s were not acting as agents for defts., but were themselves principals. The cargo was shipped under bills of lading reserving freight at the rate specified in the charter of May 22, & was duly delivered at the port of discharge, & the bills of lading freight was paid. In an action by pltf.s to recover the difference between the freight so paid & that reserved by the contract of Feb. 3 defts. contended that, as pltf.s had made that contract as agents, they were not entitled to sue upon it as principals:—Held: as pltf.s in making the contract of Feb. 3 had in fact no principals, but were themselves the principals, they were entitled to sue upon it & recover the freight reserved thereby.—HARPER & Co. v. The contract was entered in pltfs.' books as a purchase & sale by brokers & brokerage charged to both parties. Bought & sold notes were delivered, not disclosing names of principals, but charging brokerage to both. T. & Co. & R. were not known to each other as concerned in the dealings. Pltfs. paid R. for the cotton, & handed them to T. & Co. with a bill of parcels in their own name:—Held: pltfs. were principals in the purchase of R., & sale to T. & Co.—*KILBY v. 2499. — Effect of repudiation by principal.—Pltfs., brokers, bought goods of deft. on account of H., & by his authority. The bought note was made out in their own names, but deft. was told that there was an unnamed principal. Pltfs. afterwards, under a general authority from H., contracted to sell same goods, which deft. had not yet delivered. H., on hearing of the latter contract, told pltfs. that he would have nothing to do with the goods, either as buyer or seller, & in this they acquiesced. Dft. refused to deliver the goods, & pltfs. sued him for damages sustained by them in consequence:—Held: renunciation of the contract by H. & pltfs.' acquiescence in it formed no objection to pltfs.' right to recover.—*SHORT v. 2500. ——C. & N., members of a joint-stock co., entered into a written agreement with deft. for sale of goods to deft. by the co. The agreement was signed by L. "for C. & N." Goods were supplied from the premises of the co.:—Held: (1) C. & N. had themselves entered into the agreement with deft.; (2) they were entitled to sue deft. in their own names for a breach of it.—*CLAY & NEWMAN v. 2501. — Effect of misrepresentation as to being principal—Third party not prejudiced.—At an interview with the vendor, before the date of contract of sale, the purchaser, with the view of inducing an abatement in price, represented that for special reasons he wished to purchase on his own account. Vendor refused to make an abatement in price. Afterwards purchaser, who had made up his mind not to purchase for himself, purchased the land at the full price asked by vendor on behalf of a co., & did not say for whom he was so purchasing. Vendor by his defence pleaded misrepresentation by purchaser, who had led him to believe that he was purchasing for himself:—Held: inasmuch as vendor had failed to show he was unwilling to enter into the contract on the same terms with anyone else, the defence failed.—SMITH v. WHEATCROFT (1878), 9 Ch. D. 223; 39 L. T. 103; 27 W. R. 42.

2502. ——In 1895 defts., trustees of a Congregational chapel, put up for sale by public auction a building, which had formerly been used as their chapel. The conditions of sale imposed no restrictions on the user of the building. After the sale C. made an offer for the building, but defts. declined to accept it, on the ground that it was made on behalf of a committee of Roman Catholics, who intended to use the building as a Roman Catholic place of worship, & defts. objected to sell for that purpose. The committee then told pltf., manager of a mineral water co., that if he could get the property they would buy it of him at £100 profit. Pltf.'s solrs. wrote to defts.' agent, making an offer for the property "on behalf of our client, manager of the E. Mineral Water Co." After some negotiations, a contract was signed by defts. for sale of the building to pltf. at £1,025, a price less than C.'s offer. No direct statement was made that pltf. was buying for the co., but it was admitted that defts., during the negotiations, believed that he was, & that pltf. knew it. Pltf.

2497 ii. — Broker.—B. through his brokers sold shares to G., G. being himself a broker & acting for a principal, though at the time of the contract no principal was disclosed. In the "sold note" G. was named as purchaser:—Held: G., in his own name, could maintain an action against B. for non-transfer of the shares.—GARRETT

v. HIRD (1872), 11 N. S. W. S. C. R. 97.—AUS.

2497 iii. — Farm bailiff.—A farm bailiff sued for the price of an ox, alleging he had sold it at his employer's home farm on behalf of his employer & as the servant of the owner, & that he had accounted to him for the price. He produced no assignment of the debt from the employer:—Held: he had a title to sue.—GRAHAM v. TAIT (1885), 22 Sc. L. R. 378.—SCOT.

2497 iv. — Proper course where defendant knows agency has been terminated.—Pltf. deposited, as security for the payment of a subsidy, certain bonds with deft., who gave a receipt undertaking to return them to pltf. on payment. The subsidy was paid, but deft. refused to deliver up the bonds, contending that pltf. had acted as agent for A. B. & Co., who alone could sue him for their return; also that pltf. was no longer employed by A. B. & Co.:—Held: if pltf. only held the bonds as an agent, he, having stipulated for their return to himself, was entitled to recover them on payment of the subsidy, & although pltf. had since ceased to be the agent of A. B. & Co., deft. could have notified them of pltf.'s claim, & in the absence of any such proceeding, or of any claim by A. B. & Co., deft. had no right to retain the bonds against pltf.—DRUMMOND BAYLIS (1877), 2 S. C. R. 61.—CAN.

signed the contract as principal without protest from defts.' agent. Defts. refused to complete on the ground that pltf. was buying as agent for the Roman Catholic committee, to whom he knew they would not sell, & had obtained the contract by misrepresentation:—Held: (1) pltf. was not buying as agent for the Roman Catholic committee, but for himself with a view to resell at a profit; (2) the misrepresentation as to the mineral water co. was immaterial because the vendors did not care whether they sold to the co. or pltf., & as between them no consideration of the person with whom they were contracting entered as an element into the contract.—NASH v. DIX (1898), 78 L. T. 445.

2503. — Proof in bankruptcy.]—A factor who sells goods in his own name without a del credere commission is a good petitioning creditor against the purchaser, although he has merely communicated purchaser's name to his principal. But he ceases to be so when the principal has agreed with him to consider purchaser as his debtor, & has taken steps for recovering the debt directly from purchaser.—*SADLER v. 2504. Either agent or principal may sue.]—It is a well-established rule of law that, where a contract not under seal is made with an agent in his own name for an undisclosed principal, either the agent or the principal may sue upon it, deft. in the latter case being entitled to be placed in the same situation at the time of the disclosure of the real principal as if the agent had been the contracting party (per CUR.).—*SIMS v. Where a shareholder in a co. applied to the treasurer, who was also a partner in a bank, to advance money in the payment of instalments on his shares, & the money was advanced by crediting the co. in their accounts with the bank to the amount of such instalments:—Held: the action for money lent was properly brought against the borrower in the names of the partners.—ALEXAN-

The master took action in the ct. at Barcelona; the freight was paid into ct. & the hearing of the action was delayed a year for appeal. The master returned to England & A. sued C.:—Semble: A., having no notice that C. was only an agent, had no concern with X., the undisclosed principal.—*NEWLAND v. The jury found for pltf. On a motion for a new trial, the points raised being whether upon the evidence & some correspondence between the parties the special promise had been made out, & whether deft. who had received the goods as agent, & not as owner, was liable on general principles, the ct. made the rule absolute.—*MERCER v. B. (a) 1.

2526 i. Agent described in document—Without qualification.]—Defts. contracted with pltf. as agents of the captain & owners of a ship, then in the M. Roads. Pltf. were aware of this at the time when the contract was made. The captain was at the time in charge of his ship. At the time of the contract nothing was said by either party as to the person or persons on whose credit the contract was made—all that occurred being that defts., known by pltf. to be acting as agents for the captain & owners of the ship, agreed with pltf. to carry certain of their goods on board the ship to Calcutta. Defts. did not at the time of the contract in terms say that they contracted only as agents. Pltf. did not know the names of the owners, nor the captain, nor had they any further or other knowledge of the latter than that which his designation by his office of master of the ship conveyed.—Held: In the absence of anything more than knowledge that defts. were acting as agents of the master & owners of a ship in the Roads, a decision declaring the agents liable was strictly in accordance with English law.—PATER v. GORDON (1872), 7 Mad. 82.—IND.

2526 ii. ———.]—Notepaper headed with principal's name.]—Defender, S., was appointed sales manager for two cos., under separate agreements, in which each co. respectively authorised him to appoint travellers at its expense. Thereafter defender employed pursuer by a letter in the following terms: "I beg to confirm arrangement made with you this day, & appoint you as representative for the two cos. Yours truly, S." The letter was written on notepaper bearing as a heading the trade name & address of one of the cos. Pursuer having raised an action against defender for payment of commission:—Held: defender was personally liable, in respect that the letter was signed by defender in his own name without qualification, & that it contained no indication that he did not intend to bind himself as principal.—STEWART v. SHANNESSEY (1900), 2 F. 1288.—SCOT.

2526 iii. ———.]—Indorsement that agent was "agent" for named principal.]—Deft., being indebted to pltf., by an indenture reciting his indebtedness, & that he had agreed with pltf. for the repayment of the sum due within six months from date, with interest, conveyed to pltf. certain lands, habendum in fee. Proviso that pltf., if the debt was duly paid, would reconvey, but there was no covenant for payment by deft. Indorsed on the indenture was a deed poll executed by pltf., stating the debt thereby secured to be the proper money of L., & that pltf.'s name was only introduced therein as agent for L., & in consideration of the trust, & of Ss., he absolutely assigned all interest in the lands in the indenture, as well as the indenture, to L.—Held: it was not open to deft. to deny that he was at the date of the indenture indebted to pltf., who could sue in his own name.—ALLNUTT v. RYLAND (1861), 11 C. P. 300.—CAN.

h. ———.]—As agreeing "for owners of"—Named ship.]—Pltf. by charterparty contracted to let a ship to defts. upon certain terms. The first clause of the charterparty stated that pltf. "agreed as agents for owners of the ship," & subsequent clauses provided that the owners should bind themselves to receive the cargo on board, & that the master on behalf of the owners should have a lien on the cargo for freight, etc. The charterparty was signed by pltf. & defts. in their own names. Pltf. sued defts. for breach of the charterparty in refusing to load the ship.—Held: pltf. had contracted as agents, & were not entitled to sue. If a contract made by a person who is an agent is worded so as, when taken as a whole, to convey to the other contracting party the notion that the agent is contracting in that character, he cannot sue or be sued on the contract.—MACKINNON, MACKENZIE & CO. v. LANG, MOIR & CO. (1881), 1 L. R. 5 Bom. 581.—IND.

k. ———.]—As "authorised by"—Named principal.]—Pltf. signed in his own name an agreement to transfer his brought by D. against A. for breach of the agreement in not completing the sale the judge who tried the cause left it to the jury to say whether the second note was a correction of a mistake in the first, & told the jury that if deft. entered into a written contract in his own name, he could not afterwards set up that he was acting as broker merely & that, although known to be a broker, if he signed the contract in his own name he was liable:—Held: (1) this was no misdirection: (2) evidence that it was the custom in Liverpool to send in brokers' notes without disclosing the principal's name was properly rejected.—MAGEE v. ATKINSON & TOWNLEY (1837), 2 M. & W. 440; Murph. & H. 115; 6 L. J. Ex. 115; 150 E. R. 830.

2527. ———.]—Where brokers sold goods by auction, & being under advances to their principal, gave an invoice in their own name, & received the price:—Held: they were concluded by their invoice, & were not at liberty to set up that they only sold as brokers & that the buyer knew, or had the means of knowing, that they did not sell as principals.—JONES v. LITTLEDALE (1837), 6 Ad. & El. 486; 1 Nev. & P. K. B. 677; Will. Woll. & Dav. 240; 6 L. J. K. B. 169; 112 E. R. 186.

2528. ———.]—Attorneys, assignees of a mtge. of lands, brought an action in the name of the mtgee. against W., the mtgor., for the principal & interest, & W. pleaded. The attorneys had obtained from E., their client, a loan to W. on further mtge. of same lands, & had brought an action for E. against W. for the principal & interest due on that mtge., & W. had pleaded. They had also obtained a verdict against W. & a certificate for execution in an action of debt at their own suit. D., an attorney, but not employed as such by mtgor. (the brother of D.'s professional agent), wrote to plffs. promising that, if they would not issue execution for two months, the pleas should be withdrawn & judgment suffered by default in the first two actions, & further undertaking as follows: "I shall pay all the principal, interest, & costs through a friend of mine in London, to whom a transfer of all the securities you have will have to be made. The cash will be ready, if the securities will, on the 16th inst." Plffs. agreed, & forbore issuing execution, but the party referred to by D. did not advance the money:—Held: (1) D. was personally liable in assumpsit on the above undertaking for the amount claimed by plffs. in the first two actions; (2) they were sufficiently interested in the recovery of the sum due to E., their client, to sue on D.'s agreement in respect of it in their own names.—*HARPER v. interests in certain premises, etc., to deft. for a certain consideration. As deft. failed to complete the consideration, pltf. brought an action. In the agreement, following pltf.'s name, the words "as authorised by J. S." appeared, & deft. contended that pltf. was agent of a disclosed principal, & not entitled to sue:—Held: the evidence showed that the words in question merely meant that the concurrence of

J. S. might be necessary to the transfer, he being the licensee of the hotel, & were not intended to limit the rights or liabilities of pltf., who was entitled to sue.—WOOD v. CUTTS (1879), 5 V. L. R. 275.—AUS.

The vendors' solr. required B. to sign the agreement, & declined to substitute the name of C. Communications afterwards took place between vendors' solr. & C. with reference to the title. Vendors afterwards brought their bill against B. & C. for specific performance of the contract:—Held: supposing B. to be the agent of C., yet the signature of B. to the contract made him personally liable to perform it.—*CHADWICK v. 2530. ———.]—In an action for damages for loss of freight & for demurrage it was proved that defts., who carried on business at O., made a contract with pltf.'s agent in L., in the form of a letter signed by defts. & containing these clauses: "Steamer to load end of Nov. or early Dec., charterers having the option of cancelling if she is not ready to receive cargo by Dec. 12 next. Steamer to be loaded on usual berth terms, 2 per cent. commission to us":—Held: defts. were liable as principals, as they had contracted in their own names without any qualification.—HICK v. TWEEDY & Co. (1890), 63 L. T. 765; 7 T. L. R. 144; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 599.

2531. ——— As acting "on the part of"—Named principal.—A written agreement was expressed to be made "Between C., for & on behalf of N., of the first part, & T. of the second part." By it "C., on the part of" N., agreed to let to T. certain premises for a term of years, T. paying rent to "C. for the use of" N.; no auction to be held on the premises without the consent in writing of "C. on the part of" N.; T. to take a lease & execute a counterpart thereof "when called upon to do so by C. on the part of" N. C. signed this in his own name. N. did not sign it. In an action by T. against C. for not completing the lease:—Held: (1) it sufficiently appeared to be the intention of the parties that C. should himself contract; (2) he was personally liable.—TANNER v. CHRISTIAN (1855), 1 E. & B. 591; 24 L. J. Q. B. 91; 1 Jur. N. S. 519; 3 W. R. 204; 3 C. L. R. 1306; 119 E. R. 217.

2532. ——— As "consignee & agent" of named ship "on behalf of"—Named principal.—The consignee & agent of a vessel chartered for a specific voyage entered into an agreement with the captain, describing himself as "consignee & agent of the above brig & cargo, on behalf of M., merchant, of L.," the agreement stating that "it is witnessed that the said parties agreed that the vessel should go to another port, there discharge the remainder of her cargo, & receive a full & complete homeward cargo at the same freight as she would have got had she proceeded on the voyage stipulated in the charterparty," & then signed the agreement in his

R. subsequently conveyed the equity of redemption to L. In an action against L. on his undertaking to pay the charge:—Held: he was not personally liable.—ARMSTRONG v. LYE (1897), 24 A. B. & B. or such barrister as you may think fit for resisting Mr. K.'s proof under the commission, & of investigating the accounts of the assignees at the meeting of the 18th inst. I hereby undertake to bear & pay on behalf of these creditors two-thirds of the expenses incident thereto accordingly." The meeting being afterwards adjourned, A. wrote to B. another letter, in which he said, "I shall have no objection to bear as before the proportion of expense of the barrister attending the meeting stated in your letter":—Held: A. personally liable for the proportion of the expenses.—HALL v. Ry. Co., at G., goods to be taken on board at Liverpool at ship's expense," & the agreement was signed, "J. & R. W., C.":—Held: C. personally bound 2538. — — — — —.]—Deft., an ironfounder & machinest at Bury, having set up some mill machinery at R., in France, for a French mill-owner there, was requested by him to engage an overlooker to manage the machinery, & a written agreement was drawn up & signed by deft. & pltf. at Bury, in the following terms: "I hereby agree on behalf of P., R., France, to engage O. (pltf.) overlooker, at the rate of £4 per week with travelling expenses there & back. The sum of 30s. per week to be paid to his wife every 14 days. (Signed) R. H." (deft.), "per J. H., O." Thereupon pltf. proceeded to R., receiving £10 at starting from deft., & entered on his duties as overlooker at the mill there, & continued there in that capacity until, in consequence of a misunderstanding with P., the French millowner, he left & returned to England. During pltf.'s stay in France the 30s. was paid to his wife every fortnight by deft. at Bury, & upon his leaving France a sum of £12 was paid to him by deft.'s agent at R. to enable him to return to England. The remainder of his wages under the contract, except a balance of some £17, was regularly paid to him from time to time by the French millowner. For this balance he now sued deft.:—Held (KELLY, C.B., diss.): (1) the case was governed by Gadd v. Houghton (No. 2546, post), there being no distinction between the words "on account of" in that case & "on behalf of" in the present one; (2) these words being in the body of the contract it was immaterial that deft. signed the document in his own name without qualification, & he did not thereby render himself personally liable; (3) (KELLY, C.B.) there was a difference between the words "on account of" & "on behalf of," & looking at the terms of the contract & the facts of the case, deft. was personally liable.—OGDEN v. HALL (1879), 40 L. T. 751.

2539. — — — — — Unnamed principal.]—A charterparty entered into by a broker for a foreign principal provided that the loading was to take place in 14 days, or the master to receive £5 a day, & further provided for "demurrage" at the port of discharge at £5 a day. The charterparty contained a cesser clause as follows: "This charter being concluded by A. (the broker) on behalf of another party, it is agreed that all liability of the former shall cease as soon as he has shipped the cargo, the owners & master agreeing to rest solely on their lien on the cargo for freight & demurrage." The ship was delayed beyond the 14 days at the port of loading:—Held: the broker was liable, as, on the true construction of contract, the word "demurrage" in the cesser clause applied only to demurrage at the port of discharge.—PEDERSON v. 2540. — — — — — "The Thimble League."—In considering whether an agent is liable the whole document must be examined. The signature is only an element to be considered.

H., on behalf of a charitable society called the Thimble League, signed an agreement, without qualification, for the hire of a public hall for one week for a bazaar. In an action against a member of the Thimble League to recover the rent:—Held: (1) on the construction of the whole agreement, plffs. did not contract with H.; (2) the fact that his signature was unqualified was not sufficient to show that H. contracted personally.—ROYAL ALBERT HALL CORPN. v. WINCHILSEA (1891), 7 T. L. R. 362, C. A.

2541. — Company.—Plffs. recovered judgment against a co., & the chairman of the co. signed a document stating that in consideration of plffs. suspending proceedings against the co. he agreed "on behalf of" the co. to pay £75 in 3 days & the balance, including costs, in 3 months:—Held: (1) this agreement was made by the chairman as agent for the co.; (2) he was not personally liable upon it.—*AVERY (W. & T.), LTD. v. 2546. — As acting "on account of"—Named principal.—Fruit brokers in Liverpool gave a fruit merchant the following sold note: "We have this day sold to you on account of M. & Co., Valencia, 2,000 cases Valencia oranges, of the brand M. & Co., at 12s. 9d. per case free on board . . ." & signed it without any addition. The purchaser having brought an action against the brokers for non-delivery of the oranges:—Held: (1) the words "on account of M. & Co." showed an intention to make the foreign principals, & not the brokers, liable; (2) the brokers were not liable upon the contract.—*GADD v. 2547. — "As agent" for—Named principal.—K., by letter, entered into a contract with plffs. for sale of 300 tons of muriate of potash. At commencement of the letter K. said he bought "as agent," for defts. Delivery at the rate of 50 tons per month, etc. Cash payment to be made by K. 11 days from receipt of bills of lading. A commission of 1 per cent. to be paid to K. The letter was not signed by him as agent:—Held: on the true construction of the contract, whatever K.'s position might be, defts. was the buyer, & liable to plffs.—CONCORDIA CHEMISCHE FABRIK AUF ACTIEN v. SQUIRE (1876), 34 L. T. 824, C. A.

2548. — "As agents for charterers."—A charterparty was entered into between plffs., shipowners, & defts., "as agents for charterers." It was signed by defts. without any qualification, but contained a clause that the ship was to load "from the agents of the freighters," & a cesser clause that, the charter being entered into on behalf of others, all liability of charterers should cease on completion of loading & payment of advance. In an action for breach of the charterparty, defts. by their statement of defence denied their personal liability. On demurrer:—Held: defts. liable on the charterparty.—*HOUGH & CO. v. 2549. — “As agent.”—R., mtgee. of a farm belonging to B. & collector of the rents thereof for B., but not in possession of the land, entered into an agreement under seal, expressed to be made between R. “as agent, hereinafter called ‘the landlord,’” & S., “hereinafter called ‘the tenant,’” whereby R. let the farm to S. from year to year. The agreement provided that the tenant should consume on the premises all hay & fodder, spread upon the land all manure & compost produced on the farm, not sell off any hay or fodder, & at the end of the tenancy leave all manure & compost. R. sold & conveyed the farm to C., who brought an action to restrain S. from acting in contravention of the above-mentioned provision:—Held: (1) on the construction of the agreement, & having regard to the surrounding circumstances, the demise was by mtgee.; (2) in a demise under seal by a mtgee. the description of the person letting “as agent” was not sufficient to prevent the demise operating on the legal estate vested in him; (3) C., as assignee of the reversion, could enforce any covenant in the lease which ran with the reversion.—CHAPMAN v. SMITH, [1907] 2 Ch. 97; 76 L. J. Ch. 394; 96 L. T. 662; 51 Sol. Jo. 428.

2550. — As “acting for the owners of” — Named ship.—On June 24 defts., shipbrokers, wrote to plffs. offering them “roon” in a named ship for certain cement & stone from London to Callao. On June 25 defts. chartered the ship for the voyage, the charterparty providing, inter alia, that the whole ship should be at the disposal of the charterers, except the space necessary for the crew & stores; that the master & owners should give the same attention to the cargo, & in every respect be responsible to all whom it might concern, as if the ship were loaded at her berth by & for the owners independently of the charter; that the master was to sign bills of lading at any rate of freight the charterers might require without prejudice to the charterparty; & that the charterers’ responsibility, except for freight, should cease on the vessel being loaded. On June 26 an agreement was made between defts., acting for the owners of the ship, & plffs., that the former should receive on board cement & stone at certain freight from London to Callao, & sail on a certain day: freight to be paid one half on signing bills of lading, & the remainder on final discharge at Callao. The cement & stone were shipped, the half freight paid, & the master signed bills of lading making the remainder payable at Callao. On her voyage the ship, being damaged by bad weather, put into an intermediate port, where the vessel was condemned. The master being unable to forward plffs.’ goods to their destination, sold them. In an action against defts. for their value, the jury found that the sale was not justified:—Held: on the construction of the above documents, there was no contract between plffs. & defts. for the carriage of the goods from London to Callao.—WAGSTAFF v. ANDERSON (1880), 5 C. P. D. 171; 49 L. J. Q. B. 485; 42 L. T. 720; 28 W. R. 856; 4 Asp. M. L. C. 290.

2551 i. — As “trustees of” church.—In an action by a livery stable keeper for the amount of an account for hire of horse & buggy, the question was as to the personal responsibility of two defts., who were trustees of the Protestant Union Church & school house at C. The demand was based chiefly on the following letter written by defts. to plff.: “By a motion passed at a meeting of the trustees of the Protestant Union

Church & school house at C. it was proposed by A. [one of defts.], & seconded by B. [other deft.], that W. is hereby instructed to open an account with S. [plff.] for hire of horse & buggy. S. being requested to include the account already incurred by W. in that against the trustees. In the face of that resolution we hereby request you will supply W. with a suitable horse & buggy at the rate already agreed upon, the payment of your account being made by the trustees next Sept.” The letter was signed by defts. without any addition to their names:—Held: they were not personally responsible.—STARR v. McDONALD (1881), 4 L. N. 301.—CAN.

2552. — As acting “for” — Named principal.—In assumpsit upon a contract to use a phaeton with due care, with an indebitatus count for hire, deft. at the trial produced an agreement in these terms: “B. [def’t.] agrees to hire a phaeton, etc., for W. Provided W. should be disposed to buy it, the price is 59 guineas for the lot, as per agreement between B. & L. [plff.]”:—Held: B. was properly sued as principal.—LYELL v. BROWN (1848), 12 L. T. O. S. 146.

2553. — As selling “to my principals.”—Deft., a broker, signed & sent to plffs. a note of a contract in the following terms: “I have this day sold by your order & for your account to my principals 5 tons of . . . anthracene. . . . B.” In an action for goods sold & delivered:—Held: in the absence of usage making deft. personally liable, deft. was not personally liable upon the contract.—SOUTHWELL v. BOWDITCH, No. 2583, post.

2554. — As “three of the directors” — Loan “to the company.”—By agreement between the T. Co. & plffs., defts., describing themselves as “we the undersigned, three of the directors,” agreed to repay £500 advanced by plff. “to the co.,” & assigned to plff. as security for the advance certain “machines & tools,” the property of the co. After hearing parol evidence to explain the ambiguity of the agreement:—Held: defts. were personally liable to repay the £500.—MCCOLLIN v. GILPIN, No. 2598, post.

2555. — As selling for named foreign principal.—Deft., agent for Russian timber merchants at Riga, signed a letter, addressed to plff., saying, “My Riga shippers will supply the timber at, etc. [stating terms]. I enclose sale note, which, if you accept, please sign & return to me, & I will then send you sold note,” & enclosing the contract note in this form: “L. Mar. 19, 1891, bought by C. G. & Co. of J. Y. & Co., of Riga, through the agency of Mr. L. [with particulars of goods]”:—Held: L. had not contracted so as to be personally liable.—GLOVER v. LANGFORD (1892), 8 T. L. R. 628.

2556. — As “trustees of” union — Authority to publish libel.—Defts., trustees of a union, agreed with B. that B. should print & publish in a newspaper certain articles to be sent by defts.' union to him. In the agreement defts. described themselves as trustees of the union, but signed without any limitation:—Held: they were personally liable for libels in the articles.

It is clearly decided law that where a person who is a party to a written contract is described therein as an agent, & it is signed by him not as agent, but in his own name without any further addition or limitation, he is personally liable under such contract. (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—RAPKINS v. HALL (1894), 10 T. L. R. 466, C. A.

2557. — As agent—Principal "will send contracts."—Deft., a cornbroker at Liverpool, sold pltf's two cargoes of maize, & signed the following memorandum, addressed to pltf's: "I have this day sold to you two cargoes of French maize, from the port of Bordeaux, at 33s. 3d. per 480 lb. cost & freight, payment in London, less 60 days' interest & £1 per cent. brokerage. W., London, will send contracts." W. sent contracts, omitting the stipulation for brokerage, & describing the maize as sold on behalf of T., of Bordeaux, the real owner & shipper. The maize was shipped, & pltf's, in order to get possession of it, were obliged to pay the full amount without deducting brokerage:—Held: (1) deft. personally liable on the memorandum signed by him; (2) pltf's. were entitled to maintain an action for breach of the agreement that W. should send contracts in the terms of the memorandum.—REID & GLASGOW v. DREAPER (DRAPER) (1861), 6 H. & N. 813; 30 L. J. Ex. 268; 4 L. T. 650; 7 Jur. N. S. 1125; 158 E. R. 335.

2558. — As agent for owners—Bill of lading incorporating charterparty.—A charterparty provided that the captain should sign bills of lading at any rate of freight without prejudice to the charterparty. A cargo having been loaded, bills of lading, incorporating all the terms of the charterparty, were presented by the charterers, who were the shippers & also the consignees of the cargo, to the master for his signature & were signed by him:—Held: the master had signed the bills of lading merely as agent for the owners & could not maintain an action against the charterers, as receivers of the cargo, for freight.—REPETTO v. MILLAR'S KARRI & JATRAH FORESTS, LTD., [1901] 2 K. B. 306; 70 L. J. K. B. 561; 84 L. T. 836; 49 W. R.

deft. entered into a written agreement for the erection of a house for £1,400. The agreement was made between "H., estate agent, of the one part, & J. W. & A. W., contractors, of the other part." It was signed by the parties & duly witnessed. After the signatures there followed this statement: "I hereby declare that I am the authorised agent of P., upon whose land the above house is to be erected.—H." Pltf's, in a letter produced & alleged to have been sent to deft., made the following reference to this memorandum: "Referring to the memo. which we note you have written on the back of the agreement of contract, it is understood between us that you did this, as you explained when handing us our copy, to protect us, as we are building a house for you on land owned, we believe, by P." Deft. denied receipt of this letter. The subsequent dealings of the parties showed that deft. was treated as the principal:—Held: deft. liable as principal under the contract.—WILSON v. HARCOURT (1911), 31 N. Z. L. R. 316.—N.Z.

The bought note put in evidence by pltf. was, "Bought this day for account of L., my principal, fifty casks, etc. (Signed) R., broker":—Held: the action could not be maintained in the name of pltf., there being no note in writing to take the case out of Stat. Frauds, the note produced stating the tallow to be sold by pltf. as broker, & not, as averred in the declaration, by pltf. himself.—RAYNER v. INTORNE (1825), 2 C. & P. 145; Ry. & M. 325.

Pltf., a broker, signed & delivered to defts. a bought note for cotton in the following form: "I have this day sold you on account of T., etc. (Signed) F., broker":—Held: he was not a contracting party, & could not sue defts. for breach of the contract in refusing to accept the cotton.—*FAIRLIE v. Defts. signed the contract with the addition of the word "brokers," & were acting as agents. Some time after the contract was signed, defts. named their principals. The cargo proved to be of inferior quality. It was alleged that a usage existed that a broker upon naming his principals ceased to be liable on the contract; but the jury found the alleged usage did not exist:—Held: defts. were personally liable on the contract.

"By & on behalf of the owners" of named ship—Described in document—Without qualification.—Defts. let a ship to pltf. for a certain term, & signed a charterparty "by & on behalf of the owners of the ship." 2563. "On account of" principal—Described in document—Without qualification.]—B. W. & Co., who had contracted with a colliery co. for 10,000 tons of coal to be delivered over a period of three months at a spout on the Tyne, "the turn to be mutually agreed upon," proposed to charter a foreign ship for conveyance of twenty-nine keels to Elsinore, & tendered to the master a charterparty which stipulated for demurrage in unloading the ship, but made no provision for detention in loading her. The master declined to sign such charter without an assurance that there should be no undue detention of his ship; & thereupon B. W. & Co. obtained from deft. (a clerk employed by several colliery cos. to arrange the turns for loading) the following undertaking: "I undertake to load the ship V. twenty-nine keels with B. coals in ten colliery working days, etc.—On account of B. Colliery, II." This memorandum (which made no mention of the person contracted with) was communicated by the charterers to the master of the V., who thereupon accepted the charter. The vessel being detained in loading beyond the stipulated ten days, the master called upon deft. to pay him £45 for demurrage. Deft. repudiated all liability, but ultimately offered to pay the master £20. Deft. had no notice of the charter. In an action by the master to recover £45 for demurrage from deft.:—Held: (1) upon these facts a jury was warranted in finding that the undertaking to load within ten days was a contract between the master & deft.; (2) there was sufficient consideration for it; (3) the contract was with deft. personally & not as agent.—*WEIDNER v. 2564. "For" principal—Described in document—Without qualification.]—A trader, carrying on business as M. & Co., ordered goods of pltf., & before their delivery executed an inspectorship deed, of which defts. were inspectors. Pltf. afterwards wrote a note, addressed to the debtor, informing him that the goods were ready for delivery, & defts. replied requesting him to send the goods, & signing "for M. & Co." Pltf. sent the goods, & default being made in payment, sued defts. for the price. The inspectorship deed gave debtor licence to carry on his business for 6 months under the control of the inspectors, who had power to put an end to the deed. The inspectors were to receive all the proceeds, pay current expenses (including salaries, rent, & plant & materials for the purposes of the business), & out of the surplus pay dividends to the creditors. They took no share of the profits, & had no power to take the management of the business to the exclusion of the debtor:—Held: (1) defts. having expressly signed the order "for M. & Co.," they could only be liable as the real principals for the time being; (2) the deed did not constitute them the masters or real principals of debtor in carrying on the business; (3) on the above facts, there was no evidence to go to the jury of their liability; (4) pltf. could only look for the payment to "M. & Co." & to the trust in the deed for the payment of current expenses.—*REDFATH v. In the body of the charter defts. were described as follows: "It is this day mutually agreed between H. & Co., of N., for owners of the good ship R." Defts. signed the charterparty at the foot as follows: "For owners, H. & Co." A cargo was loaded on board the ship & the master signed a bill of lading for same, stating he had received it in good condition, etc. The cargo was ultimately delivered to pltfs., & was found on delivery to be injured to the extent of £50. In an action brought by pltfs. against defts. for the damage in a cty. ct. three letters which had passed between pltfs. & defts. & their solrs. were admitted in evidence, & the judge decided defts. were liable as principals:—Held: (1) there was evidence to support the decision of the cty. ct. judge that defts. were liable as principals; (2) the charterparty was to be construed as explained by the letters; (3) the letters were properly admitted in evidence.—ADAMS v. HALL (1877), 37 L. T. 70; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 496.

2566. "For" principal "as agents" principal—Described in document—As agents to "principal."—A charterparty, made in London, between pltf. shipowner, & defts., "as agents to F., of A., merchants & charterers," was signed "for D. [pltf.] owner, H. G. as agent. For F., of A. G. Bros. [defts.] as agents." The charterparty was partly written & partly printed, the words "merchants" & "charterers" being printed, & in the plural, throughout it. Defts., merchants in London, acted in England as agents for F., a native of Africa & residing at A. in that country. By the charterparty pltf.'s ship was chartered for a voyage from London to Africa & back, & freight was made payable on delivery of the return cargo:—Held: defts. were not personally liable, as principals, on the charterparty.

The form of the charterparty & mode of signature, taken together, are decisive to show defts. did not bind themselves by the contract as principals. It would require extremely plain words in the body of the contract to control the effect of that mode of signature, & no such words are to be found there. The only argument that can be relied upon by applt. is that the words "merchants" & "charterers" are in the plural; but this evidently happened by mistake, & the words occur, moreover, in the printed part of the charterparty (WILLIAMS, by pltf. The co. had been duly incorporated, & pltf. had received £350 from them on account of his work:—Held: deft. was not personally liable.—JOHNSON v. HAMILTON (1856), 13 U. C. R. 211.—CAN.

q. "Superintendent for building gasworks" at city for principals—Described in document—As superintendent of city.]—By a contract between "D. of the first part, & H., superintendent of the city of Winnipeg, of the second part," it was agreed that D. should build & set up the plant of a gasworks in Winnipeg. H. signed the contract & appended to his signature the words: "Superintendent for Building Gas Works at Winnipeg for W. Merriek, of Oswego, N.Y., & others":—Held: H. was personally liable upon the contract.—DOIG v. HOLLEY (1884), 1 Man. L. R. 61.—CAN.

r. "Trustee"—Described in document—Without qualification.]—An assignee of an insolvent estate signed an undertaking in his own name, writing after his name the word "trustee":—Held: he was personally bound, not having disclosed that he signed for a principal or for an estate bound by his signature.—COURT v. STEWART (1889), 3 L. N. 414.—CAN.

2567. "For" principal "agents"—Described in document—Without qualification.—To a declaration on a charterparty alleging as a breach a refusal by defts. to load a cargo, defts. pleaded as an equitable defence that they entered into the charterparty solely as agents for D. & Co.; & that when defts. signed the charterparty it was agreed & understood between pltf. & defts. that defts. were only to sign the charter as such agents, so as to bind D. & Co., & were not to make themselves liable as principals for the performance of the charter; that they signed as follows: "For D. & Co. of M., H. & Co. agents,"—defts. & pltf. bonâ fide believing at the time the charter was made that defts., having so signed, would not be liable to be sued on the charter, notwithstanding the charter in the body thereof professed to be made between pltf. as owner of the one part, defts. as freighters of the other; that defts. had power to bind D. & Co., & that pltf. was inequitably taking advantage of the mistake in drawing the charter:—Held: the plea showed a good equitable answer to the action. Semble: the plea was a good answer at law (WILLES, J.).—WAKE v. HARROP (1862), 1 H. & C. 202; 31 L. J. Ex. 451; 7 L. T. 96; 8 Jur. N. S. 845; 10 W. R. 626; 1 Mar. L. C. 247; 158 E. R. 850, Ex. Ch.

2568. "Agents"—Described in document—"As agents for" the charterers.—By a charterparty, signed by defts., "agents," & entered into between pltf. as owners of a ship, & defts. "as agents for" the charterers, who were resident in Spain, it was agreed that the ship should proceed to J. & there load in regular turn from the agents of the charterers a full & complete cargo. It was also agreed that all liability of defts. "in every respect & as to all matters & things, as well before & during as after the shipping of the cargo, shall cease as soon as they have shipped the cargo." The cargo was loaded & shipped, but not in regular turn. In an action brought for not so loading in regular turn:—Held: defts. were protected from liability by the clause above set out, they having loaded & shipped the cargo before the commencement of the action.—MILVAIN v. PEREZ (1861), 3 E. & E. 495; 30 L. J. Q. B. 90; 3 L. T. 736; 7 Jur. N. S. 336; 9 W. R. 269; 1 Mar. L. C. 32; 121 E. R. 528.

2570. ——— "As agent & on behalf of" principal.—Where a contract in writing for the sale of goods is entered into by one who describes himself as agent, & as making the contract "as agent & on behalf of" his principal, naming him, the party so making the contract is not personally liable. In each case it is a question of intention, to be gathered from the terms of the contract; & whether the principal be an Englishman resident in England or a foreigner residing abroad makes no difference.—GREEN v. KOPKE, No. 2694, post.

2571. "By authority of & as agents for" principal—Described in document—Without qualification.—A charterparty stated that it was agreed between L., owner of the ship N., then at Genoa, & "R. & F., of London, merchants," that the ship should proceed to T. & there load from the merchants' factors a cargo "to be brought to & taken from alongside at merchants' risk & expense, which the merchants hereby bind themselves to ship," & should proceed to Memel, & deliver on paying freight; "thirty running days to be allowed the merchants" for loading & discharging & ten days for demurrage at £4 per day. The charterparty was signed "by authority of, & as agents for, S., of Memel," R. & F. In an action by L. against R. & F., the declaration set out the charterparty & averred that S. was a foreigner, not a British subject, residing beyond the seas, to wit at Memel, & claimed from defts. demurrage & damages for detention ultra. Plea that the agreement was entered into by defts. by the authority of, & for & on behalf of, & as agents for, S., & not otherwise; that he was named to & known by pltf. as being defts. principal at the time the agreement was made. On demurrer:—Held: pltf. entitled to judgment, the terms of the charterparty showing that defts. contracted personally.—LENNARD v. ROBINSON, No. 2695, post.

2576. Agent acting for unnamed charterer.—Defts., acting as agents for L., chartered a ship for conveyance of a cargo of currants from the Ionian

Sect. 1.—In regard to contracts: Sub-sect. 1, B. (b) i., ii., iii. & iv. & (c) i.]

Islands. The charterparty was expressed to be made & was signed by defts. as "agents to merchants," the name of the principal not being disclosed:—Held: evidence was admissible, in an action by the shipowners against defts. upon the charterparty, of a trade usage by which, if the name of the principal was not disclosed within a reasonable time, the agents themselves were personally liable.—HUTCHINSON v. TATHAM (1873), L. R. 8 C. P. 482; 42 L. J. C. P. 260; 20 L. T. 103; 22 W. R. 18.

2577. Broker acting for undisclosed principal—Oil trade.—D. & Co., brokers employed by S. to purchase oil, dealt with T. & M., brokers, employed by pltf. to sell oil, without either brokers disclosing the names of their principals. D. & Co. delivered to T. & M. a note as follows: "Sold this day for T. & M. to our principal ten tons of oil," specifying the terms & price. The note was signed "D. & Co., brokers." D. & Co. did not disclose the name of their principal S. till after the lapse of an unreasonable time, when S. had become insolvent. In an action by pltf. against D. & Co. for not accepting the oil, pltf. proved a usage in the trade that when a broker purchased without disclosing the name of his principal he was liable to be looked to as principal:—Held: (1) evidence of the usage was admissible as not contradicting the written instrument, but explaining its terms or adding a tacitly implied incident; (2) the action lay.—*DALE v. 2578. — Wool trade.—A usage in the wool trade in Liverpool that, when a broker is employed to buy wool, he may either contract in the name of his principal, or, at the request of the seller (without communicating the fact to his principal), make himself personally responsible for the price:—Held: a good & reasonable usage.—*CROPPER v. 2579. — Fruit trade.—Defts., M. & W., fruit brokers in London, employed by pltf., merchants in London, to sell for them, gave the following contract note addressed to pltf.: "We have this day sold for your account to our principal" so many tons of raisins, "M. & W., brokers." Defts. principal having accepted part of the raisins & not the rest, pltf. brought an action on the contract against defts., & they sought to make defts. personally liable by giving evidence that in the London fruit trade, if brokers did not give the names of their principals in the contract, they were held personally liable, although they contracted as brokers for a principal, & evidence was also given of a similar usage in the London colonial market:—Held: (1) evidence of the usage in same trade was admissible as not inconsistent with the written contract; (2) evidence of a similar usage in the colonial market was admissible, being evidence in a similar trade in same place, & as tending to corroborate evidence as to existence of such usage in the fruit trade.—FLEET v. MURTON (1871), L. R. 7 Q. B. 126; 41 L. J. Q. B. 49; 26 L. T. 181; 20 W. R. 97.

ST. KATHERINE'S DOCKS CO.* (1877), 5 Ch. D. 195; 46 L. J. Ch. 335; 36 L. T. 233.

2581. — Hop trade.—Defts., hop brokers, gave pltf. the following sold note: "Sold by O. & T. [defts.] to P., Sons & Co., for & on account of owner, 100 bales . . . hops . . . O. & T." In an action for non-delivery of hops according to sample, pltf. sought to make defts. personally liable on the above contract & tendered evidence to show that, by usage of the hop trade, brokers who did not disclose the names of their principals at the time of making the contract were personally liable upon it as principals, although they contracted as brokers for a principal. No request was made by pltf. to defts. to name their principal:—Held: (1) the usage gave a remedy against the brokers as well as against the principals; (2) it was not in contradiction of the written contract; (3) evidence of the usage was properly admitted at the trial.—PIKE v. ONGLEY (1887), 18 Q. B. D. 708; 56 L. J. Q. B. 373; 35 W. R. 534; 3 T. L. R. 549, C. A.

2583. — Custom must be proved.—Pltf. sought to make deft., as broker, liable upon the following sold note he had sent to them: "I have this day sold by your order, & for your account, to my principals about five tons of pressed anthracene. . . . B."—Held: (1) as there was no usage proved which would govern such contract, it must be interpreted literally; (2) upon a strict interpretation of its terms the broker could not be held personally liable.—SOUTHWELL v. BOWDITCH (1876), 1 C. P. D. 374; 45 L. J. Q. B. 630; 35 L. T. 196; 24 W. R. 838, C. A.

2584. — Custom inconsistent with arbitration clause.—A written contract made by brokers on behalf of undisclosed principals for sale of hides provided that, "if any difference or dispute shall arise under this contract, it is hereby mutually agreed between sellers & buyers that same shall be settled by selling brokers, whose decision in writing shall be final & binding on both sellers & buyers." In an action against the brokers in respect of inferior hides delivered under the contract, buyers claimed against the brokers as principals by usage of the trade:—Held: evidence of a usage of the trade that a broker, who did not disclose his prinprincipal, was personally responsible for the performance of the contract & liable for the breach was rightly rejected, as such custom was inconsistent with the arbn. clause, which would, if the custom were incorporated, make the brokers judges in their own cause.—BARROW & BROTHERS v. DYSTER, NALDER & Co. (1884), 13 Q. B. D. 635; 51 L. T. 573; 33 W. R. 199, D. C.

2585. Broker acting for foreign principal—Custom inconsistent with contract.]—A contract for the sale of lumber was in the following form: "Contract by which our principals sell through the agency of S. & T., Ltd. [defts.], wood brokers, Liverpool, & M., G. & Co. [pltf.], of Liverpool, buy, the wood goods specified below, foreign measure, of the usual manufacture & of the classification of the surveyors at the port of shipment." The price was to include freight & insurance to South Africa. Then followed clauses in which reference was made to the "seller" & the "buyer," & there was an arbn. clause by which the parties agreed to submit all disputes arising out of the contract to arbn. in England, & in case any action was brought it was to be brought in England & determined according to English law. The contract was signed "By authority of our principals, S. & T., Ltd., C. T., managing director, as agents." The contract was made by defts. on behalf of foreign principals, who had given defts. authority to make the contract on their behalf so as to pledge their credit, but whose names were not disclosed to pltf. In an action to recover damages for breach of the contract pltf. sought to make defts. personally liable thereon under a general custom of merchants that, when an agent contracts on behalf of a foreign principal, he undertakes the liability of the principal:—Held: (1) assuming that the custom still existed, it was one by which the agent alone was liable, to the exclusion of the foreign principal; (2) the custom did not apply where it was inconsistent with the contract; (3) the contract sued on was one upon which the foreign principals were directly liable to pltf.; (4) the custom was inconsistent with the contract & was not applicable.—MILLER, GIBB & Co. v. SMITH & TYRER, LTD., [1917] 2 K. B. 141; 86 L. J. K. B. 1259; 116 L. T. 753; 33 T. L. R. 295; 22 Com. Cas. 320, C. A.

ii. As Defence to Action by Third Party against Agent personally.

2586. Broker contracting so as to be personally liable.]—L. & Co., brokers at Liverpool, sold hemp by auction at their rooms, & gave an invoice describing the goods as "bought of L. & Co.," & received part of the price, but failed to deliver the goods. An action being brought against them by purchaser for non-delivery & for money had & received, evidence was given tending to show that they sold as agents & had intimated that fact before & at the time of sale, & the principals being indebted to L. & Co., the invoice had been made out in their names, according to a custom of brokers in Liverpool, to secure the passing of the purchase-money through their hands:—Held: L. & Co. had made themselves responsible as sellers by the invoice.

Evidence is admissible, on behalf of one of the contracting parties, to show that the other was agent only, though contracting in his own name, & so to fix the real principal; but, if the agent contracts in such a form as to make himself personally responsible, he cannot afterwards, whether his principal was or was not known at the time of the contract, relieve himself from liability (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—JONES v. 2592. — Effect of Statute of Frauds.]—Stat. Frauds does not exclude parol evidence that a written contract for sale of goods, purporting to be made between A., seller, & B., buyer, was, on B.'s part, made by him only as agent for C., for the purpose of charging C.—WILSON v. 2593. — Jointly with agent.]—Defts. W. R. P. & Co., managers of the L. S. S. Co., signed an agreement as follows: "We hereby assign to you the sum of £1,500 out of the freight of the L. to secure an advance of a similar sum made by you this day by your acceptance to our drafts due Jan. 19, 1896. Should this freight become due before the due date of these bills we undertake to retire the bills under rebate, thus entitling us to collect the freight. Whatever happens we hereby specially undertake to put you in funds to meet your acceptances at least two clear days before maturity. (Signed) W. R. P. & Co." In an action against W. R. P. & Co. & the s.s. co. on the above agreement:—Held: (1) evidence was admissible to show that W. R. P. & Co. acted in the transaction as agents for & with the authority of the s.s. co., & that plts. dealt with them as such & gave credit to the s.s. co.; (2) the latter were liable.—KILLICK & Co. v. 2594. — Agent instructed not to disclose principal.]—Deft. commissioned C. to buy 100 bales of cotton, but particularly directed that his name should not be disclosed. C. bought the cotton for delivery on a future day of plts., who, unwilling to trust C., insisted on having the name of C.'s principal. C. having told plts. the cotton was for deft., but that deft. did not wish his name to transpire, plts. sold the cotton & delivered to C. a sold note, addressed to him personally, & received from him a corresponding bought note, signed by him personally, & not as agent. Plts. debited C. in their books. C. delivered to deft. an advice note, "Bought on your account of C. & D. one hundred bales," etc., which deft. accepted & retained without demur. Before the time for delivery cotton had fallen in price, & deft. settled differences with C. When the time for delivery arrived, cotton had still further fallen in price. Plts. called on C. to accept the cotton or pay the difference in price, threatening proceedings in case he failed to do so. On C.'s failure to do so plts. called on deft. to accept the cotton or pay the difference in price, & on his refusing to do so sold the cotton & brought an action to recover the difference between the contract price & the price realised:—Held: parol evidence was admissible to show that deft. was the principal in an action brought with a view to charging him as such; (2) the facts warranted the jury in finding plts. had never elected to treat C. as their debtor so as to preclude themselves from bringing the present action.—CALDER v. DOBELL, No. 2188, ante.

2595. — Agent contracting as "proprietor."]—By a contract in writing made "between R., hereinafter called the proprietor," & plts., it was agreed plts. should build two houses for the "proprietor," that the "proprietor" should pay them the agreed price, & all work & materials brought upon the ground should "at once become the property of the proprietor." The "proprietor" was referred to throughout the contract, which was signed by R. after the words "signed by the proprietor":—Held: parol evidence was not admissible to prove this contract was made by R. as agent for an undisclosed principal for the purpose of charging the principal, as such evidence would contradict the written contract.—FORMBY BROTHERS v. FORMBY (1910), 102 L. T. 116; 54 Sol. Jo. 269, C. A.

2597. —]—By an agreement under seal between A. & Co. & Y. & Co., Y. & Co. agreed to erect a certain building, & A. & Co. agreed to pay for the work done by instalments. One clause of the agreement was, "It is understood between the parties to this contract that . . . S. guarantees payment to Y. & Co. of all moneys due to them under this contract." S. held a power of attorney from A. & Co. & signed the agreement as follows: "p.p.a., A. & Co. S.," & the attestation clause stated that the agreement was signed & delivered "by A. & Co." Y. & Co. sued S. as guarantor, & evidence was given at the trial of statements by S. at the time of execution that he intended to sign on his own behalf as well as on that of A. & Co. A verdict was found for plts. S. moved for a new trial on the ground that he had not signed the guarantee:—Held: (1) evidence was admissible to show that S. had signed on his own behalf as well as on behalf of A. & Co.; (2) he was personally liable on the guarantee.—YOUNG v. SCHULER (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 651; 49 L. T. 546, C. A.

2591 ii. —.]—Where a purchase was made by a person in his own name, stated as follows: "In consideration for the advance of £500 paid by M. to the co., we the undersigned, three of the directors of the co., hereby agree to repay the sum of £500. We do hereby assign to M., as security for the advance of £500, the machines & tools. . . . As witness our hands, June 5, 1878. (Signed) A., B., C., directors; M." The machines & tools mentioned were the property of the co. In an action by M. against A., B., & C. to recover the £500:—Held: parol evidence was admissible to show whether it was intended debts should be personally liable upon the above agreement.—McCOLLIN v. GILPIN (1881), 6 Q. B. D. 516; 44 L. T. 914; 45 J. P. 828; 29 W. R. 408, C. A.

2599. — Sale of goods.—In an action on a written agreement purporting on the face of it to be made by debt. & subscribed by him for sale & delivery by him of goods above the value of £10, it is not competent for debt. to discharge himself, on an issue on the plea of non assumpsit, by proving that the agreement was really made by him by authority of, & as agent for, a third person, & that pltf. knew those facts at the time the agreement was made & signed.

Evidence cannot be given to show that the person who appears on the face of the instrument to be personally a contracting party is not such, since that would be to allow parol evidence to contradict the written agreement (PARKE, B.).—*HIGGINS v. 2603. — Mistake in charterparty.—To a declaration for freight due on a charterparty made between pltf. as owner, & debts., W. & Co., as merchants & freighters, debts. pleaded as an equitable defence that they entered into the charterparty solely as agents for M., & that before they signed the charterparty it was agreed & understood by & between pltf. & debts. that debts. were only to sign the charter as such agents & were not to make themselves liable as principals for payment of the freight to become due under such charter; that debts. signed as follows: "for M., of C., W. & Co. agents," debts. & pltf. bona fide believing at the time the charter was made that debts. having so signed would not be liable to be sued on the charter; that debts. had power to bind M., & pltf. was inequitably taking advantage of their mistake in drawing the charter. At the trial debt. who signed the charterparty on behalf of debts.' firm, deposed to a conversation between himself & pltf. at the time of signing the charter which supported the plea; pltf. admitted that debt. had correctly testified to what he, debt., had said, but affirmed that he, pltf., had said nothing, or if he had made any remark he could not then, at the trial, remember what he had said. The judge directed the jury that, if they believed debt. had at the time of signing expressed his intention not to render his firm personally liable by so doing, they were to find for debts., which they did. On motion for a new trial on the ground of misdirection, in so much as the judge should have gone on to tell the jury that they must find pltf. was an assenting party to debt.'s expression of his intention not to render his firm liable by his signature to the charter:—Held: the whole of the facts having been before the jury, the judge's direction was sufficient to bring before them the issue they had to decide.—COWIE v. WITT (1874), 23 W. R. 76.

2605. — Effect of use of agent's invoice form.—

It is competent to a person, whose name appears at the head of an invoice as vendor of certain goods, to show that he was not the seller, & that the invoice was only made out in those terms, & included those goods, for convenience of the real parties to the contract. Generally speaking, an invoice is only evidence of a contract, & not a contract per se.—HOLDING v. ELLIOTT (1860), 5 H. & N. 117; 29 L. J. Ex. 134; 1 L. T. 381; 8 W. R. 192; 157 E. R. 1123.

iii. To support Action by Principal against Third Party.

2606. Agent contracting as "owner."—The doctrine that a principal may come in & take the benefit of a contract made by his agent cannot be applied where the agent expressly describes himself as principal.

In assumpsit on a charterparty signed not by pltf. but by a third person, who in the contract described himself as "owner" of the ship:—Held: evidence not admissible to show such person contracted merely as pltf.'s agent.—HUMBLE v. HUNTER (1848), 12 Q. B. 310; 17 L. J. Q. B. 350; 11 L. T. O. S. 265; 12 Jur. 1021; 116 E. R. 885.

2607. Agent signing as principal in error.—Action by charterer on a charterparty. Defence that the charterparty was made between debt. & the T. Co.

misery note, as maker, in his private capacity in favour of M., who indorsed it to pltf. In an action by pltf. on the note, debt. alleged that he made it as president of a co., & also that he had arranged with M. that he was not to be made personally liable thereon, & further, that there was no consideration:—Held: debt. was liable on the note, there being nothing to show that it was binding on the co. The plea that he made the note as president, on the understanding that there was to be no recourse against him, was bad, as it attempted to set up a verbal arrangement contrary to what the signature to the note would import. Such verbal understanding was inadmissible; otherwise there would be no safety in taking notes or bonds of parties.—EWART v. WELLER (1849), 5 U. C. R. 610.—CAN.

& not pltf. Reply that the agreement was between pltf. & deft.; that in drawing up the charterparty one of the T. Co.'s printed forms was used, on which the name of the co. appeared as charterers; that by mistake of pltf. & deft. the co.'s name was omitted to be struck out & remained instead of pltf.'s name; that the charterparty was signed by pltf. & deft. & it was intended & agreed that pltf. should be liable & entitled under it. On demurrer:—Held: (1) it was unnecessary that the charterparty should be rectified; (2) the reply was good.—BRESLAUER v. BARWICK (1876), 36 L. T. 52; 24 W. R. 901; 3 Asp. M. L. C. 355; 3 Char. Pr. Cas. 56.

2608. Agent contracting as principal.]—An agreement was made in 1911 between pltf's., manufacturers of motor tyres, covers, & tubes, & D. & Co., by which, in consideration of pltf's. allowing them certain discounts off their list prices for their goods, D. & Co. agreed to purchase such goods to a certain value, & not to sell or offer them to any person at prices less than the list prices except to persons in the motor trade to whom D. & Co. might allow similar discounts, & from whom in case of any sale to them D. & Co. were to obtain an undertaking similarly to observe pltf's.' list prices in any resale by them. Subsequently, in 1912, an agreement on a printed form, described in its heading as a price maintenance agreement to be entered into by trade purchasers of pltf's.' goods, was signed by defts., who were engaged in the motor trade, & directed & sent by them to D. & Co., which agreement provided that in consideration of D. & Co. allowing defts. discounts similar to those above referred to off pltf's.' list prices defts. would not sell or offer any of pltf's.' goods to any person at prices less than those mentioned in pltf's.' price list, & that defts. would pay to pltf's. a specified sum for every article sold or offered in breach of the agreement as liquidated damages, but without prejudice to any other rights which D. & Co. or pltf's. might have thereunder. In pursuance of this latter agreement, D. & Co. supplied to defts. goods of pltf's.' manufacture. Defts. subsequently sold certain of these articles to customers of their own at prices less than pltf's.' list prices. Pltf's. brought an action against defts. for breach of the agreement of 1912, claiming damages & an injunction:—Held: (1) the agreement of 1912 was on the face of it an agreement between defts. & D. & Co. only, to which pltf's., notwithstanding that they might derive some benefit from it, were no parties; (2) pltf's. were not entitled to show that the agreement had been made by D. & Co. on behalf of pltf's. as undisclosed principals, inasmuch as such a contention was inconsistent with the express terms of the agreement; (3) pltf's. were not entitled to judgment.—DUNLOP PNEUMATIC TYRE CO. v. SELFRIDGE & CO., LTD., [1915] A. C. 847; 84 L. J. K. B. 1680; 113 L. T. 386; 31 T. L. R. 399; 59 Sol. Jo. 430, H. L.

2609. Agent contracting as "charterer."]—A charterparty provided that the charterers were to give the owners not less than ten days' written notice at which port & on about which day the steamer would be redelivered. It also provided that, if the charterers should have reason to be dissatisfied with the conduct of the master, they were to be entitled to ask the owners to investigate it. There was also a provision that if the steamer could not be delivered by the cancelling date the charterers should, if required, declare whether they would cancel or take delivery. The arbn. clause provided that any dispute arising under the charterparty should be referred to arbn., one arbitrator to be nominated by the owners, & another by the charterers. In the charterparty certain persons were named "as charterers,":—Held: when the name of a person was inserted in a charterparty of that kind "as charterer," the statement that the person named was the charterer was a term of the contract, & not a mere description of the person of same character as the description "of the one part" or "of the other part."—ARGONAUT v. HANI (1917), 118 L. T. 176.

2610. Agent described as acting for "his clients."]—Correspondence & documents passed between H., solr. of pltf., & solrs. of defts., by which the terms of a lease to be granted by defts. were arranged. Pltf. alleged that the agreement was that the lease was to be granted to a co., to be formed by pltf., & that H. made the agreement on behalf of pltf. In the documents relied on by pltf. as constituting the memoranda of the alleged agreement, pltf. was not named or referred to as a contracting party, & the persons for whom H. purported to act were described as his "clients" (in the plural):—Held: (1) on the true construction of the documents & correspondence relied on, H. was not intended to be bound by the alleged contract; (2) parol evidence could not be given that pltf. was the principal of H., or that defts. knew him to be such.—LOVESEY v. PALMER, [1916] 2 Ch. 233; 85 L. J. Ch. 481; 114 L. T. 1033.

iv. As Defence to Action by Principal against Third Party.

2611. Apparent principal in fact agent—Fraud.]—Pltf. purchased a quantity of bark, the property of the Crown, from C., Crown surveyor. He afterwards represented to defts. that he was employed by C., on behalf of the Crown, to sell the bark at the previous year's prices, plus expenses of carting & ricking, which would not, with the prices, exceed £5 5s. per ton, & C. would send a correct invoice of the amount. Pltf. offered the bark to defts. on these terms, & requested them to sign a bought note, stating the price at £6 per ton, with discount of £2 per cent., & stated that they would not be called upon to pay more than the actual amount of such prices & expenses. On the faith of such representations defts. agreed to buy the bark from pltf., as agent of the Crown, on these terms, & signed a bought note, as requested by pltf., in which pltf. was named as vendor. Pltf. requested defts. to pay a deposit of £20 per cent. on the amount stated in the bought note to C., which defts. paid. Communications afterwards passed between pltf. & defts. in which pltf. treated the sale of the bark as a sale made by him as principal & at the actual price of £6 per ton. Insurance Co., of, etc., on account of C., loss, if any, payable to M., do make insurance, etc.:—Held: the contract on this policy was entered into with C., & M. was not insured, & could not sue on the policy. Semble: (1) the insertion in the policy of the words "for or in the name of all persons interested," etc., or "for whom it may concern," would have enabled M., on showing interest, to recover; (2) the words, "as broker" or "as agent," following after C.'s name, would have let in parol evidence to show the interest & right of an undisclosed principal, who could have sued on the policy.—*McCOLLUM v. t. Contract with agent as principal.]—Def't. purchased lumber from D., who claimed to be the owner. In reply by pltf., who owned the lumber:—Held: def't. could not set up as a defence that D. had authority from pltf. to sell the lumber for a certain price, def't. in purchasing having dealt with D. as the owner of the lumber, &

one of defts. & C., at which deft. told C. that the sale was made by pltf. as agent for the Crown, & the price inserted in the bought note was a nominal price only, & by the real arrangement defts. were to pay only the previous year's prices, plus the expenses. Upon this C. gave deft. a memorandum showing the price of the bark at the previous year's price, plus the expenses, & delivered the bark, receiving from defts. payment of the amount stated in the memorandum. In an action upon the contract embodied in the bought note, & also upon common counts, in which pltf. sought to recover the difference between the sum paid by defts. & the price according to the bought note:—Held: (1) parol evidence might be given to show that the verbal contract was the only real contract between the parties, & the bought note was not signed for the purpose of evidencing any contract; (2) even if pltf. was entitled to sue upon the written contract, that contract was voidable upon a plea of fraud; (3) the conduct of defts. did not amount to such adoption of the contract, after they knew the real facts of the case, as to estop them from setting up fraud; (4) payment to C. was a good defence under a plea of payment.—ROGERS v. HADLEY (1863), 2 H. & C. 227; 32 L. J. Ex. 241; 9 L. T. 292; 9 Jur. N. S. 898; 11 W. R. 1074; 159 E. R. 94.

Pltf. being retained on the list of contributories, paid a call made upon him; he was unable to recover this amount from transferee & brought an action for indemnity against deft. as C.'s principal:—Held: (1) this was an attempt to make an undisclosed principal liable upon a contract under seal with the agent as principal; (2) there was no privity of contract between pltf. & deft.; (3) deft. could not be liable.

2644. Agent indorsing bill.—A. in London acted as agent of B. & Co. in Paris for a small commission upon their general business. B. & Co. requested A. to remit them a bill on Portugal, which A. did, & indorsed it. The bill was dishonoured by non-acceptance:—Held: (1) A. was bound by his unqualified indorsement; (2) evidence to show that A. was acting merely as B. & Co.'s agent was not admissible:—*GOUPEY v. 2646. Agent accepting bill—"On behalf of" company.—A bill of exchange to pay to drawer's PART X. SECT. 1, SUB-SECT. 3.—A. (b).

2646 i. Agent accepting bill.—"For" distinguished from "per pro."—An acceptance in the words "for R., T. P." is to be governed by the general rule of law applicable to principal & agent, & is not equivalent, according to the law merchant, to the form "per pro. R., T. P." The former expression does not, like the latter, import a special & limited authority to do a specific act, nor does it put the drawer of a bill accepted in that form upon discovery whether the agent has exceeded his authority.—O'REILLY v. RICHARDSON (1865), 17 T. C. L. R. 74.—IR.

e. Agent drawing bill—"Agents."—M. & B. Brothers, acting as agents for L. T. & P., purchased coal, without stating to the vendor that they were acting as agents, & upon receipt of the coal sent in payment a draft drawn by them, & accepted by their principals, to which they signed their own names as drawers, adding the word "Ags."—Held: they were personally liable as drawers.—REID v. MCCHESEY (1858), 8 C. P. 50.—CAN.

d. "Commissioner."—Deft., as comr. of a railway co., drew a bill of exchange on the co. to pay for work done on the railway, & signed it "R. comr." The payee knew for what purpose the bill was drawn, & that deft. was agent of the co. In an action by an indorsee:—Held: deft. personally liable.—PEELE v. ROBINSON (1800), 4 All. 561.—CAN.

e. Factor accepting bill.—"For behoof of" named principal.—C.'s factor accepted a bill "for behoof of C. for value received in meal":—Held: the factor was personally liable to summary diligence at the drawer's instance.—WEBSTER v. M'CALMAN (1848), 20 J. 417.—SCOT.

f. President accepting bill.—"President"—Bill drawn on "president" of railway company & not on company.—The charter of a railway co. gave power to the co. to become parties to bills, & enacted that any bill accepted by the president with the counter-signature of the secretary should be binding on the co., that the seal should be unnecessary, & the president, etc., so accepting any bill should not be personally liable. A bill addressed "To the president, Midland Railway" was accepted "For Midland Railway of Canada" accepted R., Secretary: C., President:—Held: C., the president, was personally liable, the bill not being drawn upon the co.—MADDEN v. COX (1879), 44 U. C. R. 542; affd. 5 A. R. 473.—CAN.

g. Secretary accepting bill.—Company "per" secretary.—A bill of order at three months after date the sum of £137 10s., value received in account (fire policy No. 597), was directed to C., general agent of the A. Co., 8, York Street, Manchester, who wrote upon it: "Accepted, payable at 8, York Street, Manchester, on behalf of the co.—C." In an action against C. on this bill:—Held: he was personally liable as acceptor.—HERALD v. CONNAH (1876), 34 L. T. 885; 40 J. P. 567.

2647.—"Per procuracion" company.—No authority to accept.—A bill of exchange was drawn by plff. upon a mining co. & accepted by deft. in this form: "Accepted per pro. the A. Mining Co. Payable, U., London, manager." At the trial it was proved that the co. consisted of deft. & three other persons, who jointly had worked the mine. Dft. had no authority to accept bills on behalf of the co.:—Held: deft. was personally liable upon his acceptance to the bill.—OWEN v. VAN USTER (VON USTER) (1850), 10 C. B. 318; 20 L. J. C. P. 6; 10 L. T. O. S. 194; 138 E. R. 128.

2648.—D.—A bill of exchange, directed to "D., purser, W. Mining Co.," was accepted by him as follows: "D., per pro. W. Mining Co." D. was a member of the co., which was not incorporated:—Held: D. was personally liable on this acceptance.—NICHOLLS (NICHOLS, NICOLLS) v. DIAMOND (1853), 9 Exch. 154; 23 L. J. Ex. 1; 22 L. T. O. 2649.—"For" company, "purser."—A bill of exchange, purporting to be "for value received in machinery supplied to the H. Mining Co.," was directed to deft. as an individual. Dft. wrote across the bill the words "Accepted for the co.—A. B., purser." Dft. was purser of the mine, but was not a member of the co.:—Held: he was personally liable as acceptor.—MARE v. CHARLES (1856), 5 E. & B. 978; 25 L. J. Q. B. 119; 20 L. T. O. S. 238; 2 Jur. N. S. 234; 4 W. R. 267.

exchange addressed to "G., Secretary, Richardson Gold Mining Co., Belle-ville, Ontario," was accepted thus: "Richardson Gold Mining Co. per G., Secretary":—Held: it was not the acceptance of deft., & he was not personally liable.—ROBERTSON v. GLASS (1869), 20 C. P. 250.—CAN.

h. Treasurer accepting bill.—As "treasurer"—Bill drawn on "treasurer" company.—A. co. being indebted to H., deft., the co.'s treasurer, filled in one of the printed forms of bills used by him as such treasurer for the co.'s acceptances, the bill being stated to be drawn on deft. as, "T., Tr. C. S. Ry. Co., St. Thomas," & it was accepted by him as "T., Tr." The bill was received by H. as the co.'s acceptance, & he afterwards indorsed it for value to plffs., who also took it believing it to be the co.'s acceptance:—Held: deft. was personally liable as acceptor, the bill being drawn on & accepted by him personally, & not by or for the co.—LAIKE v. TAYLOR (1876), 26 C. P. 416.—CAN.

k. As "treasurer" company.—Dft. accepted a bill drawn upon him as treasurer of the Wolf Island Ry. & Canal Co., thus: "Accepted, Ry. Treas. W. I. R. & C. Co.," adding the co.'s seal:—Held: he was personally liable.—FOSTER v. GEDDES (1856), 14 U. C. R. 239.—CAN.

2650. Executors accepting bill.—“As executors of” testator.]—Exors. carried on their testator’s trade in that character, & in the ordinary course of the business accepted a bill of exchange, describing themselves in it simply as exors. of their testator:—Held: neither the above circumstances, nor the form of the acceptance, relieved the estate of one of the exors., who died in the lifetime of the other, from the ordinary equitable liability upon the bill.—LIVERPOOL BOROUGH BANK v. WALKER (1859), 4 De G. & J. 24; 45 E. R. 10.

Insurance Assocn.” was accepted by debts, thus: “Accepted, J., S., as joint managers of the R. Assocn.” In an action by an indorsee against debts, as acceptors of such bill:—Held: (1) debts, were personally liable on the above acceptance; (2) the introduction of the word “as” in the acceptance, before “joint managers,” made no difference with respect to such liability.—JONES v. JACKSON (1870), 22 L. T. 828.

(c) Where Agent signs Principal’s Name.

2652. Agent drawing bill.—A., B., & C. carried on business as partners under the name of B. & Son; A. & B. died, & C. employed debt., who had previously acted as clerk to the firm, to wind up affairs. In this character debt. attended the warehouse, & transacted business with different persons on account of the firm. In these circumstances debt., using & signing the name of the firm, drew upon H., a debtor to the firm, a bill of exchange, which H. accepted. In an action upon the bill:—Held: debt. was not liable as the drawer, his name not being affixed to it, without some proof that he had no authority to draw bills in the name of the firm, or that he had not acted bonâ fide. Qu.: whether, if it had been proved he had no such authority, he would have been liable in an action upon the bill.—*WILSON v. Society, to M. or order, the sum of £200 for value received.”—Held: debt. personally liable on the note.—RICHARDS v. RUEGG (1856), 27 L. T. O. S. 184.

2654.—By “two of the directors of” company “by & on behalf of” company—Note sealed with company’s seal.]—A promissory note in the following terms, “Three months after date we, two of the directors of the O. Co., by & on behalf of the co. do hereby promise to pay to M. or order the sum of £67, value received,” was signed by two directors of a registered joint-stock co. & sealed with the co.’s seal, but not countersigned by the secretary of the co.:—Held: the promissory note was binding on the co. & not on the directors who signed it.

Even if the note had been void against the co., it would not have been good against debts. (POLLOCK, C.B.).—AGGS v. NICHOLSON (1856), 1 H. & N. 165; 25 L. J. Ex. 348; 28 L. T. O. S. 66; 4 W. R. 776; 156 E. R. 1161.

S. or order £200 for value received in stock in account of the L. MELROSE* (1858), 3 H. & N. 177; 27 L. J. Ex. 326; 31 L. T. O. S. 36; 4 Jur. N. S. 488; 6 W. R. 441, Ex. Ch.

2656.—“As directors of” company—Countersigned by manager.]—A promissory note signed by debts., who described themselves on the note as directors of the F. Co., Ltd., & countersigned by the manager, was in these words: “three months after date we promise to pay the B. Bank, or order, the sum of £1,000, value received.”—Held: (1) the note pledged the personal liability of the makers; (2) an equitable plea, alleging the form of the note to have been a mistake, & the intention to have been to make the co. only responsible, was not proved if payee maintained that he always intended to secure the makers’ personal liability.—COURTAULD v. SAUNDERS (SANDERS) (1867), 16 L. T. 502; 15 W. R. 906.

2657.—By “members of the executive committee on behalf of” industrial & provident society.]—Debts., members of an unregistered society enrolled & certified under Industrial & Provident Societies Act, 1851 (c. 31), gave a promissory note in the following form for a debt of the society: “twelve months after date we, the undersigned, being members of the executive committee, on behalf of the L. & S. 2662. ——— As acting "for" building society.]—The trustees of a building society signed

M. & Co. except through him. Pltfs., after L. became trustee, supplied goods to him for which a certain sum was due to them. L. wanted plts. to draw on M. & Co., which they refused to do, insisting that L. was the only person by whom a draft could be accepted. Afterwards L. gave them six promissory notes & signed them in the name of "M. & Co., Lortimer, assignee." Some of the bills remaining unpaid, plts. sued on them:—Held: the mere addition to his signature of words describing him as an agent, or as filling a representative character, did not exempt him from personal liability. Building Society, No. 3, Birmingham, Sept. 1, 1856. One month after demand we jointly & severally promise to pay J. B. the sum of £120, with interest thereon at the rate of £6 per cent. per annum (payable half-yearly), for value received.—W. H., S. B., directors; W. F., secretary":—Held: deft. personally liable on the note.—BOTTOMLEY v. FISHER (1862), 1 H. & C. 211; 31 L. J. Ex. 417; 6 L. T. 688; 27 J. P. 23; 8 Jur. N. S. 895; 10 W. R. 669.

2664. "For" company, "secretary"—Described in note—Without qualification.]—Deft. was secretary to a ry. co. not empowered by its Act to give bills & notes, & the co. being in want of funds to complete its line, a sum of money was borrowed of plts., to whom the following promissory note, signed by deft., was given: "On demand I promise to pay to A. & Co. the sum of £1,500 with interest thereon until paid. Value received for the M. T. & W. Ry. Co.—S., secretary":—Held: (1) it appeared on the face of the note itself that it was signed by deft. as agent for & on behalf of the co.; (2) he was not personally liable thereon to plts.—ALEXANDER v. SIZER (1869), L. R. 4 Exch. 102; 38 L. J. Ex. 59; 20 L. T. 38.

2665. "As chairman"—Described in note—"As directors"—Note sealed with company's seal.]—M. & others, directors of a joint-stock co., borrowed for purposes of the co. the sum of £1,600 from D. The instrument which they signed & gave as security was a promissory note, in which they described themselves, in the body of the instrument, as directors, & by the signature of M. as chairman, but did not express themselves as signing on behalf of the co. They, however, affixed thereto the corporate seal of the co., although that was not requisite to the validity of the note as a security for money borrowed for purposes of the co. The co. having become insolvent, D. sued M. & the other directors who signed the promissory note for the amount thereof on their personal liability:—Held: their description as directors & chairman in the body of & subscription to the note, & the presence of the corporate seal on the instrument, did not furnish sufficient evidence necessarily to exclude the inference that defts. borrowed the money & signed the note on their personal responsibility.—DUTTON v. MARSH (1871), L. R. 6 Q. B. 361; 40 L. J. Q. B. 175; 24 L. T. 470; 19 W. R. 754.

The signature was as follows: "J. H. S.'s Laundry & Dye Works, Ltd.—J. H. S., managing director," which was impressed by a rubber stamp belonging to the co., except the words "J. H. S.," which were written by the managing director. The co. had power to borrow money on promissory notes, & the managing director had authority to make notes on behalf of or in name of the co.:—Held: (1) the note was the note of the co.; (2) the managing director was not personally liable.—CHAPMAN v. Drawn by directors—In favour of one of themselves—Not described as directors or as acting for company.]—A., B., & C., three directors of a ry. co., in fraud of the co. drew a cheque upon the co.'s bankers in favour of one of their body. This cheque, though bearing the stamp usually impressed upon documents issued by the co. & countersigned by the secretary, did not upon the face of it purport to be drawn on behalf of the co., nor did the drawers describe themselves therein as directors:—Held: the co. not liable for the amount to a bonâ fide holder for value.—SERRELL v. DERBYSHIRE, STAFFORDSHIRE & WORCESTER JUNCTION RY. CO. (1850), 9 C. B. 811; 19 L. J. C. P. 371; 15 L. T. O. S. 254; 137 E. R. 1110.

2668. — On behalf of company—Request to honour cheque.]—Directors of a co. are not personally liable to find cash for cheques drawn by them as officers of the co. upon the co.'s bank, & which the bank may choose to honour when the co. has no funds at the bank. A letter written by such directors, at a time when the co. has funds at the bank, requesting the bankers to honour cheques of the co. drawn in a particular manner, is only an intimation not to treat cheques as cheques of the co., unless signed in that manner; it is not any representation either of any authority in the directors to overdraw the account or that there will be funds forthcoming to answer the cheques, & it does not imply any undertaking on the part of any director signing it that he will personally pay or be answerable for any cheques, though drawn in that particular manner, if they should not be paid by the co. As neither the directors who signed such letter nor those who, by cheques drawn in conformity therewith, subsequently overdraw the account incur any personal liability, so neither do such directors as at subsequent meetings confirm the letter, or acquiesce in the cheques drawn in conformity with it.—BEATTIE v. ERURY (LORD) (1874), L. R. 7 H. L. 102; 44 L. J. Ch. 20; 30 L. T. 581; 38 J. P. 564; 22 W. R. 897, H. L.

M., secretary to the co., wrote across it "Accepted, payable at Messrs. B. & Co.—M., secretary to the co." The bill was not honoured:—Held: M. was personally liable to P. under Joint Stock Companies Act, 1856 (c. 47), s. 31.—PENROSE v. MARTYR (1858), E. B. & E. 499; 28 L. J. Q. B. 28; 5 Jur. N. 2672. —.]—The directors of a joint-stock bank whose proper name was "The Union Bank of Calcutta," issued instruments in the following form: "We promise to pay on account of the proprietors of the Union Bank of Calcutta, to the order of C. I. & Co., the sum of 10,000 rupees. Value received. (Signed) J. R., W. G., directors." The directors had power to bind the shareholders by issuing instruments of that description:—Held: (1) they were in a form which bound the shareholders; (2) they were substantially made in the name of the partnership firm.—FORBES v. MARSHALL (1855), 11 Exch. 166; 24 L. J. Ex. 305; 25 L. T. O. S. 147; 3 C. L. R. 933; 156 E. R. 788.

The directors were in fact authorised to accept bills. In an action against C. & M. personally:—Held: the acceptance complied with the requirements of Cos. Act, 1862 (c. 89), s. 47, & bound the co.—OKELL v. CHARLES (1876), 34 L. T. 822, C. A.

2674. Name of company incorrectly stated.]—A co. was registered by the title of "The South Shields Salt Water Baths Co., Ltd." Pltfs. drew the following bill of exchange: "Six months after date pay to our order the sum of £125 for value received.—Salt Water Baths Co., Ltd., South Shields," which was accepted as follows: "Accepted payable H., B. & Co.'s Bank, South Shields.—J. P. W., chairman, T. S. B. & J. S. B., directors, South Shields Salt Water Baths Co." An action having been brought upon the bill by pltfs. against the chairman & directors:—Held: (1) the two variations from the proper designation of the co. were sufficient to bring defts. within Cos. Act, 1862 (c. 89), s. 42, the intention of which was to insure extreme strictness in regard to the use of the registered name of the co., not only in enforcing the use of the word "Limited," but in all other respects; (2) pltfs. were entitled to judgment.—ATKINS*

B. Agent's Liability to be sued.

(a) Where Agent signs without Qualification.

2687. General rule—Letter from third party to principal not amounting to election.]—Pltfs. sent to deft., dealer in gelatine paper, over whose door was inscribed "Sole agent for K. & Co., of Vienna," a written order, addressed to him personally, for gelatine paper, to be delivered by monthly instalments. Deft. replied by letter: "I acknowledge with thanks receipt of your favour containing order for one hundred & fifty reams of gelatine, which I have forwarded to K. in Vienna, to be executed in monthly parcels of thirty reams each.—P." Some parcels of the ordered goods were sent by K. to England, invoiced to deft., & were by him delivered to pltfs. Delay occurred in sending the remainder, & pltfs., after pressing deft. to complete delivery, wrote at last to K.: "We gave your Mr. P. an order," etc. "We must fall back upon you in case of any claims, if the goods are not delivered." An action having been brought against deft. for breach of contract for non-completion of delivery, he denied his personal liability:—Held: (1) the order & acceptance formed a contract between pltfs. & deft. personally; (2) pltfs. had not by their subsequent letters to the manufacturers of the paper elected to treat them as principals.—DIAMBURG v. POLLITZER (1873), 28 L. T. 470; 21 W. R. 682.

2688. Agent described in contract—As acting "in behalf & representation of" named principal.]—The rule that a contract made in England by an agent on behalf of a foreign principal is to be considered the contract of the agent is not confined to the case of goods sold & to be delivered in England.

By an agreement made between deft., in behalf & representation of P., a foreign merchant at Havana, & pltf., who contracted to serve as stoker on board a steamship belonging to P., it was agreed that if pltf. was discharged before the vessel reached Havana, pltf. should be entitled to certain compensation, & after reaching Havana P. should be at liberty to confirm & continue the agreement for a longer period. Pltf. being discharged before the vessel reached Havana:—Held: (1) the agreement showed that, in the first instance, the intention was to give credit to deft.; (2) deft. was personally liable to pltf. for breach of the agreement.—WILSON v. (foreign merchants), & which was signed by him "for" that firm, the question being whether deft. was personally liable upon the contract, deft. argued that, the contract being set out in hac verba in the declaration, & no other agreement being alleged, pltf. had submitted the construction as a question of law to the ct., & could not adduce at the trial any other evidence of personal liability against deft.; whilst pltf. contended that the terms of contract were not conclusive to show deft. was not personally liable, & that upon the trial it would be competent to pltf. to establish by evidence that, though on the face of the contract he declared himself to be agent for A. B. & Co., the contract between him & pltf. was that he should be personally liable. The ct. suggested that the declaration might be amended so as clearly to let in such evidence at the trial, & gave leave to amend.—MORGAN v. GRAY (1857), 28 L. T. O. S. 269.

C. Principal's Liability to be sued.

F. & Co. were merchants in London; deft. was a partner in the firm of B. & Co., carrying on business at Rangoon. Goods were supplied by pltf. to F. & Co., on their order given in consequence of an arrangement between the two firms, as disclosed in letters, that F. & Co. should "purchase" & send out goods on "the joint account" of the two firms, 2 per cent. to be charged on the invoice by the London firm, & 5 per cent. by the Rangoon firm, including guarantee. Pltf. had no knowledge of deft., or that the Rangoon firm were in any way interested in the transaction, until after the goods were supplied:—Held: deft. was not, as an undisclosed principal, a party to the contract under which the goods were supplied by pltf., for, on the true construction of the correspondence, the Rangoon firm did not give authority to the London firm to establish privity of contract & pledge their credit with the English suppliers of the goods.—HUTTON v. BULLOCK (1874), L. R. 9 Q. B. 572; 30 L. T. 648; 22 W. R. 956, Ex. Ch.

2703. Privity established between principal & third party.]—Defts., who carried on business in Australia, employed P. to buy goods for them in England. Defts.' name was placed up in P.'s office. The goods were ordered on forms bearing defts.' name, & invoices were made out to defts.:—Held: (1) P. was acting merely as buyer for defts.; (2) defts. were liable.—REYNOLDS & CO. v. PEAPES & SHAW (1889), 6 T. L. R. 49.

2704. —[Defts., jute merchants at Calcutta, appointed L. & Co. their agents for the sale of jute in England at an agreed commission. L. & Co. afterwards entered into a contract in their own name for the sale of a quantity of jute to pltf., & wrote to defts. informing them they had done so. Defts. wrote to pltf. enclosing invoice of the goods & stating they had drawn upon them for the price. Pltf. kept the invoice, accepted the draft, & obtained the bill of lading. The draft was duly taken up by pltf. The goods arrived in a damaged condition. In an action by pltf. against defts. for breach of contract:—Held: (1) the above circumstances excluded the application of the ordinary rule as to contracts between foreign & English principals, made through an agent in England; (2) privity was established between them; (3) the action was maintainable.—FLINN (MALCOLM) & CO. v. HOYLE (1893), 63 L. J. Q. B. 1, C. A.

2705. Effect of third party taking agent's bill—Principal putting agent in funds to meet same.]—The right of the seller of goods to resort to an undisclosed foreign principal is barred by any circumstance which shows that the enforcement of that right would operate injustice.

A., as agent of B., a merchant residing abroad, bought goods of C. At the time of the purchase A. did not inform C. who was his principal; the invoices described the goods as "bought on account of B., per A." C. afterwards drew upon A. for the amount, at four & six months, but A. became insolvent before either of the bills arrived at maturity. B., after receiving advice of the purchase, & of the acceptance of the bills by A., made large remittances to A. on account of these & other goods; & A., at the time of his stoppage, was considerably indebted to B.:—Held: in these circumstances, it was not competent to C. to sue B. for the price of the goods; (2) the books of C. were not admissible for the purpose of showing that B. had been through-out debited by him as principal.—SMYTH (SMITH) v. ANDERSON (1849), 7 C. B. 21; 18 L. J. C. P. 100; 12 L. T. O. S. 450; 13 Jur. 211; 137 E. R. 9.

2706. For goods not duly delivered according to bill of lading—Agent shipping & paying freight.]—A person who ships goods in an English port, as agent of the owner of the goods resident abroad, & pays the freight for them, may maintain an action in his own name for not delivering them according

2702 ii. —[No privity of contract.]—A firm of grain merchants in Edinburgh were authorised by telegram in general terms from defender, who resided in B. C., to buy wheat. They accordingly contracted with pursuers in London as principals, though it was known that they were acting for a foreign principal. The written contract stipulated that for the purpose of proceedings, either legal or by arbitr., the contract was to be deemed to have been made in England & to be performed there. Pursuers took a bill for the price, but on arrival of the cargo this was not met. Defender's name & address were then for the first time disclosed. Founding jurisdiction by arrestment, pursuers raised an action:—Held: (1) by agreeing that for all purposes the contract was to be treated as a contract made in England & to be performed there, the parties settled for themselves the locus of the contract; (2) independently of agreement it was an English contract; (3) by the law of England the order to purchase a cargo in the general terms there employed did not make the foreign principal a party to the English contract, & there was no privity of contract between pursuers & defender. Hutton v. Bullock (1874), L. R. 9 Q. B. 572, cited.—GRIVIN, ROPER & CO. v. MONTETH (1895), 3 S. L. T. 118.—SCOT.

2703 i. Privity established between principal & third party.—Facts not sufficient to establish privity.]—A co. in N. Z. employed S., who went to London for the purpose, to sell goods for them there on commission, the co. drawing on S. through a bank, & the bills of lading being landed to S. by the London office of the bank on his taking up the drafts. Finding himself unable to meet the drafts, S. applied to applts., & they agreed to take up the drafts, & receive the goods, & dispose of them in conjunction with S., sharing his commission with him, & charging him interest on the advances made. A consignment having been received by applts. in respect of which there was likely to be a deficiency of proceeds below the amount of the draft taken up by them, S. returned to N. Z., leaving it in their hands to dispose of. On arriving in N. Z. he informed the co. of the arrangement he had made with applts., & there being some question as to whether applts. should hold the consignment for a better market, S. cabled them, at the co.'s request, to sell. They did so, & there was a deficiency. In the meantime S. had become bkpt. :—Held: (1) the facts did not take the case out of the general rule applicable to the case of an agent of a foreign principal; (2) there was no privity of contract created between applts. & the co.; (3) applts. could not recover from the co., either on the ground of privity or as for money of applts. had & received by the co. Reid v. Rigby, [1894] 2 Q. B. 40, cited.—TRENGROBE & CO. v. STEEDS, OFFICIAL ASSIGNEE (1896), 11 L. R. 636, C. A.—N.Z.

q. On contract of hire.—Replevin.]—Deft. in writing acknowledged receipt from pltf., agent of a foreign co., of a sewing machine on hire, & agreed on non-fulfilment of certain conditions that pltf. or co. might resume possession, & deft. waived all right of action for trespass, damages, or replevin by reason of any action taken by pltf. or the co. in resuming possession:—Held:

2707. On bill purchased but not paid for by other agents of same principal.—A merchant in England, correspondent of a foreign house, is not, by mercantile usage, authorised on that ground only to pledge the credit of the foreign house for goods bought by him on their account in England.

A. & Co., American merchants, were indebted to B. & Co., of Paris, & C. & Co., of London, & being pressed for payment by B. & Co., remitted funds to C. & Co., who paid & overpaid them, with a direction to remit the balance to B. & Co. in Paris. In order to do so, C. & Co. bought in London, in the ordinary course of business, a bill on Paris, drawn by D. & Co. to the order of C. & Co., to be remitted at once to Paris, but to be paid for by C. & Co. on the next foreign post-day. The bill was so remitted, but before the next foreign post-day C. & Co. failed, & thereupon D. & Co. refused to pay the bill. B. & Co. were afterwards paid by A. & Co. in full. In an action by B. & Co. on behalf of A. & Co. against D. & Co. on the bill:—Held: plffs. entitled to recover; for if the action were to be considered personally theirs, they were holders for value of the bill; & if not theirs, but really the action of A. & Co., C. & Co. were only correspondents of A. & Co. to remit the bill, & not their agents to pledge their credit for the price of the bill.—POIRIER v. MORRIS (1853), 2 E. & B. 89; 22 L. J. Q. B. 313; 17 Jur. 1116; 1 W. R. 349; 1 C. L. R. 429; 118 E. R. 702.

2709. Whether contract with principal or agent—Question for jury.—Plffs., a foreign co., entered into negotiations through S. & Co., London commission merchants, for the supply by C., deft., of certain ry. wheels & axles, & deft., in consequence, had an interview, on Jan. 29, at S. & Co.'s office, with S., one of the partners, & H., the managing director of plff. co. Deft. signed in a diary of S. the following entry: "C. offers to supply one hundred & fifty sets of wheels & axles [describing them] at £31 per set, to be delivered free on board at Hull during Feb. & Mar. This offer to remain open until Feb. 3." On Feb. 3 S. & Co. telegraphed & wrote, "We confirm the order for one hundred & fifty sets of wheels & axles," repeating the terms of the offer. Some of the sets were delivered by deft., the invoices being made out to S. & Co., & they paid for them; but the delivery of most of the sets was after Mar., & plffs. sued for a breach of the contract. At the trial it was objected that the contract was with S. & Co., & not with plffs. The judge left it to the jury to say whether the contract was with S. & Co. or with plffs. The jury found for deft.:—Held: the direction & verdict were right.—ELBINGER ACT. FÜR FABRIKATION VON EISENBAHN MATERIAL v. CLAYE (1873), L. R. 8 Q. B. 313; 42 L. J. Q. B. 151; 28 L. T. 405.

2710. Payment to agent in account no discharge.—C., living in Canada, sent through X., a country stockbroker in England, a power of attorney for sale of "£1,000 Goschens standing in the name of C." to defts., the London agents of X., with instructions to sell. Defts. sold the stock for £970, with which (less commission) they credited X. in his general account with them. The account between X. & defts. was ultimately balanced by subsequent entries, including two bills drawn by X. & accepted & paid by defts., but no payment expressly on account of the sale of consols. The fact of the sale of the stock was not discovered by C. for several months, when X. was insolvent, & no part of the proceeds of sale was received by C.:—Held: defts. were not relieved by the transactions between them & X., or by the fact that C. was a foreign principal from liability; & judgment must be given for the proceeds of the stock with interest at 4 per cent.—CROSSLEY v. MAGNIAC, [1893] 1 Ch. 594; 67 L. T. 798; 41 W. R. 598; 9 T. L. R. 126; 3 R. 202.

2711. Whether principal must sue in agent's name.—Where a foreign principal orders goods of a broker in England, who buys them in his own name, though the vendor knows he is acting as agent, & the broker pays the vendor the purchase-money, which he afterwards receives from his principal, & it turns out that the goods were not in existence at the time of the contract, the principal cannot recover back the money paid from his agent, the broker, but must proceed against the vendor for it. Qu.: whether the action by the principal

r. On contract for disclosed principal.—Contract by third party to pay agent damages.—In a contract entered into by an agent for a foreign principal, who was disclosed, there was a clause by which the other contracting party bound himself to pay to the agent liquidated damages, in case of delay:—Held: the agent had a good title to sue for the damages.—*LEVY & Co. v. s. For goods sold.—Invoices in principal's name.—An action was brought against applt. for the balance of the price of books purchased by him from resp. acting as agent of a Paris book dealer. u. Presumption as to undisclosed principal's right.—The general rule is that an unnamed principal may declare himself & sue upon the contract made for him by his agent: no sound commercial principle will refuse redress against the seller to a foreign principal who purchases through an agent: nor is the agent presumptively the person to sue & be sued: so where the agent leaves his employer to seek out his own remedy no sound principle of law will exclude the latter from redress upon the ground only of his being a foreigner.—HARDY v. FAIRBANKS (1847), James, 432.—CAN.

2709 i. Whether contract with principal or agent.—Principal disclosed.—Priority established between principal & third party.—WEHR v. SHARMAN (1874), 34 M. C. L. 410.—CAN.

2709 ii. ———. Presumption raised by usage.—How rebutted.—In an action by a foreign principal on a contract by defts. in Scotland defts. pleaded "no title to sue" as the contract was entered into by them with commission merchants in London as principals: proof that pursuer had appointed commission merchants to be his agent:—Held: pursuer on disclosing himself as principal had title to sue.

Although there may be a general usage in the foreign trade which raises a presumption that a British commission merchant contracts as a principal, & not as an agent for a foreign trader, the presumption will give way to evidence that the agent is acting as agent for a foreign trader, & when this is so the law of principal & agent will apply.—*BENNETT v. SUB-SECT. 5.—AGENT CONTRACTING AS SUCH FOR NON-EXISTENT PRINCIPAL.

2712. Contract signed—"On behalf of" inchoate company.]—Where a contract is signed by one who professes to be signing "as agent," but has no principal existing at the time, & the contract would be wholly inoperative unless binding upon the person who signed it, he is personally liable on it; a stranger cannot by a subsequent ratification relieve him from that liability.

A co. being projected for carrying on the business of an hotel, & purchasing the premises & stock of pltf., the following agreement was entered into: "Jan. 27, 1866. To A., B., & C., on behalf of the proposed G. Hotel Co., I hereby propose to sell the extra stock, as per schedule hereto, for the sum of £900, payable on Feb. 28, 1866" (signed by pltf.). "We have received your offer to sell the extra stock as above, & we hereby agree to accept the terms proposed." (Signed) "A., B., & C., on behalf of the G. Hotel Co." The goods were handed over to representatives of the proposed co., & were consumed in the business. The co. obtained a certificate of incorporation under Cos. Act, 1862 (c. 89), on Feb. 20, but collapsed before the money was paid:—Held: (1) A., B., & C. were personally liable on their agreement, as for goods sold & delivered; (2) no subsequent ratification by the co. could relieve them from that liability without the assent of pltf.; (3) parol evidence was not admissible to show that personal liability was not intended.—KELNER (KELMER) v. BAXTER (1866), L. R. 2 C. P. 174; 36 L. J. C. P. 94; 15 L. T. 213; 12 Jur. N. S. 1016; 15 W. R. 278.

2713. Cheque signed by promoters of company.]—J., acting as solr. & secretary of a projected ry. co., by authority of the promoters, & by means of a cheque signed by two of them, obtained from pltf. an advance of £500, to be applied in payment of parliamentary fees, upon an agreement expressing it was "to be repaid out of the calls on shares."

from the owners of two of the claims & without their knowledge, & subsequently these owners transferred their interest to B.:—Held: although no such firm as J. Order signed "secretary pro tempore" of projected company.]—On the prospectus of a projected co., & at its office, deft. wrote an order for advertising it in pltf.'s newspaper, & signed himself "Secretary pro tempore." Two days afterwards the co. was registered:—Held: as the co. was not in existence when the order was signed, & as there was no evidence that deft. was acting for any other person, he was personally liable on the order.—HOPCRAFT v. PARKER (1867), 16 L. T. 561; 15 W. R. 842.

2715. Agreement for overdraft—Company subsequently formed.]—Six persons, being desirous of getting up an Irish exhibition in London, styled themselves the executive council of the exhibition & as such opened an account at Coutts' in the name of "the Irish Exhibition," & secured an overdraft on certain guarantees which proved worthless. Subsequently a co. was formed to run the exhibition, & on this co. being wound up the bank sued the six persons before mentioned for the overdraft:—Held: although in one sense the account was an impersonal one, it had not been made out that the bank were not to be creditors of anybody until the exhibition was formed, or that they had substituted the co. subsequently formed as their debtor in place of the six persons, & they were liable in respect of cheques drawn on the account in the form agreed upon.—COUTTS & Co. v. IRISH EXHIBITION IN LONDON (1891), 7 T. L. R. 313, C. A.; reusq. (1890) 63 L. T. 489.

being made, & subsequently, with the concurrence of those who had acted on their behalf, they brought an action of damages against the engineering co., on the ground that the machinery supplied was defective:—Held: they had no title to sue, seeing that the firm who had contracted with the engineers could not act as agents for a non-existent principal, & there was no privity of contract between pltfs. & defts., & concurring pursuer's title was unavailing because no damage to them was alleged.—*TINNEVELLY SUGAR REFINING Co. v. Syndicate, wrote to plffs.: "We hereby undertake to pay you the sum of £225 within thirty days hereof in full settlement of the printing account of the R. R. Syndicate":—Held: (1) Messrs. The money in question was deposited in the personal name of the Agent-General, & pltfs. contended that on that ground he was personally responsible for it. The Govt. was not made a party to the action:—Held: (1) deft. was mere agent of the Govt., & could not constitute himself a trustee against his principals; (2) the question could not be tried in absence of the Govt., the foundation of pltfs.' case being there was a trust which the Govt. could not intercept.—*WRIGHT & CO. v. Pltf., a tailor, sued deft., the commandant & a member of the committee of a volunteer rifle corps, for uniforms supplied to the corps. The evidence was conflicting. According to pltf.'s statement he attended a meeting of the committee when deft. used expressions which implied that he undertook to pay for the uniforms. This was denied by deft., who gave in evidence pltf.'s day-book & ledger, in which the uniforms were debited to the corps. Deft. admitted his liability to pay for his own uniform & those of the band, which he had ordered. The judge told the jury: (1) if the contract was with deft. alone for the whole corps, he was liable; (2) if with deft. jointly with the committee (there being no plea in abatement), he was liable; (3) so if with deft. jointly with the whole corps; (4) if by deft. for his own uniform & those which he specially agreed to pay for, he was not liable:—Held: (1) the case was properly left to the jury; (2) there was no foundation for a new trial on the ground of misdirection.—CROSS v. WILLIAMS (1862), 7 H. & N. 675; 31 L. J. Ex. 145; 6 L. T. 434; 26 J. P. 423; 10 W. R. 302; 158 E. R. 641.

2747. ———.]—An order for uniforms & equipments for a volunteer corps having been given by or on behalf of the commanding officer:—Held: upon the facts, (1) the orders were given so as to make the commanding officer personally liable upon them; (2) upon his death his execs. were liable.—*SAMUEL BROTHERS, LTD. v. SUR-SECT. 7.—LIABILITY FOR BREACH OF WARRANTY OF AUTHORITY.

A. In General.

2748. General rule.]—Semble: a person professing to contract as agent only, not being liable on the contract, may, if he had no authority to contract as agent, be liable whether there is fraud or not in an action of assumpsit, brought, not upon the original contract, but upon an implied promise that he had

2748 ii. ———.]—Deft. verbally agreed with pltf. for the supply by pltf. to the D. M. Co. of all the slack & coal required for their business; the company was then unincorporated & could neither authorise deft. to contract on its behalf nor after incorporation ratify his action:—Held: deft. had impliedly warranted his authority to contract for the D. M. Co., & was liable to make good to pltf. what he had lost or failed to obtain by reason of the non-existence of the authority.—CORR v. DOWLING (1901), 4 Terr. L. R. 464.—CAN.

2748 iii. ———.]—An agent who exceeds his authority in contracting for a named principal, & whose contract is repudiated by the latter, is liable in damages to the other contracting party, on the ground that from his representation of authority a personal undertaking on his part is to be implied that his principal will be bound, & that, if not bound, the other party will be placed in as good a position as if he were.—*BLOWER v. 2748 iv. ———.]—The secretary of a cinema co. entered into a contract with a plumber to execute plumbing work for the co. The co. had no assets & was unable to pay for the work. The plumber brought an action against the secretary for payment, in which he averred that defender had no authority to make the contract, although he fraudulently represented that he had authority:—Held: the averment was irrelevant in respect that, since the co. was unable to pay anything, the damage arising from the alleged breach of warranty of authority was nil; (2) defender must be assuaged.—*IRVING v. A person who induces another to contract with him as agent of a third party by an unqualified assertion of his authority to act as such agent is answerable to the person who so contracts for damages which he may sustain by the assertion of authority being untrue; it is immaterial that the professed agent honestly thinks he has authority—COLLEN v. 2757. Person accepting bill per procuration of another.]—A bill was presented for acceptance at the office of the drawee when he was absent. A., who lived in the same house with the drawee, being assured by one of the payees that the bill was perfectly regular, was induced to write on it an acceptance as by procuration of the drawee, believing the acceptance would be sanctioned, & the bill paid by the latter. The bill was dishonoured when due, & the indorsee brought an action against the drawee, & on proof of the above facts was non-suited. The indorsee sued A. for falsely, fraudulently & deceitfully representing that he was authorised to accept by procuration, & on the trial the jury negatived all fraud in fact:—Held: (1) A. was liable, because making a representation, which a person knows to be untrue & which is intended or calculated, from the mode in which it is made, to induce another to act on the faith of it so that he may incur damages, is a fraud in law, & A. must be considered as having intended to make such representation to all who received the bill in the course of its circulation; (2) A. could not be charged as acceptor of the bill.—*POLLILL v. 2759. Seller giving purchaser's master of ship instructions as to destination.]—Resp.'s ship was in a port in Australia under orders to proceed to R. Resp. entered into a contract with applts. in the United Kingdom to purchase a cargo of coal to be loaded in Australia. Applts. telegraphed to their agents in Australia as to terms & conditions of sale, adding instructions as to the ship's destination. They had no authority from resp. to give orders as to destination. By a mistake of a telegraph clerk C. was given as the destination instead of R. Applts.' agents in Australia informed the master of the ship that they had instructions to direct him to proceed to C. The master hesitated to change his destination, & applts.' agents gave him a letter "to confirm our verbal instructions as to your destination"—naming C. as his destination—continuing, "this letter will be sufficient guarantee for proceeding on your voyage":—Held: (1) the letter amounted to a warranty to the master as resp.'s agent that applts. had resp.'s authority to order the ship to proceed, whereas they had not; (2) resp. could sue for the damages he had sustained through the ship proceeding to C. instead of to R.—*BROWN v. 2760. Person acting as agent but disclaiming authority to do so.]—A person who purports to contract as agent on behalf of an alleged principal, is liable on an implied warranty of his authority only if the other contracting party relied on the existence of authority. He is not liable if, at the time of purporting to contract, he expressly disclaimed any present authority.

L. signed an agreement for his "wife & C." without their authority, & they refused to concur in it. In the case of his wife, L. believed & represented that he had her authority. In the case of C. he stated, & the other party to the agreement was aware, that he had not his authority. In an action by the latter against L. to be indemnified by him for not procuring their concurrence:—Held: (1) to enable pltf. to maintain his action on an implied contract by L. that he had authority to sign for his wife & C., it was necessary to prove misrepresentation of fact by L., but not that the misrepresentation was due to any wrong or omission on his part; (2) L. was liable in damages to pltf. in respect of his signature on behalf of his wife, but not on behalf of C.—HALBOT v. LENS, [1901] 1 Ch. 344; 70 L. J. Ch. 125; 83 L. T. 702; 49 W. R. 214; 45 Sol. Jo. 150.

Authority determined by—Death of principal—Agent ignorant—Older rule.]—A., who had been in the habit of dealing with pltf. for meat supplied to his house, went abroad, leaving his wife & family resident in England, & died abroad. In an action against the wife for goods supplied after A.'s death, but before information of his death had been received:—Held: (1) the wife had originally full authority to contract & had done no wrong in representing her authority as continuing, or omitting to state any fact within her knowledge relating to it; (2) the revocation of her authority was by the act of God, & continuance of the principal's life was equally within the knowledge of both parties; (3) the wife was not liable.—SMOUT v. ILBERY

the names:—Held: (1) upon the evidence, W. was not in fact authorised in any way to execute such an instrument for M., & she was not bound; (2) J. & W. were liable for breach of warranty of authority; (3) the representation that W. had authority from M. was one of fact, not of law.—GOLD MEDAL FURNITURE CO. v. STEPHENSON (1911), 19 W. L. R. 651.—CAN.

*k. Person acting for estate of deceased person.]—*Pltf. brought an action for the price of goods furnished to deft., who professed, but without any valid authority, to be acting for the estate of a deceased person named R. Pltf. & deft. were equally aware of the death of R., but yet the account was still kept in the name of R., who had in his lifetime had dealings of the same nature with pltf.:—Held: if pltf. could recover at all under the evidence, which was doubtful, he could only do so on a count for the breach of deft.'s implied warranty of his authority to act for the estate.—OUTRAM v. DOYLE (1879), 1 R. & G. 1.—CAN.

2762. — Dissolution of principal company—Agent ignorant.—The principle laid down in Smout v. Ilbery (No. 2761, ante) as to responsibility of an agent whose agency has been determined by the principal's death, applies just as much in the dissolution of a legal entity, such as a corp., as in the death of a living person.

Where pltf. had obtained judgment in an action against a co., & on proceeding to enforce judgment discovered, after the action had been set down for trial, but before the hearing, that the co. had been dissolved under Cos. Act, 1862 (c. 89), ss. 142, 143, the solrs., who appeared for the co. & who at the hearing did not know of its actual dissolution, were ordered to pay pltf. his costs as between solr. & client as from the date of the hearing only, on the ground that they had not at that date used due diligence to ascertain whether the co. was dissolved or not.—*SALTON v. 2763. — Lunacy of principal—Agent ignorant—Modern rule.—Where an authority given to an agent has, without his knowledge, been determined by the death or lunacy of the principal, & subsequently, the agent has, in the belief that he was acting in pursuance thereof, made a contract or transacted some business with another person, representing that in so doing he was acting on behalf of the principal, the agent is liable, as having impliedly warranted the existence of the authority which he assumed to exercise, to that other person, in respect of damage occasioned to him by reason of the non-existence of that authority.

Solrs. were instructed by a client to conduct his defence to an action which was then threatened & was afterwards commenced against him. Before the commencement of the action the client became, & was certified as being, of unsound mind. In ignorance of his unsoundness of mind, & of his having been so certified, the solrs. entered an appearance for him in the action, & delivered a defence, to which pltf. replied, & other interlocutory proceedings took place in the action. Subsequently the action not then having come to trial, pltf.'s solr. was informed that deft. had been certified as being of unsound mind; & an application was made on behalf of pltf. at chambers for an order that the appearance & all subsequent proceedings in the action should be struck out, & that the solrs. who had assumed to act for deft. should be ordered personally to pay pltf.'s costs of the action up to date on the ground that they had so acted without authority. The master made an order that the appearance & subsequent proceedings in the action should be struck out, but refused to make an order for payment of pltf.'s costs by the solrs. personally, which refusal was on appeal affirmed by the judge at chambers. Pltf. having appealed to the C. 2765. Third party in error as to actual scope of agent's authority.—Directors of a shipping co. employed pltf.s., shipbrokers, to procure a purchaser for all the co.'s ships. Pltf.s. introduced C., but negotiations with C. went off upon an objection urged by C.'s solr. that the directors had no power to sell all the ships except in the event of the winding up of the co. with the consent of the shareholders which had not been obtained. In an action against the directors for breach of warranty of authority:—Held: (1) the proposed sale was within the directors' power & would have bound the co.; (2) the action was not maintainable.—WILSON v. MIERS (1861), 10 C. B. N. S. 348; 3 L. T. 780; 142 E. R. 486.

2767. Agent's misrepresentation—One of law, not of fact.—The secretary of a ry. co. stated to pltf., who was desirous of advancing money on debentures, that the co. would issue him a bond for £1,500, but the co. was not yet in a position to issue permanent debentures, though it expected to be able to do so in four or five months. Pltf. at same time received a prospectus, showing that the co. was incorporated by Act of Parliament, & that three persons named were directors. Pltf. advanced the money, & received in exchange a Lloyd's bond signed by the secretary whereby the co. purported to acknowledge the debt & to covenant to pay it with interest at 6 per cent. The co. having ceased to pay interest & being in difficulties, pltf. sued the

2769.—Plffs. brought an action against defts. for breach of warranty of authority to charter to plffs. a ship belonging to A. The authority relied upon was given to defts. by A., a shipowner at Naples, who sent a telegram to defts. in the following words, "You authorise fix steamer prompt loading 3,000 tons coal Newport Cagliari Messina or Palermo twenty shillings. If cannot better wire immediately." A. refused to let a ship & repudiated the charter, his reason being that his authority to defts. was to hire a ship & not to let one:—Held: if the telegram was ambiguous defts. had acted bonâ fide & reasonably in interpreting it as they had done; (2) the shipowner would have been responsible to plffs. for the interpretation which his agents had bonâ fide & reasonably placed upon ambiguous instructions; (3) the actual charterparty entered into was outside the authority in whatever way it was read, & plffs. were entitled to judgment.—*WEIGALL & Co. v. 2771.—On Mar. 28, 1890, a co.'s board of directors offered to pay half the amount of the invoice for certain goods, supplied by E. & Co., by first mtge. 6 per cent. debentures, & half by the co.'s acceptance. This was accepted by E. & Co., & letters passed between their manager & the secretary of the co. completing the arrangements. Deft. H. was one of the directors of the co., & chairman of the meeting of Mar. 28, 1890. The amount required to be paid by debentures was £600. At the time of this agreement the co. had signed & sealed the whole of the first issue of debentures amounting to £70,000. All these debentures except £1,650 had been allotted; & in Jan., 1890, £1,500 of these unissued debentures had been pledged with the co.'s bankers to secure a loan from them of £5,000. Only £150 of these debentures remained in the director's own hands. In Nov., 1890, the co. was ordered to be wound up. No debentures were ever given to E. & Co., & they brought an action against H., claiming he had represented that he had authority to agree to allotment of the debentures, & requiring him personally to make good the representation:—Held: (1) there was no legal ground upon which H. could be held personally liable; (2) the action must be dismissed, but without costs.—*ELKINGTON & Co. v. 2772.—Pltf. sued for specific performance of a contract for sale of the M. estate. The property was placed by five of defts., sisters, taking in equal shares under a will, in the hands of sixth deft., G., an estate agent, for sale. G. wrote pltf.: "Although we can agree price now, we cannot make a formal contract until the will is proved." Later he wired he could close for £21,250, subject to more formal contract. Pltf. wrote accepting, & indorsing cheque for the deposit. A formal agreement was prepared, but the five first defts. refused to execute it. Pltf. claimed damages & specific performance against them, & against G. return of the deposit & damages for breach of warranty of authority. The action having been dismissed for want of a contract in writing to satisfy Stat. Frauds:—Held: (1) there was no authority to make a complete contract, & G. never represented he had such 2770 ii.—P., tenant for life of an estate vested in trustees, with powers of sale, employed H. & S. to negotiate a sale, believing the trustees would ratify his act, but without authority from them; & a rental & conditions of sale were prepared, in which the estate was mentioned as being vested in the trustees on trust for sale, & P.'s name was not mentioned. P., in correspondence with H. & S., treated himself as having authority to conclude a sale. M. offered H. & S. a sum of £7,000 for the estate, which offer was communicated to P., but refused by him; P. subsequently wrote to D., his solr., that if M. offered £7,000 D. might accept the offer. M. shortly afterwards offered £7,250, & D. wrote a letter stating that on behalf of the trustees he accepted the offer, subject to the rental & conditions of sale. P. was subsequently offered £7,500 for the estate, upon which he &

the trustees repudiated the act of D., & refused to complete with M. In order to provide himself with the necessary purchase-money, M. sold out certain bank shares, & thereby sustained loss. M. brought an action against P., alleging that P. had contracted & undertaken that he had authority from the trustees to sell, & alleging that P. had contracted & undertaken that D. had such authority:—Held: pltf. could not recover loss of bank shares, as P. had not so contracted & undertaken.—*MAXWELL v. 2770 iii.—Signature "agent" not such representation.—An agreement was made between plffs. of the one part & a railway co., by their agent, of the other part, by which plffs. contracted to furnish goods on the terms specified. The agreement was signed & sealed by plffs., & by deft., styling himself "agent." No representation as to authority was shown to have been made by deft., but it was proved that after the co. had accepted & paid for a portion of the goods they refused to carry out the contract, & defeated plffs.

in an action upon it by setting up the want of their corporate seal:—Held: this evidence was insufficient to sustain an action against deft. for falsely representing to plffs. that he had authority to bind the co.—MCDONALD v. McDONALD (1859), 17 U. C. R. 377.—CAN.

2770 iv.—Signature "as agent" not such representation.—Where the facts as to agency are within the knowledge of the ostensible agent, but not of the other contracting party, the fact that the former signs the contract "as agent" amounts to a representation that he has authority to contract. But where the other party knew that no authority to contract originally existed, & a document obtained at the instance of both to supply that authority was jointly interpreted & was read by both as authorising the ostensible agent to contract, & where although both were mistaken, yet both had exactly the same knowledge of the facts:—Held: a representation of agency could not be implied from the fact that the ostensible agent signed the contract "as agent."—*BLOWER v. 2778. Effect of notice of limited authority—Signature qualified—Admissibility of usage.—Defts. signed a charterparty as follows: "By telegraphic authority of Lt., S., E. & Co., as agents." The freight agreed upon in the charterparty was 3s. 9d., in accordance with telegraphic instruction. The figure really agreed to by the charterers was 3s. 4d., but a mistake was made by the telegraphic officials in transmitting the message:—Held: (1) defts. not liable for breach of warranty of authority; (2) evidence was admissible to prove the customary interpretation of this particular form of signature. —LILLY, WILSON & Co. v. SMALES, FELES & Co., [1892] 1 Q. B. 456; 40 W. R. 544; 8 T. L. R. 410.

2774. —Qualification insufficient notice.—Appl't., a shipbroker, believing a telegram received from N. authorised him to do so, signed a charterparty on behalf of L. adding the words "as agent." It appeared that L. had not authorised the charterparty to be entered into. The signature of the charterparty was qualified by the words "by telegraphic authority of N.":—Held: (1) appl't. liable to the shipowner for breach of warranty of authority; (2) the qualification was not sufficient to amount to notice that the charterparty was not intended in certain circumstances to be effectual. —SUART v. HAIGH (1893), 9 T. L. R. 488, H. L.

2775. —Auctioneer—Reserve price.—Where goods were offered for sale at an auction subject to an unnamed reserve price, & the auctioneer, upon discovering after the fall of the hammer that the highest bid was not up to reserve price, refused the bidder's request to sign a note or memorandum of contract, the sum offered being above £10:—Held: the auctioneer was not liable to an action at suit of the bidder for damages for refusing to sign any note or memorandum of contract, or for breach of warranty of authority. —McMANUS v. FORTESCUE, 2773 i. Effect of notice of limited authority.—M. & C. being co-owners in equal shares of a vessel which pltf. offered to purchase, C. wrote & wired to M. that he was willing to assign his interest provided pltf. paid cash, in which event he would go to Toronto to close the deal, & later at a meeting of the parties C. expressed his readiness to sell his interest on being paid half the price of the vessel in cash. Pltf. knew that M. had no authority from C. to sign the option of sale on C.'s behalf. M., however, signed an agreement to sell the vessel for half cash:—Held: C. & M. were not partners, & as pltf. knew that M. had no authority from C. to sell on his behalf, M. was not liable for breach of warranty of authority. —Colten v. Wright, 8 E. & B. 647, cited. —BENTLEY v. MURPHY (1902), 1 O. W. R. 273, 726, 845; 2 O. W. R. 1014. —CAN.

2776 i. Where absence of authority not ground of principal's repudiation.—Pltf., acting as agent for his wife, agreed to sell to def't. a portion of land, the price to be $4,000, payable $1,000 down & the balance by two instalments of $750 each & a note for $1,500. There was no memorandum in writing sufficient to satisfy Stat. Frauds. Def't. entered into possession & paid certain instalments of purchase-money to pltf., as agent aforesaid. Six years subsequently the wife repudiated the contract. The def'ts. held pltf. had no authority to sell the land. For misrepresenting his position def't. claimed damages from pltf.:—Held: (1) the law was well settled that where a person purports to make a contract as agent, he is deemed to warrant that he has the necessary authority, but to make the agent personally liable for making an unauthorised contract the contract must have been one which would have been 2776. Where absence of authority not ground of principal's repudiation.—An auctioneer being instructed by the owner of a pony to sell it by auction, subject to a reserve price of £25, inadvertently stated at the auction that the sale was without reserve & knocked the pony down to pltf. for 15 guineas. On discovering his mistake the auctioneer put up the pony again, when it was bought in. No memorandum of sale to pltf. was made. In an action against the auctioneer:—Held: (1) def't. had an implied authority to sell without reserve; (2) the sale to pltf. was binding on the owner, though no action on it could be successfully brought against him, owing to absence of a written memorandum; (3) there was no breach of warranty of authority on def't.'s part. Qu.: whether pltf. had a cause of action against the auctioneer for failing to make a written memorandum of sale. —*RAINBOW v. 2777. Agent acting innocently under forged power.—Where a person, proposing to act as agent of another, induces a third party to enter into a transaction with him on faith of such agency, whereas no such agency exists, he is liable for injury sustained by such third party in consequence of such untrue representation, whether or not he believed he was acting with the authority of the alleged principal.

One of two trustees of stock standing in the joint names in the books of the Bank of England sold it under a power of attorney, to which the signature of his co-trustee was forged, & the bank allowed a stockbroker who innocently acted under the power to transfer the stock to other persons, & was held liable to replace it:—Held: the stockbroker was liable to indemnify the bank upon the ground that enforceable against the principal if he had in fact authorised it; (2) the contract not being in writing was not enforceable against the principal; (3) in the circumstances def't. could not invoke the equitable doctrine of part performance to establish its enforceability, having suffered no legal damage from the breach of warranty by the agent, & the only damages to which a person dealing with an unauthorised agent is entitled being the amount which he could have recovered against the principal. —*DUNCAN v. 2776 ii. —[Defts. made a parol offer to sell to pltf. certain lands, which defts. also by parol represented were listed with them for sale. Pltf. accepted this offer & paid a deposit. An agreement of sale was then signed & the balance of the first payment was paid to defts., who granted a receipt on behalf of their principal. The agreement was not, however, signed by defts. nor by any other person on behalf of the named principal. In an action against defts. as agents misrepresenting their authority:—Held: (1) on the evidence there had been no misrepresentation of authority but only of the ability of their principal to sell the land; (2) in any circumstances, before pltf. could recover upon a breach of warranty of authority he must show that defts. entered into a contract with him, which if they had had authority would be binding on their principal; this they had not done, not having signed any agreement to convey, & only having signed a receipt in the name of their principal, defts. were not liable. —*PEACOCK v. 2776 iii. —[Where an agent, purporting to act for his principal, without authority borrowed money for such principal from a third party, & thereafter his principal became insolvent, & was unable to pay back the whole of the money so borrowed, & had been in no better position when the loan was contracted:—Held: in the absence of any proof of fraud, as the principal was never able to repay the balance of such loan, the loss occasioned to the third party was not due to the want of the agent's authority, & such agent was not liable in respect to same. —LANGFORD v. MOORE, 17 Supreme Court (Cape), 1; 9 Cape Times Reports, 405. —S. AF.

2776 iv. —Loss of commission caused to agent.—M., then a director of def't. co., in a conversation with pltf. assured him that if he, pltf., would procure a purchaser for certain property owned by the co., he felt sure the co. would quote the price at $50,000 & in the event of a sale, would pay pltf. a commission of $50,000, but any abatement of the price down to $500,000 was to be borne by pltf. There was no evidence that M. had any authority to sell the property or employ an agent to find a purchaser. After M. became president of the co., the property was sold for exactly $500,000 by the co. to a purchaser to whom it had been introduced by pltf. to the knowledge of M.:—Held: M. not liable to pltf. for any misrepresentation of authority from the co., to enter into the alleged contract with pltf., or for failing to prevent the co. from selling the property for $500,000 or less. —*BENT v. On demurrer by the directors:—Held: (1) mere excess of authority by an agent did not constitute equitable fraud; (2) any relief in such case must be at law.—STEWART v. AUSTIN (1866), L. Company directors acting ultra vires—Acceptance of bill—Proof of actual damage necessary.—In an action against directors of a co. for false representation that they had authority to bind the co. by their acceptance of a bill of exchange drawn on the co., it is incumbent on pltf. to show he has sustained damage; an action is not maintainable by the indorsee of such bill, unless he show he gave value for it, or was otherwise damaged.—EASTWOOD v. 2783. —. —.]—Two of the directors of a joint-stock co., by a letter to the co.'s bankers, notified that their manager had authority to draw cheques on account of the co. Such two directors did not form a majority of the directors of the co., as required by their Act of incorporation, so as to bind the co. Although the co.'s account was at the time overdrawn, & that fact was known to the two directors, the bankers honoured the manager's cheques on the authority so given to them. In an action brought by the bank against the two directors for advances made on account of the co. upon the faith of their letter:—Held: (1) there was an implied warranty on their part; (2) they were personally liable to the bank to the extent of the sums overdrawn by the manager subsequent to the date of their letter.—CHERRY v. The society was formed under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 32, & had no power to borrow money; & pltf., being unable to get her money back from the society, sued defts. On the above facts the ct. having power to draw inferences:—Held: defts. were liable to pltf. in damages for a breach of warranty of authority, they having, by signing the receipt, in effect represented that they had authority to make a binding contract of loan on behalf of the society, & so induced pltf. to part with her money.—RICHARDSON v. 2785. —. —.]—Issue of debentures.—The directors of a ry. co., which had fully exercised the borrowing powers conferred upon it by its special Act in Aug., 1864, advertised that they were "prepared to receive proposals for loans on mtge. debentures to replace loans falling due." W. (pltf.'s testator) offered a loan of £500; & his offer being accepted, he in the same month sent his cheque for £500 to the directors, for which he requested that a debenture should be issued to him. In pursuance of a resolution of the directors to that effect, the cheque was handed to H., the contractor for the works, who had been (but had then ceased to be) the holder of seven debenture bonds for £500 each; & H. was requested to transfer one of them to W., & it was by the same resolution directed "that such bond be on Oct. 1 exchanged for a new one." H. kept the cheque (which was duly honoured), but was unable to transfer the debenture; & in pursuance of a resolution of the directors of Oct. 5, a new debenture bond for £500 was sealed & sent to pltf. as executor of W. Deft., a director of the co., was a party to each of the above transactions. By a decree of the Ct. of Ch. of Feb. 14, 1868, the above-mentioned debenture was declared void as being for a sum in excess of the borrowing powers of the co.:—Held: (1) deft. was liable as for a breach of warranty; (2) the directors had power in the circumstances to issue a debenture which should be valid & binding upon the co.; (3) pltf. was entitled to recover as against him the £500 together with interest by way of damages.—WEEKS v. 2786. —[By the certified rules of an unincorporated building society the directors might borrow money not exceeding a prescribed amount. Loans were made to the society through its secretary in accordance with advertisements, issued with the authority of the directors, that such loans might be so made by bringing the money to the office of the secretary. In each case a receipt was given by the secretary for the money as a loan to the society, with a written undertaking by him "to procure the promissory note of the directors for the loan," & afterwards, in pursuance to such undertaking, the receipt was exchanged for such note, which always bore the date of the receipt. After an amount had been so borrowed exceeding the limit prescribed by the rules pltf., who had on several previous occasions lent money to the society according to the above mode, paid a sum to the secretary as a loan to the society, & received from him the usual receipt & undertaking, but no promissory note of the directors was ever afterwards given, & the secretary absconded, appropriating that sum, with other moneys of the society, to his own use. In an action against the society & directors, the jury found that the society held out the secretary to pltf. as having authority to receive the loan on their behalf on the terms on which it was received, & that the directors did the same:—Held: (1) such finding was bad in point of law against the society; (2) as the limit for borrowing prescribed by the rules had been exceeded when the loan was made by pltf., the society, which had derived no benefit, was not liable for such loan; (3) (BRAMWELL, L.J., doubting), although there was no fraud on the part of the directors, they were personally liable to pltf. for the money which had been so advanced.—(CHAPLEO v. 2792. Allotment of shares repudiated by allottee.—Sum payable to company for shares allotted.—L. instructed his brokers to apply for fifty shares at £1 each in a co. named. They by mistake applied for & obtained an allotment to L. in another co. L. repudiated the shares, but his name was placed on the register. The co. had a very large number of shares allotted, & in the opinion of the ct. the shares were unsaleable. The co. was soon afterwards wound up, & the name of L. removed on his application from the list of contributors. The official liquidator claimed £50 damages from the brokers for misrepresentation of authority :—Held : (1) the general rule as to measure of damages for breach of warranty of authority was applicable ; (2) the liquidator was entitled to recover from the brokers the amount lost by the co. in losing the contract with L. ; (3) as L. was solvent & the shares unsaleable, that loss was represented by the whole sum of £50 payable for the shares.—Re NATIONAL COFFEE PALACE CO., Ex p. KAIL (1862), 2 F. & F. 709.

2794. Compromise of claim repudiated by debtor.—Sum agreed to be paid.—Pltf. brought an action in England against a marine insurance co. carrying on business in America, & obtained judgment in default of appearance for £1,000. Negotiations for settlement took place between pltf. & defts., agents of the co. in England, & defts. by mistake represented to pltf. in good faith that they were authorised by the co. to offer £300 in settlement of pltf.'s claim. Pltf., relying upon the accuracy of the representation, entered into agreement with defts. on behalf of the co. for settlement of his claim for £300, but it appeared defts. were not authorised to make the agreement, & he was unable to enforce performance of it. In an action against defts. to recover damages for breach of warranty of authority, defts. paid into ct. a sum representing the expenses incurred by pltf. in negotiating the compromise :—Held : (1) the measure of damages was the loss by pltf. of the gain which he would have derived from the contract defts. warranted should be made ; (2) as the judgment obtained by him was of no value (for the co. had no assets in England, & judgment could not in the circumstances be enforced in American etc.), & the value of pltf.'s remedy on the policy could not be estimated, pltf. was entitled to recover from defts. £300 in addition to the sum paid into ct.—*MEEK v. 2797. — Costs of action for specific performance — Not loss on resale.]—Pltf. being in occupation of a house & shop, as assignee of a term which would expire on Mar. 25, 1867, at a rent of £65 a year, deft. (who had for several years acted as agent for the freeholder in receipt of rents of the property) on Nov. 16, 1863, agreed in writing, "on behalf of his brother" (the freeholder), to grant pltf. at expiration of the existing term a renewed lease for twenty-one years, at a rent of £70 a year, & upon terms slightly varying from those of the former lease, pltf. contracting in the meantime to modernise the house by putting in a new shop-front at her own expense. Pltf. put in a new shop-front at an expense of £50, & expended £10 more in permanently improving the premises, & on June 28, 1865, contracted with B. to sell him all her interest in existing & future leases for a premium of £150, B. taking the shop fixtures & stock at a valuation. B. was let into possession under this agreement, & paid the premium, etc. Neither deft. nor his brother had notice of the agreement. Deft. had no authority from his brother to make the agreement of Nov. 16, 1863, & the latter refused to ratify it. Pltf., who had no notice of deft.'s want of authority to make the agreement, filed a bill (in conjunction with B.) against deft.'s brother for specific performance, which was dismissed with costs, paid by her. B., who had been turned out of possession, brought an action against pltf. upon her contract with him, & on a reference recovered damages to the amount of £280, made up as follows:—£205 assessed by the arbitrator as value of the lease; £22 10s. for loss incurred by B. on resale of fixtures he had brought upon the premises; £35 for loss of business by removal; £17 10s. for solr.'s charges. These, together with costs of the action & reference, were paid by pltf. :—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover against deft. all costs paid & incurred by her in the Chancery suit, also value of the lease she had lost through non-performance of the agreement of Nov. 16, 1863 (assumed to be £205), but not damages & costs which arose out of her agreement for resale of the lease to B., these not necessarily or naturally resulting from the wrongful act of deft., & being too remote.—*SPEDDING v. the credit of the co. for medical attendance on a servant of the co. Pltf. had failed in a previous action in a ct. ct. against the co. to recover the amount of his bill, on the ground that the manager had no authority, & sought in this action to recover the costs of the ct. ct. action which he had had to pay. Deft. having paid the amount of the bill into ct. :—Held: the costs incurred in the ct. ct. could not be recovered. Semble: there was no warranty of authority.—*ROBSON v. 2801. Purchase repudiated by purchaser—Value of goods sold—Costs of action against supposed purchaser.]—The declaration stated that deft. falsely & fraudulently represented to pltf. that he was authorised by I. to order, & did order, certain quantities of stone for the building of a church to be charged to I. & others, & did falsely & fraudulently write to pltf. a letter (set out); & that pltf., relying on the representation of deft., supplied the stone, whereas deft. had no authority to order it, & I. refusing to pay for it, pltf. brought an action against him for the price & failed in it, & were obliged to pay I.'s costs:—Held: (1) the declaration was sufficient even if the letter set out did not itself show a false representation of authority; (2) pltf. were entitled to recover, by way of damages, not only the price of the stone supplied, but the costs which they had paid in the action against I.—*RANDELL v. 2802. — Difference between contract price & price on resale.]—Deft., as agent of R., entered into a contract with pltf. for purchase of a ship at a certain price & required extra work to be done. R. not having given deft. authority, repudiated the contract, & pltf. sold the ship at a lower price. Both contract price & price on resale were fair market value of the ship. 2803. Sale repudiated by sellers—Difference between contract & market price—Costs of action

2803 I. Sale repudiated by sellers—Expenses incurred—Loss of profit.]—An agent who, by misrepresentation of his authority, procures a person to enter into an agreement with his principals for the purchase of land, will be personally liable to the intending purchaser for damages in an action for specific performance against himself & his principals, if they afterwards repudiate the agreement & prove that the agent had no authority to bind them. Collen v. Wright (1857), 8 E. & B. 647; Halbet v. Lens, [1901] 1 Ch. 344; & Starkey v. Bank of England, [1903] A. C. 114, cited. In such case, pltf. is entitled not only to expenses actually incurred, but also to loss of the profit he would have made if the bargain had been

2803 II. — Deposit paid on contract.]—Deft. was authorised to sell a block of land for $37,000 cash. He made an agreement with pltf., which was reduced to writing & signed by him as agent on behalf of the owners, to sell the land to pltf. for $37,000, of which $1,000 was to be cash, & the balance was to be paid in a foreign country upon the delivery to a bank there of transfers & duplicate certificates of title. The cash payment was made to

def. The owners refused to ratify the contract & the sale fell through. Pltf. then brought an action for money had & received :—Held: treating the action as one of recovery of the money because of misrepresentation by deft. as to his authority to enter into the contract, or for damages for breach of warranty, deft. had in fact exceeded his authority, & by entering into & signing the agreement of sale he had represented to pltf. that he had the authority of his principals to the extent represented by the agreement, & pltf. was entitled to recover from him $1,000. Cherry v. Colonial Bank of Australasia, L. R. 3 P. C. 24, & Beattie v. Ebury, L. R. 7 H. L. 102, cited.—MOMANTUS v. PORTER (1910), 15 W. L. R. 269.—CAN.

against supposed seller.]—Deft., acting as broker for both buyer & sellers, made a contract for sale of wool on certain terms. The sellers afterwards repudiated the contract, alleging (as was the fact) that they had not authorised deft. to sell on those terms. The wool had been imported from California, & could have been exported to America free of duty; there was no other wool similarly circumstanced in the market. Deft. persisting that he had authority, the buyer filed a bill in Chancery for specific performance against the sellers, & obtained an interim injunction; the bill was dismissed & the injunction dissolved, with costs, on the ground of deft.'s want of authority. In an action by the buyer against deft. for breach of his promise that he had authority:—Held: pltf. was entitled to recover, as damages, taxed costs of the Chancery suit & pltf.'s own costs taxed as between solr. & client; & also the difference between the contract price & the value of that or similar wool, taking into account that it could have been exported duty free to America, & all mercantile circumstances affecting value.—*HUGHES v. 2804. ——— Costs of investigating title.]

—F. & four others were joint-owners of an estate, which they were desirous of selling & had advertised for sale. F., representing that he had authority from his co-owners, contracted to sell the estate to pltf. & sent him an abstract of title. The co-owners repudiated the contract, & concluded a sale at a higher price to another person. Pltf., conceiving the four owners had bound themselves by the terms of the advertisement, sued them for breach of contract, & continued his action after they had sworn in answer to interrogatories that F. had no authority to make the contract, & was non-suited. In an action against F. for misrepresentation of authority:—Held: (1) the proper measure of damages was—(a) costs of investigating the title, (b) costs incurred & paid by pltf. in the action against the four down to the time when the answers to interrogatories had been received & considered by pltf.'s legal advisers, & (c) the difference between the contract price & market price of the estate, the sum for which it afterwards sold being prima facie evidence of the latter; (2) pltf. could not recover for loss on resale of horses, etc., bought for stocking land, without notice to F., before the title had been investigated, or possession of land given.—*GODWIN v. 2806 i. 2808 i. Deposit on purchase price received by vendor's agent.]—Pltf., an infant, had, under contract of sale, paid part of the purchase-money to the 2808. Deposit on purchase price received by vendor's agent—Payment to principal.]—An attorney, who was also an auctioneer, received a deposit on property which he had sold by auction, & after queries raised on the title, & before they were cleared, paid over the deposit to his principal. On a demand of the deposit by the buyer he answered that his principal would not consent to return it, & would enforce the contract:—Held: the buyer might recover the deposit from the auctioneer as money had & received to pltf.'s use, (1) because deft., as attorney, had notice that the title had not been completed before he paid over the money, (2) because he misled pltf. to sue himself, by not saying he had paid it over.—*EDWARDS v. 2809. Deposit on sale—Vendor's agent—Agent not stakeholder.]—On sale of premises by auction, the memorandum of agreement to purchase & sell was signed by the auctioneer as agent for the purchaser, & by the vendor's attorney, subscribing himself as "agent for S." the vendor. The purchaser paid his deposit to the attorney, who gave

2809 i. Deposit on sale—Vendor's agent —Agent not stakeholder.]—Agents for a disclosed principal on sale of land, to whom the purchase-money is paid, as agents, are not stakeholders like auctioneers, & not bound in law to retain the purchase-money as between vendor & purchaser until the performance or rescission of the contract.—*ATWOOD v. a receipt, signed by himself as "agent for S." The sale going off through the vendor's default, & the deposit money not being returned:—Held: the purchaser could not bring an action of money had & received against the attorney, for he was not a stakeholder, but merely the vendor's agent, & payment of the deposit to him was payment to the vendor.—BAMFORD v. SHUTTLEWORTH (1840), 11 Ad. & El. 926; 113 E. R. 666.

2810. — Part paid to principal—Part retained by agent.—S., owner of a farm, orally employed deft. to sell it for him. Deft., without naming the seller, agreed by a written memorandum to sell the farm to pltf. for £2,700, & gave instructions to an attorney to prepare a contract of sale by S. to pltf. Pltf. paid deft. £100 deposit, & afterwards signed the contract for sale by S. to himself, by which contract he agreed to pay down immediately on its execution £100 as deposit, for which S. undertook to pay interest at 4 per cent. till completion of the purchase. The contract was afterwards rescinded for want of title in S. Deft., before he had notice of the rescinding, paid S. £50, & retained the other £50, without consent of S., under agreement by S. to give him one half of any amount above £2,000 which deft. might get for the farm:—Held: pltf. could not recover any part of the £100 from deft.—HURLEY v. BAKER (1846), 16 M. & W. 26; 16 L. J. Ex. 273; 153 E. R. 1083.

2811. — Agent acting for both parties.—A. acted as solr. for both parties in purchase of an estate, & received the purchase-money as agent of the vendor. The purchaser afterwards lost the estate, a mtgee. having a prior claim. The purchaser then presented a petition against A. praying payment out of the purchase-money in his hands of the loss he had sustained, or that he might indemnify him in respect thereof:—Held: as the purchase-money had come into the hands of the solr. as agent of the vendor, & not of petitioner, the ct. could not interfere.—Re HINTON (1851), 18 L. T. O. S. 37.

2812. — Vendor's agent.—On sale of premises by auction the purchaser paid a deposit to the vendor's solr. as agent for the vendor. The sale went off through default of the vendor, & the purchaser brought an action to recover the deposit from the solr.:—Held: (1) payment of the deposit to the solr. was equivalent to payment to the vendor; (2) the action could not be maintained.—ELLIS v. GOULTON, [1893] 1 Q. B. 350; 62 L. J. Q. B. 232; 68 L. T. 144; 41 W. R. 411; 9 T. L. R. 223; 4 R. 267.

2813. — Paid over at request of vendor—Without concurrence of purchaser.—On a contract for purchase, part of the purchase-money was paid as a "deposit" to the vendor's solr., who paid it away at the desire of the vendor, without concurrence of the purchaser. This created a difficulty in completing the purchase, as a mtgee. of the estate would not join in the conveyance without payment to him of the deposit. In a suit by the purchaser for specific performance:—Held: the solr. was liable to make good the money.—WIGGINS v. LORD (1841), 4 Beav. 30; 40 E. R. 248.

Annotation:—Refd. Edgell v. Day (1865), L. R. 1 C. P. 80.

2814. — Agent entitled to part price as commission—Contract rescinded by mutual consent.—Deft. was instructed by T. to sell certain premises, on the terms that anything he might obtain beyond £2,200 he might keep. Deft. sold to pltf. for £2,600 & received from pltf. £100 as a deposit. On discovering the circumstances, pltf. & T. agreed to abandon the contract made by deft. & to divide the difference, i.e., that pltf. should pay T. £2,400 for the premises. In an action against deft. to recover the deposit as money had & received:—Held: the action was maintainable.—EAST LANCASHIRE RY. CO. v. ETTEFIELD (1852), 18 L. T. O. S. 65, 279.

2815. Agent receiving proceeds of forged bill—Agent holding himself out as principal.—A bill-broker who discounts a bill with a money-dealer on behalf of a customer, but acts in the transaction as a principal, is liable, if the bill turns out to be a forgery, to repay the money received for the bill, although he was unaware of the forgery & did not indorse the bill.—GUNNEY v. WOMERSLEY (1854), 4 E. & B. 133; 24 L. J. Q. B. 46; 24 L. T. O. S. 71; 1 Jur. N. S. 328; 3 C. L. R. 3; 119 E. R. 51.

2816. Agent converting third party's property—Effect of waiver of conversion—Part payment over to principal.—Where, in the case of a conversion by two joint tortfeasors, one of whom, as between themselves, has acted as principal & one as agent, the injured party elects to waive his remedy for damages against the agent & to proceed against him by way of account, the injured party is entitled to their remedy, if any, being against the agent.—STRICKLAND v. VANSITTART (1868), 18 C. P. 463.—CAN.

ment which provided that 20 per cent. of the purchase-money should be paid into his hands as a deposit, & the balance by instalments. To secure payment pltf. executed a mtgee. of land to deft. & afterwards instructed him to sell it. He sold it to D., & received a deposit. Pltf. then gave deft. notice that he did not intend to proceed further in the contract with C., & required payment of the deposit received from D. on his behalf. Deft. declined to pay it over, having, as he alleged, applied it, less his commission, in satisfaction of the amount due to C. An action was brought to recover the money, & pltf. obtained a verdict for the amount, less deft.'s commission. On a rule to show cause why judgment should not be entered for deft.:—Held: although there was no contract or privity between deft. & C. with respect to the money in question, deft. nevertheless held it as he would have done had it been paid to him by pltf. at the time of the contract with C., & as agent for C., & he was either agent both for pltf. & C., & therefore a stakeholder, or agent for C. only, & in either case pltf.

was not entitled to recover unless he could set up good grounds for refusing to complete his contract with C.—DOUGLAS v. MATSON, 2 J. R. N. S. S. C. 158.—N.Z.

2869 iii. — Agent acting in unauthorised manner.—Deft.'s agent contracted in writing to sell to pltf. all the pine timber on lands of deft., both standing timber & that cut after a date named, as to the latter of which his authority was undisputed. The agent received from pltf. $75 on account, with the private understanding that in case deft.'s claim to logs cut before the date referred to could not be sustained, as turned out to be the case, the $75 should be returned. As soon as deft. was informed of the sale of the standing timber she repudiated it. It appeared pltf. had been aware, when they entered into the agreement, that the agent had no authority to sell that timber. In an action against deft. to recover the $75 paid to her agent, which the latter retained in his hands:—Held: the contract was an entire one, & pltf. could not recover against deft., their remedy, if any, being against the agent.—STRICKLAND v. VANSITTART (1868), 18 C. P. 463.—CAN.

q. Agent holding principal's property—Action by creditor of principal.—A creditor has a right of action against the agent of his debtor, in whose name real estate of the debtor is registered, to have it declared that such property really belongs to the debtor, but if it appears the action is unnecessary, the judgment maintaining it will be confirmed without costs in either et.—*SCHWOB v. r. Promissory note payable to agent's own order.—A person dealing with an agent who gives him as payment a promissory note, payable to his (the agent's) order personally, without reference to his principal, has no recourse against the latter to recover the amount which the agent has appropriated after discounting the note.—BEAUDOIN v. TRUSTEE (1900), 48 W. R. 693; 44 Sol. Jo. 483, C. A.

2817. Effect of receipt given by agent.—A receipt signed by an agent for principals is not evidence to support an action for money had & received against him to recover the money.—EDDEN v. READ (1813), 3 Camp. 338.

2818. Money placed to principal's credit in account.—If money be paid by mistake to an agent, & placed by him to account of his principal, but not paid over, money had & received to the use of the person so paying it by mistake will lie against the agent. The mere passing of such money in account or making rest, without new credit given, fresh bills accepted, or further sum advanced for principal in consequence of it, is not equivalent to a payment of it over.—*BULLER v. 2819. Overpayment for goods—Settlement in account with principal.—Where debt received from his principal abroad a bar of silver & took it to plffs., who melted it & sent a piece to an assayer to be assayed at debt's expense, & paid a price for the bar to debt. as for the number of ounces of silver which by the assay it was calculated to contain, which number was afterwards discovered to exceed the true number:—Held: plffs. might, after having offered to return the bar, have money had & received against debt. for the price thus paid to him under a mistake, although debt. had forwarded his account to his principal & in it had placed the price received to the credit of his principal.

An agent who receives money for his principal is liable as a principal so long as he stands in his original situation, & until there has been a change of circumstances by his having paid over the money to his principal or done something equivalent to it. Here it is admitted that no money has been paid over by debt. to his principal, nor has there been any other thing done by him to create a change of circumstances. The only question then is, whether the action lies against debt. considering it as if it were an action against the principal. Now this is a case of mutual innocence & equal error, which is not an unusual case for money had & received. Our decision will not clash with the rule caveat emptor, for here both parties were under a mutual error, neither of them being to exercise nor exercising any judgment upon the subject. This is the proper case for money had & received.—(LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—COX v. PRENTICE (1815), 3 M. & S. 344, 348; 105 E. R. 641.

2820. Through unjustifiable refusal to desist from selling under mortgage.—The solr. of a mtge. with a power of sale refused to desist from selling unless the mtgor. would pay expenses, with which he was not properly chargeable:—Held: money paid under such compulsion might be recovered back.—*CLOSE v. 2821. Through unjustifiable retention of deeds.—A lease to which it was necessary C. should be a confirming party was about to be granted to plff. The attorney of the lessors applied to C. for that purpose, & debt., as C.'s attorney, answered the application, requiring certain documents to be furnished, etc., for which business debt. had a claim on C. It was agreed that C. should concur in the lease on the terms, as debt. contended, that all past costs, as well as those to be occasioned by his joining in the lease should be paid by lessors, as plff. contended, that the latter costs only should be paid. The lease, having been engrossed & executed by lessors, was sent to debt. to procure C.'s execution; debt. sent an account of his costs against C. to the attorney of the lessors, who complained of the amount, on which debt. said C. should not execute unless that amount was paid him; & when C. had executed, refused to deliver up the lease until the whole amount was paid. The attorney of the lessors, after tendering a smaller sum to debt., paid the larger sum under protest, for plff.

a. Overpayment for land—Induced by agent's misrepresentation—Excess retained by agent.—A vendor of land having authorised his agent to sell land at £10 per acre, the agent induced plff. to purchase it for £11 per acre by falsely representing that that was the lowest price his principal would accept. The agent having retained the extra £1 per acre for himself, plff. brought an action against him to recover it:—Held: as it was not alleged that the agent made the false representation, knowing it to be untrue, he was not entitled to recover.—SMART v. LOBB (1890), 16 V. L. R. 496.—AUS.

t. Overpayment on cheque—Principal not benefited.—In an action by a bank to recover £25, alleged to have been paid by their teller in excess of cheque drawn by the secretary of debts, & handed to their messenger:—Held: debts. were not liable for what was paid to their agent in mistake, unless they authorised their messenger to receive the amount or afterwards received & benefited by it.—CITY BANK v. HARBOR COMRS. OF MONTREAL (1857), 1 L. C. J. 288.—CAN.

u. Overpayment of contribution to average loss.—Plffs., consignees of goods shipped in a vessel for which debts. were agents, on asking for a delivery order, were required by debts. to pay a deposit of 25 per cent. on invoice value of goods & enter into a general average bond. This they did. On adjustment of average it was found that the proportion due by plffs. was less than the amount deposited by them. On their demanding a repayment of the balance, debts. offered a less sum. Plffs. then brought an action for money had & received. A verdict was, by consent, returned for plffs., the point being reserved whether the action ought not to have been brought, not against the agents, but against their principals:—Held: the action would lie.—ABRAHAM v. WATSON (1886), 7 N. S. W. 152.—AUS.

v. Money received by solicitor—Overpaid by debtor on solicitor's misrepresentation.—S. obtained judgment against H. II. thereupon paid K., the attorney of S. in the action, a much larger sum upon K.'s representation the judgment & costs amounted to that sum. H. sought to recover the overplus from S.:—Held: as K. had authority to receive payment in satisfaction of the judgment on behalf of S., H. was entitled to recover the amount of the overpayment, which was made in error, from S.—*HUGO v. 2822. Money received by clerk of guardian —On compromise of proceedings made under mistake—Agent of third party in pari delicto.]—Guardians of a poor law union indicted pltf. for disobeying an order of sessions for maintenance of a bastard. Before trial, pltf. offered a compromise; & the clerk to the guardians, on their behalf, agreed with him for a sum on account of costs & maintenance, which he paid, & the indictment was dropped. Afterwards pltf. discovered that the order of sessions was defective & void, & he brought assumpsit against the clerk for money had & received:—Held: (1) the clerk was not liable, having done nothing in the prosecution beyond preferring the indictment; (2) if the compromise was illegal, pltf., being in pari delicto with the other parties offending, could not sue them for money which he had paid.—GOODALL v. LOWNDES (1844), 6 Q. B. 464; 8 J. P. Jo. 771; 9 Jur. 177; 115 E. R. 173.

2823. Wrongful detention of deeds—Payment under protest.]—The mtgee. of lands handed over the deeds to his attorney. The mtgor. paid the principal & interest, & the lands were reconveyed to him:—Held: (1) the attorney could not retain the deeds against him as security for the expenses of the transaction due from mtgee. to the attorney; (2) mtgor., having, under protest, paid such expenses to the attorney in order to get the deeds back, might maintain assumpsit for money had & received against the attorney for the money so paid; (3) the attorney was a principal in the transaction, & could not allege that the action should have been brought against the mtgee.—WAKEFIELD v. NEWBON (1844), 6 Q. B. 276; 13 L. J. Q. B. 258; 3 L. T. O. S. 100; 8 Jur. 735; 115 E. R. 107.

2824. Overpayment of freight—Part received as agents for another company.]—The B. Ry. & G. W. Ry. were continuous lines, but worked by independent cos., & by their Acts of Parliament were bound to charge all persons equally in same circumstances for carriage of goods, etc. By the scale bills, issued by each co., certain sums were specified as charges for carriage of goods where goods were to be collected & delivered by the cos.; a smaller sum was specified as chargeable where goods were to be collected & delivered by parties themselves. Pltf., a carrier, sent certain goods he had undertaken to collect & deliver on his own account by B. Ry. Co., to be carried upon both lines of ry., but objected to the charges as being excessive, & paid the whole amount claimed under protest. The ct. having held that he was entitled to recover back the amount so paid in excess of what was a fair & reasonable charge in an action of money had & received:—Held: the whole sum so paid in excess was recoverable from B. Ry. Co., although the co. had received a portion of it as agents only of G. W. Ry. Co.—PARKER v. BRISTOL & EXETER RY. CO. (1851), 6 Exch. 702; 6 Ry. & Can. Cas. 776; 20 L. J. Ex. 442; 17 L. T. O. S. 202; 155 E. R. 726.

2825. Money received by solicitor of petitioning creditor—From debtor for procuring adjournment of hearing.]—Pending the hearing of a bkpcy. petition, & with notice of the act of bkpcy. on which it was founded, the solr. of petitioning creditor, as his agent, received from debtor various sums of money as consideration for successive adjournments of the hearing of the petition, & these sums he paid over, or accounted for, to his client (petitioning creditor). Afterwards an adjudication was made on the petition:—Held: the solr. having received the money with notice of the act of bkpcy. to which the title of the trustee related back, the payment by him was a wrongful act, & he was liable to repay the money to the trustee, & was not discharged by the payment to his own principal.—*Re CHAPMAN, Ex p. 2826. Purpose becoming impossible.]—The position of a banker does not differ from that of any other recipient of money acting as factor or agent; & money paid to a banker under a mistake of fact can be successfully redemanded from him by the person who so paid it.

Appl., who lived in England, was English manager of a mine in Mexico. By a system of revolving credit, he agreed to pay to resps. moneys paid to New York bankers of the mine. For this purpose he had paid £500 to resps. The New York bank stopped payment, & appl. immediately demanded repayment of the £500. The New York bank was largely indebted to resps., who claimed to retain the £500:—Held: appl. was entitled to be repaid the £500.—KERRISON v. GLYN, MILLS, CURRIE & CO. (1911), 81 L. J. K. B. 465; 105 L. T. 721; 28 T. L. R. 106; 17 Com. Cas. 41, H. L.

2827. Money received by clerk—Acting as joint attorney with master.]—Deft.'s name had been inserted in a power of attorney jointly with his father, an attorney, whose clerk he was, for purpose of receiving from the Accountant-General of the Ct. of Chancery some money due to pltf.:—Held: as deft.'s name was inserted in the power of attorney, he must be taken to have received the money in his independent character, & not as clerk to his father.—BOULDY v. WELSH (1859), 33 L. T. O. S. 94.

ii. Money paid over to Principal or equivalent Act.

2828. Where money paid over to principal.]—In general the principle of law is clear that, if money be mispaid to an agent expressly for a principal, & the agent has paid it over, he is not liable in an action by the person who mispaid it, & the person who made the mistake is not without redress, but has his remedy over against the principal (LORD

 2828 i. Where money paid over to principal.]—Deft. wrongfully seized goods of pltf., claiming to hold them for stumpage, & pltf., to obtain their release, paid the amount claimed:—Held: (1) the fact of deft. acting as agent of another, to whom he had paid the money before action, would not protect him, & he was liable for money had & received; (2) in such action it was necessary for pltf. to prove payment of the money, that it was paid under compulsion, & that it was received by deft. wrongfully.—LYNCH v. KEEGAN (1876), 3 Pug. 645.—CAN.

2828 ii. —.]—Deft. W., as liquidator of a partnership, collected certain moneys payable under an agreement between pltf. & the firm, & treated these moneys as moneys of the firm, accounting to the firm for them. As a matter of fact the firm had only a small interest in the moneys collected. In an action for the money on the ground that deft. W. was trustee for pltf. & responsible to him for payment:—Held: there never was any agreement or arrangement made between pltf. & deft. W., whereby the latter was to assume responsibility; there was no privity of contract between pltf. & deft. W.; deft. W. was not acting for pltf., but simply as the servant of S. & Co.; a claim for money received cannot in general be made against a sub-agent who receives it upon account of the agent without any privity or relation to the principal to whose use 2830. Insurance loss paid to agent—On fraudulent policy—Effect of payment to assured.]—Three underwriters on representation of a loss paid their subscriptions, amounting to £800, to the broker, who, by their joint authority, paid over £300. The loss turned out to be fraudulent, & one of the underwriters brought an action against the broker, to recover back his £200 :—Held : (1) the broker was entitled to set off the £300 paid over against this demand; (2) the ct. could not enter into the account to see what each party was entitled to respectively; (3) either the other underwriters should have joined in the action, or pltf. should have resorted to a ct. of equity.—SILVA v. LINDER (1816), 2 Marsh. 437.

2831. Proceeds of bill paid on unauthorised endorsement—Payment to principal.]—Bills of exchange drawn upon & accepted by pltf. co., in favour of H. in India, were afterwards indorsed to D. & C. by an agent for H. under a supposed authority given by a power of attorney, which was seen & inspected by the acceptors; D. & C. indorsed the bills to B. & Co., their bankers, in order that the latter might, as their agents, present them for payment when due; B. & Co. put their names on the back of the bills, presented them for payment, & received the amount, which they soon after paid over to their principals. It was afterwards discovered that the power of attorney given by H. did not authorise his agent to indorse the bills, & the administrator of H., in an action against the acceptors, recovered the amount of them. The acceptors then brought an action against B. & Co., & declared on a supposed undertaking by them that they, as holders, were entitled to receive the amount of the bills. The jury found that pltf. paid the bills on faith of the power of attorney, & not of the indorsement by defts., & that defts. paid over the money before they had notice of the invalidity of the first indorsement :—Held : in these circumstances pltf. could not recover against defts.—EAST INDIA CO. v. 2832. Payment—Knowledge of principal's embarrassment.]—Def't., an auctioneer, employed by a person in embarrassed circumstances to sell his property, sold same, & paid proceeds to order of his employer, who shortly afterwards was declared insolvent, & pltf. was chosen assignee of his estate :—Held : def't. being agent merely for such employer, was justified in so paying over such proceeds to his order, although he was aware of his embarrassment.—WHITE v. 2833. — Proceeds paid over to principal.]—An agent applied to a banking co. on several occasions to discount bills drawn by his principal, & at commencement of these transactions informed the co. who the drawer & acceptors were, & inquired whether the co. would discount the bill without requiring the agent to indorse it. 2828 iv. — Money received by innocent agent through fraud of principal.]—A Treasury officer, under the imposition of a gross fraud, paid money to def't., who was the innocent agent of the person who contrived the fraud. In paying the money the Treasury officer neglected no reasonable precaution, nor was he in any way guilty of carelessness :—Held : def't. was bound to repay the money received by him, & he could not defend himself by the plea that he had paid it to his principal.—SHUGAN CHAND v. 2830 I. Insurance loss paid to agent—On fraudulent policy—Effect of payment to assured.]—Def't. was agent for the owners of a vessel, & acting as such, had her insured with pltf. in the sum of $800. On the vessel being lost pltf. paid him the full amount, & then subsequently discovered that the policy had been void on the ground of over-insurance, the vessel being valued at $4,000 only, while she was insured in two other cos. for $6,200 prior to being insured with pltf., of which fact they had no knowledge when they insured her. When this became known to them they sought to recover back the amount paid def't. Def't. had not been aware of the over-insurance, & had acted in perfect good faith. Soon after receipt of the money & before notice from pltf., he had accounted with his principals for the full amount in a settlement between them :—Held : def't. could not be compelled to refund the amount.—UNION MARINE INSURANCE CO. v. a. Money paid on forged letter addressed to third party—Agent innocent.]—Two letters were presented to M., one addressed to himself & the other to the manager of the M. Bank, both purporting to be written by K. In the first, M. was requested to deliver to the manager of the bank the letter addressed to him. In the latter letter the manager was asked to send Rs. 2,500 in currency notes through M., payment being promised by a remittance through another bank or through M. M. delivered the letter to the manager, who upon the strength of it made over the notes to M., who gave a receipt for & on behalf of K., & afterwards handed the notes to the person who had brought him the letter. The letters were forgeries. In a suit against M. by the bank to recover the money paid to M. :—Held : in what he had done, def't. was in some sense an agent of K.; but, inasmuch as the notes were given on the authority of the letter addressed to the manager himself, & not in consequence of any representation made by def't., the latter could not be held liable for the loss sustained by the former.—MOONEY v. MUSBOORKE SAVINGS BANK (1874), 6 N. W. 319.—IND.

b. Money received as agent but without authority.]—Where a person, dealing without authority, but acting as an agent, receives money from a third party, who supposes him to be an agent, & pays such money over to his principal, the principal will be liable to the third party to the extent to which he has been benefited by the payment. V., employed to sell certain movables & to obtain the sanction of the ct. to a loan to be raised upon mtge. of certain immovable property, forged the signatures of his principals to a power of attorney to pass a bond to pltf. over the immovable property, & obtained an advance of £500 from pltf., which he paid into his own banking account. After receiving the £500, V., who had never paid over the proceeds derived from the sale of the immovables, drew cheques in settlement of certain accounts against his principals & also in favour of his private creditors :—Held : in the absence of proof that V. in obtaining the £500 had acted as the agent of defts., or that the estate had received the benefit of the amount so obtained, the principals were not liable to refund such amount at the suit of pltf.—PAARL BOARD OF EXECUTORS v. 2834. Settlement in account.—A., as agent for the foreign owner, entered into a policy of insurance on a ship in the usual form. At the time of effecting the insurance A. was in possession of a letter from the captain, informing him that the ship had received injury, which fact he, without fraudulent intention to deceive, omitted to disclose to the underwriters. The ship was lost; B., one of the underwriters, paid A. his amount of insurance, but, having become acquainted with the above circumstances, brought an action for money had & received against him to recover it back. A., before he was aware of B.'s intention to dispute the policy, & acting bona fide throughout, transmitted to his principal the money he had received from various underwriters, with exception of a certain amount for which he had allowed the principal credit in a settled account, & of another which, with authority of the principal, he had expended in a suit brought by him on behalf of the principal against C., another underwriter on the policy:—Held: (1) A. being only agent, & having paid over to his principal the amount received from underwriters, B. was not entitled to recover back from A. his amount of insurance; (2) there was no difference in this respect between money actually paid over by A. to his principal & moneys which had either been allowed in account between them or expended in the suit against C.—*HOLLAND v. 2835. — Ship's account settled.—Cotton was shipped at Madras consigned to London for pltf's, merchants at Liverpool. The bills of lading expressed the freight to be "at the rate of £2 5s. per ton of fifty cubic feet as per margin." The margin contained a note of measurement of the cotton, & of amount of freight calculated accordingly. On arrival of the ship the cotton was bonded at a wharf in London, & pltf's' brokers sent copies of the bills of lading to the wharfinger & to pltf's. at Liverpool. The wharfinger in the ordinary course of business measured the cotton & sent a note of measurement to defts., the ship's brokers, one of them being sole owner of the ship. Defts. made out a freight note, calculating freight according to London measurement which was larger than Madras measurement, & forwarded it to pltf's' brokers, who paid the amount & were credited by pltf's, their principals, the latter having the bills of lading in their possession at the time. After lapse of nearly two years pltf's. settled their accounts with their agents at Madras, & the mistake was discovered. Pltf's. sued defts. for amount of freight overpaid. Defts. had settled the ship's account for the voyage with the owner. There was perfect bona fides on both sides:—Held: the money having been paid by pltf's. under a mistake, they were entitled to recover it back from the owner of ship, but not from defts., the ship's brokers.—SHAND v. GRANT (1863), 15 C. B. N. S. 824; 9 L. T. 890; 1 Mar. L. C. 896; 148 E. R. 809.

2836. — —.]—A. bought cotton of B., both being cotton brokers at Liverpool, & each acting for an undisclosed principal. Weight-lists of the cotton were in the usual course delivered to each from the warehouse-keeper at the dock; by a mistake made by a clerk of B. in adding up the figures, the quantity appeared to be 100 cwt. more than it really was, & A. in ignorance of the mistake paid B. £509 15s. too much. The mistake was not discovered by either party until several months afterwards. B. had allowed money so received by him to be settled in account between himself & his principals, to whom he had made advances; & at the close of the transactions between them there was a large balance owing by his principals to B.:—Held: A. was entitled to recover from B. the sum so overpaid to him, the case not falling within the rule by which an agent is relieved from responsibility where he has bona fide paid over moneys received by him on account of his principals.—NEWALL v. TOMLINSON (1871), L. R. 6 C. P. 405; 25 L. T. 382.

2837. — —.]—Pltf. contracted with M. Ry. Co. for carriage of coke breeze from a station on M. Ry. to a station on defts.' ry. at a certain specified through rate per ton. The goods having been delivered, pltf. paid for carriage at the agreed rate to defts. as collecting agents of M. Ry. Co. Pltf. discovered that M. Ry. Co. had in their published book of rates a through rate between same stations charging a less sum per ton for coke breeze if used for fuel purposes. The coke breeze carried for pltf. was intended to be used for other than fuel purposes. Pltf. sought to recover from defts. the difference between the two rates upon the ground that differential charges for carriage of the same article according to purpose for which it was used was a breach of Railways Clauses Act, 1845 (c. 20), s. 90. Payments by pltf. to defts. had been made voluntarily & without compulsion. Before any notice to defts. of any claim by pltf. that he had been overcharged they had settled an account with M. Ry. Co. in respect of payments so received by them on M. Ry. Co.'s behalf:—Held: (1) even if there was a breach of the above Act, the money could not be recovered back from defts., who had received it as innocent agents & settled for it with their principals before any notice of overcharge; (2) this applied equally to that portion of the money received by them, which in the ordinary course under their traffic arrangement with M. Ry. Co. they would be entitled to retain to their own use as representing their share of the through rate for the portion of the transit over their ry., the money having been paid by pltf. as a lump payment under a contract to which defts. were not parties.—TAYLOR v. METROPOLITAN RY. CO., [1906] 2 K. B. 55; 75 L. J. K. B. 735; 95 L. T. 149; 22 T. L. R. 479, D. C.

2838. Sale abortive through purchaser pleading contract void.—Pltf. entered into a contract with deft., as agent of seller, to purchase certain shares, & paid a deposit. Pltf. failed to complete, & the contract being void under Leaman's Act, sued deft. to recover the deposit:—Held: deft., having paid the deposit over to his principal, was not liable.—GALLAND v. HALL (1888), 4 T. L. R. 761, C. A.

2839. Money not paid for use of principal.]—The action for money had & received lies to recover money obtained through compulsion, under colour of process, by excess of authority, although it has been paid over. To make it a defence to an agent that he had paid over the money, it is necessary that it should have been paid to the agent expressly for use of the person to whom he has so paid it over.

A sheriff issued a warrant on mesne process to distrain the goods of A.; the bailiff levied the debt upon goods of B. & paid it over:—Held: money had & received would lie against the bailiff.—SNOWDON v. DAVIS (1808), 1 Taunt. 359; 127 E. R. 872.

2840. Money not received as agent.]—Pltf.'s wife was devisee of certain freehold property. Testatrix had delivered title-deeds of this property to H. & had expressed an intention to make a will in H.'s favour, & H. had, in consequence, paid for medical attendance upon, & the funeral expenses of, testatrix. It was eventually found that the only will in existence was that by which the property was devised to pltf.'s wife; & on pltf. applying to H. for the title-deeds, she at first refused to give any information, unless paid the above expenses, & referred pltf. to deft., her solr., who also refused to give up the deeds unless the expenses were paid, & pltf., in order to obtain the deeds, paid the amount claimed:—Held: (1) this was not a voluntary payment to deft. in his character of agent; (2) he was liable in an action for money had & received, notwithstanding he had paid over the amount to H.—OATES v. HUDSON (1851), 6 Exch. 346; 20 L. J. Ex. 284.

2842. Bills remitted to agent with directions to pay.]—K., residing abroad, remitted bills on England to defts., his bankers in London, with directions in the letters inclosing such bills to pay the amount, in certain specified proportions, to pltf. & other creditors of K., who would produce their letters of advice from him on the subject, & desiring the amount paid to each person to be put on the back of their respective bills, & that every bill paid off should be cancelled. Pltf., before the bills became due, gave notice to defts. that he had received a letter from K. ordering payment of his debt out of that remittance, & offered them an indemnity if they would hand over one of the bills to him; but defts. refused to indorse the bill away, or to act upon the letter, admitting, however, that they had received the directions to apply the money. Defts. in fact afterwards received the money on the bills when due:—Held: (1) they did not by the mere act of receiving the bills, & afterwards the produce of them, with such directions, & without any assent on their part to the purport of the letter, & still more against their express dissent, bind themselves to pltf. so to apply the money in discharge of his debt due to him from K.; (2) pltf., between whom & defts. there was no privity of contract, express or implied, but on the contrary it was repudiated, could not maintain an action against defts. as for money had & received by them to his use; (3) the property in the bills & their produce continued in the remitter.—*WILLIAMS v. 2843. Agent employed as bearer of money.]—A trader in prison employed an auctioneer to sell goods, who sent him the proceeds by the hands of deft.; the trader became bkpt. by lying two months in prison:—Held: his assignees could not recover from deft., who was a mere bearer, the money he had so received & paid over.—*COLES v. c. Amount loaned third party by principal—Remitted through agent.]—L. arranged with C. Assocn., an English co. investing money in Canada, & having deft. R. as their manager, & deft. H. as one of their local directors, for a loan of money. After paying off a prior mtge. on the lands of L., & the expenses, etc., the manager sent to his order a cheque for the balance of $89.95, signed by R. & H., defts. L. having made a claim for a larger amount brought an action against R. & H. to recover the money he claimed to be due to him:—Held: (1) defts. not liable, as they never received any money to the use of pltf., having no control over the money except as manager & director of C. Assocn., & were in no wise acting as individuals on their own behalf, but solely as officers of the co.; (2) the evidence did not establish any privity between pltf. & defts. in respect of the money claimed, & without such privity the action would not lie.—HEWARD v. LOGAN (1864), 14 C. P. 592.—CAN.

remitted) does not so fix the bankers as to give the persons, to whom such sums were so directed to be paid, a right of action against them for money had & received, without an assent on their part to such an appropriation of the money remitted. It is not necessary that the bankers should express a dissent from the required appropriation.—GRANT v. AUSTEN (1816), 3 Price, 58; 146 E. R. 191.

2845. Funds remitted to agent.—To pay bill held by third party.]—A., an acceptor of a bill payable at his London bankers, remitted them funds to pay it, or take it up if overdue, which last being the case, the bankers, who were bankers in London, called on the holders, intending to take it up, but finding the bill was sent back to Ireland as dishonoured, they remitted the money back to the acceptor, & upon a subsequent presentment of the bill, refused payment:—Held: this was not such specific appropriation of the money as to render the bankers liable to the holder for the amount remitted.—STEWART v. FRY & CHAPMAN (1817), 7 Taunt. 339, 1 Moore, C. P. 74; 129 E. R. 136.

2846. ———.]—Where a bill of exchange, payable at the house of A., had been there presented for payment & dishonoured, & the acceptor afterwards remitted to A. a sum of money for the purpose of enabling him to pay the dishonoured bill, & also another of less value, & A. in answer stated the fact of the bill having been dishonoured, but added that the money received should be carried to the acceptor's account, & did afterwards pay the smaller bill:—Held: the holder of the original bill could not maintain an action against A., there being no privity between them.—YATES v. BELL (1820), 3 B. & Ald. 643; 106 E. R. 796.

2847. Bill drawn on agent.—Promise to pay.]—Deft., agent of A., had in his hands moneys & effects of A., & had written a letter to a creditor of A., in which he promised to honour on presentation certain bills of exchange drawn by that creditor, at A.'s request, upon deft. On general demurrer for want of equity to a bill praying deft. might be decreed to pay the bills of exchange out of the moneys & effects of A. in his hands, or otherwise out of his own moneys:—Held: (1) no assignment of specific property in hands of the agent was alleged; (2) the demurrer must be allowed.—BAILLET v. MITCHELL (1823), 1 L. J. O. S. Ch. 197.

2848. Agent not liable to account to third party.]—A creditor cannot file a bill for account against the agent of a principal against whom his claim is, unless he makes out a case of collusion between principal & agent.—JABAT v. CAMPBELL, No. 2849, post.

2849. Agent holding principal's property for particular purpose.—Defence available in action by third party.]—Upon allegations that, under decrees of the Cortes & orders of the Spanish Govt., pltf. had a lien for payment of a debt due to him on a certain portion of stock, which, along with other stock, had been, by courts of the Spanish Govt., placed at disposal of, & sold by, certain agents in England, a bill was filed praying an account against the agents:—Held: (1) a good & complete defence might be made to such a bill by a plea stating matter, from which it appeared that the stock placed at disposal of these agents was intended for special purposes, unconnected with the satisfaction of pltf.'s demand, & did not include the stock specifically appropriated to meet his demand; (2) it was no objection to the plea that, after the special purposes were answered, there might be in the hands of the agents a surplus in which pltf. might have an interest.—JABAT v. CAMPBELL (1824) 3 L. J. O. S. Ch. 8.

2850. Agent collecting bill.—Specially indorsed to third party.]—If A. remits a bill to B., having by indorsement directed proceeds to be paid to C.'s use, & B. receives proceeds & applies them otherwise:—Held: C. cannot maintain an action for money had & received against B., unless there has been actual assent on B.'s part to hold the money as agent for C.—*WEDLAKE v. Deft. from time to time made up accounts of shares of profits due to several proprietors, & sent them to those parties, taking the money from a balance of C.'s which he had in hand. On one occasion deft. sent to pltf., a proprietor, a packet purporting to contain £23 due to him, but in reality containing £20 only. Pltf. sued deft. for £3 had & received to his use:—Held: (1) deft. was not liable, there being no privity of contract between him & pltf.; (2) he was not precluded from this defence by having told pltf. that he, deft., had had the £23 of C. & sent it to pltf. & debited C. with it.—*HOWELL v. The solr. offered to pay the money on condition that the bill should undergo a subsequent taxation, but to that petitioning creditor would not assent:—Held: the latter could not maintain money had & received thereupon against the solr., though, after the above offer & refusal, he had authorised the solr. to pay over part of the money in discharge of the comr.'s fees.—BARON v. HUSBAND, (1833), 4 B. & Ad. 611; 110 E. R. 586.

2858. Money directed to be held at disposal of third party—Acknowledgment—Revocation.—A mercantile firm at Calcutta, by letter dated Jan. 16, 1841, requested defts. their correspondents in London, to hold a sum of money, payable on Nov. 19, following out of remittances & consignments on their general account, at disposal of pltf., a merchant at Liverpool & a creditor of the Calcutta firm. On same day the Calcutta firm wrote to pltf. informing him of directions they had given to defts. On Mar. 12, 1841, defts. wrote to pltf. "to advise" him of the request of the Calcutta firm, adding "at the present time we are considerably in cash advance for the firm, & the consignments & remittance hitherto advised will fall short of the engagements we are under on their account. We have registered the above, & should remittances or consignments come forward to enable us to meet their wishes, we shall lose no time in advising you." On Mar. 14, 1841, defts. wrote to the Calcutta firm in answer to their letter that the state of their account would not warrant defts. in meeting the requisition for the present, but should they be in a position to meet it before Nov. they would do so. By letter of Jan. 18, 1842, the Calcutta firm revoked their order for appropriation of the money:—Held: the correspondence did not create an absolute contract on part of defts. to pay to pltf. the amount in question out of remittances & consignments.—MALCOLM v. SCOTT (1850), 5 Exch. 601; 155 E. R. 263.

2859. Wages received by book-keeper.—Pltf. & deft. were servants to D. & Co., pltf. as a stage-coach driver, deft. as clerk & book-keeper. Deft. usually paid pltf. his wages & made up all accounts, entering pltf.'s moneys in the books as being settled weekly; deft. & D. & Co. settled monthly. Pltf. having as he alleged £38 due, applied to deft. for it, admitting he had retained certain moneys of D. & Co. Deft. sent him £20 on account, & promised to pay the balance on pltf.'s calling to adjust accounts. Pltf. afterwards wrote to D. for the balance, stating he should look to D. for payment. Pltf. brought an action for money had & received against deft.:—Held: the action could not be maintained.—GLOVER v. JONES (1852), 20 L. T. O. S. 113.

2860. Money received to take up bill.—Where the acceptor of a bill paid money to his bankers, defts. (at whose correspondents' house it was payable), for the purpose of taking that & other bills up, & they promised him to apply it to such purposes & entered the particular bill to their credit in their books, but it did not appear that they had advised their correspondents to pay it:—Held: the drawer, the holder of the bill, could not sue the bankers for the amount of the bill, there being no privity to sustain the action.—MOORE v. BUSHELL (1857), 27 L. J. Ex. 3.

Annotation:—Apld. Hill v. Royds (1869), L. R. 8 Eq. 290.

2861. Fiduciary relationship between agent & third party must be alleged.—Pltf. was holder of bonds issued by a foreign republic through defts., its agents in England, by which the foreign republic, upon the national faith, pledged the general revenue of the republic, especially the free proceeds of guano imported by the republic into the United Kingdom, after engagements contracted on them were covered, & bound itself in all contracts which it might enter into for sale of guano to set aside in each half-year a sum sufficient for service of the half-year, & after such service was secured to dispose freely of the surplus. Pltf. brought an action on behalf of himself & all other holders of the bonds, stating in his claim that the republic had from time to time forwarded to defts. large quantities of guano for purpose of paying interest on bonds which they refused to apply for that purpose, & threatened to apply in satisfaction of a lien claimed by themselves; & he claimed a declaration that he & the other bondholders had a claim upon the proceeds of guano in priority to any claim by defts. He also alleged that the foreign republic made no claim to proceeds of guano, but offered to make it a party if it should so desire. Defts. demurred to the statement of claim, on the ground that pltf. had no charge on proceeds of guano, & also on the ground of want of jurisdiction & want of parties:—Held: (1) no fiduciary relation was alleged between defts. & pltf.; (2) the guano being the property of a foreign Govt., the et. had no jurisdiction to attach it or proceeds of sale thereof; (3) defts. being agents of the foreign Govt., could not be sued in absence of their principal.—TWY-CROSS v. DREYERS (1877), 5 Ch. D. 605; 46 L. J. Ch. 510; 36 L. T. 752, C. A.

2862. Solicitor taking up client's acceptances—Payment in spurious bank notes.—Pltf. held certain acceptances of A.'s, & deft. was acting as solr. to A. & to B. B. agreed to take up A.'s acceptances, & deft. cashed a cheque for B. at B.'s bank, & received two £100 Bank of England notes. On May 29 deft. sent a clerk to pltf. with these two £100 Bank of England notes, which were paid to them, the clerk receiving three acceptances of A.'s & £63 15s. in cash. Deft. retained £13 15s. in payment of a bill of costs due from A. to himself, & paid £50 to B. On June 7 one of the notes which pltf. had paid away was brought back to them as refused by the Bank of England, & with the words "Number & date of this note have been altered" written across it. On July 22 they demanded £100 of deft., who then had notice that the note was bad. All parties had believed the two notes to be good:—Held: (1) pltf., in receiving the note from deft. & handing him the acceptances, were not dealing with him merely as agent for A. or B.; (2) pltf., having received a worthless document from deft., were entitled to recover the amount for which they had taken it as payment.—LEEDS BANK v. WALKER (1883), 11 Q. B. D. 84; 52 L. J. Q. B. 590; 47 J. P. 502.

2863. Money received for payment of interest on foreign loan—Payment of coupons advertised.—A foreign Govt. issued a public loan under a decree & an agreement providing for a mtge. to defts. of certain estates on behalf of bondholders. Defts. received instructions to pay coupons for interest falling due on June 1, less 5 per cent. tax pursuant to a decree of the Govt., which was to take effect subject to the promulgation of a decree modifying the law of liquidation. Defts., having received from the Govt. a sum of money to meet half-yearly interest less 5 per cent., advertised that they would make such payments. Defts. received £10,000, the amount of the 5 per cent., from comrs. of the Govt. who managed the mtg'd. estates; it did not appear that such comrs. were authorised to remit such sum. Defts. issued a further advertisement that coupons would be paid in full. Finally, they issued an advertisement that, in accordance with directions of the Govt., the coupons would be paid less 5 per cent., notwithstanding that the amount required to pay same in full had been duly remitted to them by the comrs. After such last advertisement the decree modifying the law of liquidation was passed. Pltf., a bondholder, brought an action claiming payment of his coupon in full by the agents pursuant to the second advertisement:—Held: (1) the second advertisement did not amount to an admission by the agents that they had money in their hands for use of pltf. & other bondholders to enable pltf. to maintain an action against them for money had & received; (2) the £10,000 was not remitted to the agents by persons who had authority to do so on behalf of the Govt.; (3) it was not impressed with a trust in favour of bondholders.—HENDERSON v. ROTHSCHILD & SONS (1887), 56 L. J. Ch. 471; 56 L. T. 98; 35 W. R. 485; 3 T. L. R. 364, C. A.

2864. In what capacity money received—Question of fact.]—W., being indebted to pltf. & unable to pay them, agreed with defts. that they should discount bills to be drawn by W. & accepted by pltf. for £2,500. Pltf. handed the acceptances to defts. Defts.' manager asked pltf. when they required the money. Pltf. said they did not want the money until the next day, but afterwards said they would take £2,000 that evening. The manager said he would not hand the cheque for that amount to pltf., but would give it to W.'s clerk, & that he should require W.'s order for payment of the balance. W.'s clerk got the cheque for £2,000, & handed it to pltf., & pltf. on same evening handed to defts. an order by W. for payment of the balance to pltf.:—Held: it was a question for the jury whether from the time of lodging the order defts. held the money for pltf. & not for W.—NOBLE v. NATIONAL DISCOUNT CO. (1860), 5 H. & N. 225; 29 L. J. Ex. 210.

2870. Promise to pay—When funds received.]—When a bill is drawn on an agent & made payable out of a particular fund, & the agent says he will pay it when he gets money of the principal, this is binding on him, & if he gets money at any subsequent time he is bound to pay the bill.—STEVENS v. HILL (1805), 5 Esp. 247.

2871. —.]—J. was indebted to pltf. in an action for money had & received, & was also a creditor of S. & F. Co., Ltd., which was being wound up, & deft. was the official liquidator. J. signed the following document: "Isle of Man, July 15, 1865. On Aug. 1 next, please pay to [pltf.] or order £600. on account of moneys advanced by me to S. & F. Co., Ltd. To [def't.] official liquidator of the co." This document, which was unstamped when produced at the trial, was sent by J. to pltf. in England, & they forwarded a copy to def't., who was also in England, requesting to know whether he would honour the order, & he replied he would when funds came into his hands about Aug. 15. Funds came into his hands soon after that time, but owing to a dispute as to the amount remaining due to J. nothing was then paid; & after much correspondence, in which pltf. continually demanded payment of the order, but never parted with it, action was brought:—Held: the evidence showed a contract binding on def't. within the principle of the decision in Walker v. Rostron (No. 2878, post).—GRIFFIN v. WEATHERBY (1868), L. R. 3 Q. B. 753; 9 B. & S. 726; 37 L. J. Q. B. 280; 18 L. T. 881; 17 W. R. 8.

2872. — Extent of liability.]—Agents in England effected a policy of insurance for a correspondent abroad, on which a loss happened. He drew a bill upon them, which was presented to them for acceptance by the indorsee; they said they could not accept it, having no funds in hand, but that on a settlement with the underwriters it should be paid: the agents received from the underwriters a sum less than the amount of the bill:—Held: this might be recovered from the agents by the indorsee, as money had & received to his use.—LANGSTON v. CORNEY (1815), 4 Camp. 176.

2873. — What amounts to.]—An infant entitled to certain personal property, on her coming of age, as a residuary legatee, joined her father in a bond to secure to pltf. a sum due to him for the rent of apartments occupied by her & her father, & after she became of age employed debt. to take out administration de bonis non of the assets of testator (his exor. being dead), which debt. accordingly did, & became possessed of the property. Afterwards she gave pltf. an order on debt. to pay the amount of her father's bills due to the former, which on being presented to debt. he acknowledged that he possessed adequate funds & that a person would be safe in advancing money on the security of the bond, but, before the order was executed or the sum paid under it by debt., the daughter countermanded it:—Held: as he had consented to appropriate a sum sufficient to pay pltf.'s demand, he was liable to an action for money had & received, in which pltf. might not only recover the amount of the bond, but an acceptance given by the father of the infant, before she became of age, & which she afterwards requested debt. to pay.—ROBERTSON v. FAUTLEROGY (1823), 8 Moore, C. P. 10; 1 L. J. O. S. C. P. 55.

2874. — Annuity—Conduct inferring obligation to continue to pay same.—Where consignments have been made from abroad to answer an annuity which the owner of the property consigned is liable to pay, & a consignee in England gives notice of the arrangement to the annuitant & makes payments in pursuance of it, the consignee is not afterwards at liberty to discontinue such payments so long as he has any proceeds of the consignment in his hands. The circumstances of such a transaction constitute an implied trust, which the ct. will enforce against the consignee, for benefit of the annuitant.—*FITZGERALD v. Pltf.s, apprised of the order, wrote to debt.s & requested to know the probable amount of the remittance. In their answer debt.s. acknowledged they were ordered to remit proceeds of the coffee to pltf.s, but stated that it was not yet sold:—Held: debt.s. were to be considered as having consented to appropriation of the coffee, as directed by their correspondents at R.—FRUHLING v. SCHROEDER (1835), 2 Bing. N. C. 77; 7 C. & P. 103; 1 Hodg. 105; 2 Scott, 135; 4 L. J. C. P. 169; 132 E. R. 31.

2877. Acts not constituting consent.—A., resident abroad, remitted to B., his agent in England, a bill drawn by A. specially indorsed by him to C., with whom his children were at school, in payment of C.'s account for their board & education. B. got the bill accepted by drawees & sent a letter to C.

stating he had received a commission from A. to pay her money on account of his children, & desired to be informed when & how it should be delivered. While the bill remained in B.'s hands, he received directions from A. to keep it, & the proceeds, in his hands, & to have a fair investigation into C.'s accounts, & after such investigation, to pay her what might be due to her. No such investigation took place, & B. detained the bill:—Held: C. could not recover it in trover.—BRIND v. HAMPSHIRE (1836), 1 M. & W. 365; 2 Gale, 33; Tyr. & Gr. 790; 5 L. J. Ex. 197; 150 E. 2878. Specific appropriation—Assent of agent.—Pltf. sold goods to B., taking his acceptances for the price, & sent them to debt., B.'s agent, who consigned them to his partners abroad for sale. Pltf. doubting B.'s insolvency, required further security, whereupon, by agreement between pltf., B., & debt., B. handed to debt. a letter authorising him, out of any remittances he might receive against the net proceeds of the above assignments, to pay the acceptances as they became due, if not previously honoured by B. Debt. assented to the terms of the letter. Before the bills were due B. became bkpt., & debt., having received the net proceeds of goods, refused to pay any part thereof to pltf., but handed them over to B.'s assignees. In an action for money had & received:—Held: (1) there was an appropriation irrevocable except by the consent of all parties, for which the existing debt, though not then payable, was a good consideration; (2) pltf. was entitled to recover the amount of the acceptances from debt.—WALKER v. ROSTON (1842), 9 M. & W. 411; 11 L. J. Ex. 173; 152 E. R. 174.

2879. Direction of principal—Amounting to trust in favour of third party.—Where money is placed in the hands of an agent, with direction, or, upon trust, to pay debts, that is a voluntary act, & as such, revocable. But if there is an agreement between the person directing payment & the person directed to pay, it is not revocable, but becomes a trust.—LAWRENCE v. CAMPBELL (1859), 7 W. R. 170.

2882. Agent receiving goods—For sale & proceeds to be paid third party—Notice to third party.—A firm indebted to pltf. shipped a quantity of copper ores to debt.s, & by letter directed them to sell the consignment, & out of proceeds to pay £400 to certain persons & the balance to pltf., & on same day communicated these instructions by letter to pltf.:—Held: the two letters operated as an assignment of balance to pltf.—*ALEXANDER v. (d) Revocation of Authority.

2883. Acts amounting to countermand.]—A. accepted a bill made payable at the house of defts., which was indorsed to plffs., who discounted it. The bill was presented to defts., when due, & dishonoured. Two days afterwards the money to take up the bill was remitted to defts. & they were requested to follow it in whosoever hands it might be. They tendered the money to plffs. who had sent back the bill, the day before, to the drawers. Meantime, defts. received an order from the house (to which the letter inclosing the remittance referred them for advice) to hold the money to the credit of that house, as they had, by the desire of A., the acceptor, advanced him to the amount of the money then in defts.' hands for the purpose of taking up the bill:—Held: this was a sufficient countermand of the money on the part of A. & defts. were not liable to an action for money had & received, brought by plffs., on their again getting back the bill into their possession.—STEWART v. FRY (1816), Holt, N. P. 372; affd. (1817), 7 Taunt. 339.

2884. Where creditor has not assented—Countermand valid.]—A. gave a sum of money into the hands of B. to pay to C. 2885. ———.]—MALCOLM v. SCOTT, No. 2858, ante.

2886. Countermand ineffectual—After agent's assent.]—A. & B. merchants in Australia, mutually agreed that each should buy gold-dust, each to have half the profit or to bear half the loss on the resale of the gold-dust to be bought by the other. In pursuance of this agreement A. bought 365 oz. & B. 728 oz. It was then agreed that each of them should consign his parcel to C. in London, for sale on the joint account, with instruction to C. to give A. & B. each credit of account for a moiety of the proceeds of each consignment. In pursuance of this last-mentioned agreement the gold-dust so bought was consigned to C., B.'s 728 oz. being invoiced as consigned on the "joint account," & accompanied by a letter from B. (dated Feb. 2, 1852) instructing C. to place the net profits to the respective accounts of A. & B. in equal moieties. A. likewise consigned his 365 oz. to C., but omitted to send C. instructions to place a moiety of the net proceeds to the account of B. On June 15, 1852, C. sent a letter to A., informing him that he would pass to his credit half the proceeds of the gold-dust, & thereby assented to obey the instructions he had received from B. On Feb. 4, 1852, B. wrote to C. as follows: "I have no doubt A. has written half the profits [net proceeds] of the 365 oz. of gold-dust shipped to you is to go to the credit of B. in the same way as half the profit of the 728 oz. is to go to his credit. If, however, he should not have done so, you will not pass the half profit of the 728 oz. to his credit." This letter was not received by C. at the time he wrote his letter on June 15. B. became bkpt., & C., having sold both parcels of the gold-dust, gave B. credit for the whole of the proceeds of the 728 oz. & for a moiety of the proceeds of the 365 oz.:—Held: a plea setting out these facts was a good plea of equitable set-off in an action for money lent, brought by C. against A.—ELKIN v. BAKER (1862), 11 C. B. N. S. 526; 31 L. J. C. P. 177; 8 Jur. N. S. 915; 142 E. R. 902.

Resps. by mistake, but acting in good faith, paid the money to appls., who received it in good faith, believing it to represent the price of goods on which they had made advances to K. A jury found, in answer to a specific question, that they had not been led to alter their position for the worse as regarded K.:—Held: resps. were entitled to recover the money from appls. as being money paid under a mistake of fact.—*KLEINWORT, SONS & CO. v. Before deft. had paid over any money pltf. signed a revocation, & demanded from deft. the amount received on the policies. Notwithstanding this, deft. distributed among the creditors what was necessary to discharge their claims. Pltf. sued deft. for the whole sum received from the insurance co.:—Held: the engagement entered into with the creditors who were about attaching the policies was binding, & pltf. could not recover the amounts paid over to them.—*FROST v. 2890. Agent paying premium on unauthorised insurance.—Pltf. without his father's knowledge or consent insured his father's life in defts.' office. The father becoming aware of the existence of the policies, objected to them, whereupon pltf. sought to recover from defts. the premiums paid :—Held : (1) as pltf. had represented himself the agent of his father to effect the insurances & had warranted his authority in that behalf, he could not now recover for his own breach of contract ; (2) the transaction having been in the nature of a wagering contract, no action was maintainable in respect of it.—*HOWARD v. 2891. Agent induced to make payment by fraud of third party.—H., an agent intrusted by A., his principal, with funds to arrange A.'s affairs with instructions to pay certain bills accepted by C., having been induced by fraud & false representations of deft. to pay him the amount of two bills, which deft. falsely alleged were accepted by C. :—Held : H., the agent, might maintain an action in his own name to recover the money so paid.—*HOLT v. 2892. Consignee for sale setting off freight due to principal against claim by third party for proceeds.—A. consigned goods to B. with directions to pay over the net proceeds to C., & B. employed D. to dispose of them. In an action by C. to recover proceeds from D. :—Held : D. was entitled to make same deductions for freight, etc., as B., who was owner of the ship in which the goods were brought, might have made.—BLACKBURN v. KYMER (1814), 5 Taunt. 584 ; 1 Marsh. 223 ; 128 E. R. 818.

2894. Agent real principal.—S., an attorney, practised under the name of "S. & D." D., although an attorney, was not a partner of S., but only a clerk. C. was a client of the nominal firm, & owed a bill of costs ; & S. was personally liable to C. on a bill of exchange of less amount than the bill of costs. S., without joining D., sued C. for the amount of the bill of costs ; & C. pleaded never indebted, & set off the sum due on the bill of exchange. C. brought a cross-action on the bill of exchange, & S. set off the amount of the bill of costs. The two actions being tried together, it was found by the jury that D. had authorised S. to contract on behalf of himself & D. with C., & that S. had so contracted :—Held : S., being the real principal, might take the benefit of the contract with C. & sue alone, & set off the bill of costs in the action against him.—*SPURR v. E. Agent's Right to set off as against Third Party Debt due by Principal to Agent.

2895. Set-off by agent.—K., an officer in the army, kept a current account with C. & Co., as his bankers. On K.'s retirement from the army the sum of £3,000, the value of his commission, was paid to C. & Co., as the army agents of his regiment, & was in due course carried to a deposit account kept by C. & Co. with the Army Purchase Comrs., there to remain till K.'s retirement was gazetted. At this time K.'s current account was overdrawn by £647. The day after K.'s retirement was gazetted C. & Co. received notice of a deed by which K. had mtgd. the value of his commission to secure the repayment of £5,000. The mtgee. having claimed payment of the whole £3,000, C. & Co. claimed to deduct out of it the £647 :—Held : as soon as the retirement of K. was gazetted the £3,000 became in the hands of C. & Co. money received to the use of K., & independently of the question whether C. & Co. had a banker's lien, they had at common law the right to set off against such moneys the debt due to them.—*ROXBURGHE v. —See AUCTION & AUCTIONEERS.

2896. Agent suing for price of goods—Sold under fraudulent misrepresentation as to identity of seller.—Where an auctioneer sold to deft. goods of A. in a sale of goods of B. :—Held : this was such a fraud that deft. might set off a debt due to him from B. against the price of the goods of A.—COPPIN principal.—The agent for a disclosed foreign principal sold to a merchant in Scotland a cargo, payment to be by approved acceptance to seller's or agent's draft. The purchaser dishonoured his acceptance of the seller's draft on the ground that the goods did not conform to the contract. The agent had given value to his principal by accepting his draft, but not to a corresponding amount :—Held : the agent could not sue the third party on the dishonoured draft while his principal's contract remained unperformed. *Tyc v. 1. Money paid under protest.—A ship having been stranded on a bank near D., A., as receiver of drofts, & also acting as Lloyd's agent, assisted in getting the vessel off the bank, & employed tug-boats & men for that purpose, & to enable the vessel to be moved, a portion of her cargo was placed on board a tug-boat & conveyed to D. On the arrival of the goods at D., A. detained them under a claim for salvage, & also until he was paid fees claimed by him, as receiver of drofts, for the time the goods were in his custody, which fees B., as agent of the shippers, paid under protest :—Held : an action was maintainable by B. to recover back the money so paid, he having been dealt with by A. as principal, & having paid the money out of his own pocket.—*COATESWORTH v. It then stated W. was indebted to deft., & that deft. was willing to set off, etc.:—Held: (1) the person whom deft. agreed to pay was pltf., whilst pltf. was not the person who agreed to pay the debt sought to be set off; (2) the debts were not mutual debts between pltf. & deft.; (3) the plea was bad.—ISBERG v. 2898. MARCUS & Co. (1888), 36 W. R. 469.

2899. Agent suing to recover money—Set-off of counterclaim for damages.]—Where an action to recover a sum of money is brought by a person as agent for a third person, deft. can set up by way of set-off & defence to the agent's claim, but only to extent of such claim, a counterclaim for damages for a larger sum admitted to be due to deft. from the third person for whom the action is brought, & such counterclaim is a good answer to pltf.'s claim.—*BANKES v. 2902. Bank-note—Presentation by agent—Trover by agent for note—Note stolen.]—A foreign merchant being indebted to pltf., his correspondent in England, remitted to him a bank-note for a smaller sum than the debt. The note had been stolen, & when pltf. learnt this he had not made the foreign merchant any advance on the credit of it. Pltf. brought trover for the note against the bank, & obtained a verdict. Upon a rule nisi for a new trial:—Held: (1) pltf. & the foreign merchant were mutual agents, & pltf. could recover only upon the latter's title; (2) it was incumbent to show that the foreign merchant had given full value for it, & there must be a new trial.—*DE LA CHAUMETTE v. 2903. ———— Note obtained by fraud.]—Pltf., the agent of a corresponding house of business, received from the correspondents a letter containing a bank-note, & stating that they should draw upon him for the amount at some future period. On presenting the note at the bank, he was informed that it had been fraudulently obtained by someone, & pltf. wrote to the correspondents to learn how they came by it, but they in their reply did not properly account for their possession of it. The correspondents in another letter claimed that they should draw on pltf. for the amount, or he should return the note. The note was stated to have been received by pltf. in reduction of a balance due upon his correspondents' account. Pltf. brought trover for the note & was nonsuited. Upon a rule nisi to set aside the nonsuit:—Held: pltf. must be considered merely as the agent of the correspondents, & must fall by their title.—*SOLOMONS v. 2904. Bill of lading—Bill of exchange drawn on consignee—Mate's receipt sent to consignee—Trover by consignee against wrongdoer.]—C., a manufacturer at Newcastle, consigned goods to E. & Co., his factors in London, specifically to meet a bill drawn upon them, transmitting to them a receipt signed by the mate of the vessel acknowledging the goods to have been received on board to be delivered to E. & Co.:—Held: E. & Co. had a sufficient property in the goods & right to possession to entitle them to maintain trover against a wrongdoer, the consignor not having repudiated the contract upon which they were sent.—EVANS v. NICHOL (1841), 3 Man. & G. 614; 4 Scott, N. R. 43; 11 L. J. C. P. 6; 5 Jur. 1110; 133 E. R. 1286.

2905. ——— Indorsement by consignor to agent—No transfer of property—No trover by agent.]—The indorsement of a bill of lading without consideration does not transfer any property in the goods; & the mere indorsement of a bill of lading by the consignor to an agent, to authorise him to stop the goods in transitu on account of his principal, will not enable such agent to maintain assumpsit or trover for the goods in his own name.—WARING v. COX (1808), 1 Camp. 369.

2906. Goods shipped to order—Stoppage in transitu—Bill of lading indorsed to agent—Trover by agent against wharfinger.—H. shipped goods at Dundee to the order of & for P. in London. H. having ascertained, shortly after the goods had been forwarded, that P. had stopped payment, indorsed & forwarded the bill of lading to pltf., who demanded the goods from defts., wharfingers, in whose custody they were. Defts. having refused to deliver the goods to pltf. :—Held: H. having a right to stop in transitu might for this purpose invest pltf. with a right to the goods, & pltf., by indorsement of the bill of lading to him, obtained a special property in the goods sufficient to maintain an action of trover.—MORRISON v. GRAY (1824), 2 Bing. 260; 9 Moore, C. P. 484; 3 L. J. O. S. C. P. 261; 130 E. R. 305.

2907. Bill of lading indorsed by consignor to agent to sell goods—Bill of lading sent by agent to another agent to sell—Goods obtained by third party by foreign attachment—No trover by latter agent against third party.—C., a merchant at Waterford, had been in the habit of consigning cargoes of grain to B., a corn factor in Bristol, who had been accustomed to accept bills on the faith of such consignments. C. wrote to B., stating that he was about to ship him a cargo of oats, & that he had drawn on him for £550 in anticipation of it, & desiring him to effect an insurance on the cargo. C. remitted the bill to B. & he accepted it. Before the vessel sailed C. stopped payment, & then sent the bill of lading indorsed in blank to H., another factor at Bristol, not informing him of his engagement with B. when the vessel arrived. H. for his own convenience transmitted the bill of lading to B., desiring him to act for him. B. paid the freight, & took possession of the cargo, as a security for his own claim on C. Defts., who were also creditors of C., claimed to take the cargo under a foreign attachment, & the officer of the ct. took possession of the cargo & delivered it to defts. :—Held: B. had no property in the goods, & he could not maintain trover for the goods, as they had been in his hands as the agent of H. only, not of C., & he had consequently had no lien on them. Semle: if C. had authorised H. to employ a broker for the sale of the goods, then B. might have succeeded in the action, although the parties did not intend that the particular broker employed should have a lien (PARKE, B.)—*BRUCE v. 2908. Negligent loss of goods—Action against carriers—Agent to book parcel—Instructions disobeyed.—Pltf. received a parcel from G. to book for London at the office of defts., common carriers. Pltf., instead of obeying instructions, put the parcel into his bag, intending to take it to London himself. Defts. having lost the bag :—Held: pltf. could not recover damages in respect of the parcel.—MILES v. CATTLE (1830), 6 Bing. 743; L. & Welsb. 353; 4 Moo. & P. 630; 8 L. J. O. S. C. P. 271; 130 E. R. 1467.

2909. Assignor in possession of premises as agent of assignee—Action for wrongful distress.—In an action for wrongful & excessive distress, it appeared pltf. had assigned her interest in the premises before the date of distress, but still remained upon them (the person to whom her interest was assigned not having entered) :—Held: (1) pltf. was there as agent of her assignee; (2) she could not maintain an action for distress.—NASH v. LUCAS (1867), 16 L. T. 610.

2910. Agent held out as owning business—Action for damage to goods.—Where the owner of a shop & goods allows A. to be at this shop, & in his own name, to sell & dispose of the goods as he pleases, & a portion of them is destroyed by negligent driving of B.'s coachman while A.'s servant is carrying them, A. has such qualified property in the goods as will entitle him to maintain an action on the case against B.—WHITTINGHAM v. BLOXHAM (1831), 4 C. & P. 597.

2911. Bad stowage—Action by consignee on bill of lading—Assignee of charterer.—A., as master, by charterparty between himself & B. agreed to receive a cargo of the agents & assigns of B., which B. agreed to procure. A. having received a cargo aboard, signed a bill of lading, stating the goods to have been shipped by order of C. & to be delivered to his order, & freight paid according to the charterparty. In an action for negligence in stowing the goods brought by C. against A. :—Held: C. was only an agent & must be nonsuited, & the action ought to have been brought in the name of B.—MOORES v. HOPPER (1807), 2 Bos. & P. N. R. 411; 127 E. R. 688.

2912. Agent for sale—Action for infringement of patent.—A bill stated an agreement made between a general agent of patentees of an American invention to introduce & sell it in Great Britain & pltf., whereby pltf. was to have sole agency & control of the working of the patent in England, upon certain terms, including a share of royalties & profits, prayed for an account for damages, & an injunction to restrain future infringement. Defts. alleged to be using the invention demurred :—Held: pltf. was a mere agent for sale of the invention, & in no such position as gave him right to file a bill in the form of a patentee's bill for infringement.—ADAMS v. NORTH BRITISH ILY. CO. (1873), 29 L. T. 367.

2914. — Action for passing off.—The sole agent for sale of an article made by a particular manufacturer cannot maintain a passing-off action against a person, who passes off an article made by himself as made by that manufacturer, merely on the ground that his, the agent's, profits through sale of that article are thereby diminished.

A firm were sole agents for sale in England of an article made by a particular manufacturer in America. They sold the article just as it was made & got up by that manufacturer, & nothing in the

A co. having manufactured & sold articles of the same kind with a "get-up" alleged by the firm to be similar to that of the article supplied by the manufacturer in America, the firm sued the co. for passing off those articles as articles sold by the firm:—Held: they could not maintain such action against the co. Scmble: if the firm had sold the article under any "get-up" of their own, which the co. had imitated, they might have maintained a passing-off action against the co.—DENTAL MANUFACTURING CO., LTD. v. Receiving order—Cutting timber—Application to restrain—Agent of owner without interest.]—Where pltf. had obtained an order for a receiver, & was proceeding to cut timber upon the estates before the receiver had been appointed, the ct. refused to grant an injunction upon application of deft., it appearing that deft., the agent of the owner of the estates, had no interest in such estates, & no authority to make the application.—HUNTER v. 2916. Insurance—Resolution of companies not to pay commission to agent.]—The A. Society having decided to dispense with the services of an insurance broker & deal directly with the insurance cos. for the purpose of saving commission, the cos. resolved to pay no commission on the A. Society's insurances except to a broker who would undertake not to part with his commission to the A. Society. On the A. Society appointing the B. Society agent for purpose of insurances, the cos. passed a second resolution not to pay commission to the B. Society on insurances effected for the A. Society. The B. Society & W., its secretary, sued the cos., claiming an injunction & damages for unlawful combination to injure W. (& through him the B. Society) in his business as fire insurance agent:—Held: (1) as employment of professional brokers was to the advantage of the insurance cos. the resolutions were not wrongful; (2) there was no cause of action, since pltf. had suffered no damage, W. being merely a secretary of the B. Society, & the B. Society being a mere agent to account to the A. Society for commissions received.—WORKMAN & ARMY & NAVY AUXILIARY CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY, LTD. v. The fire was extinguished independently of what deft. did. Pltf. having brought an action against deft. claiming damages for trespass & an injunction, the jury found in answer to questions left to them:—(1) the method adopted by deft. was not necessary for the protection of his master's property. (2) it was reasonably necessary in the circumstances:—Held: the meaning of the findings of the jury was not merely that deft. bona fide believed what he did to be necessary, but, although in the result it turned out to have been unnecessary, it was, when deft. did it, reasonably necessary in the circumstances, & deft. was entitled to judgment.—*COPE v. The consignor's agent, having obtained possession of the goods under another bill of lading, refused to deliver them up unless the consignee would make immediate payment. This he declined to do, but offered his acceptances at three months, as originally stipulated between the parties:—Held: the consignee might maintain trover against the agent, who had possessed himself of the goods wrongfully.—WALLEY v. D. communicated to deft. information of the purchase on the day it was made, & the goods were afterwards delivered to deft., & he disposed of them by sending them to America to H. The assignees of bkpts. claimed the goods from deft.:—Held: deft. acted under an unavoidable ignorance & for his master's benefit when he sent the goods, but his acts amounted to conversion & he was liable.—STEPHENS v. 2937 i. Property in agent's hands for special purpose—Wrongful detention.]—H. shipped cases of beer by rail addressed to M., who was at Halifax. The bill of lading for this shipment was sent to M., & provided that the goods were to be delivered at Picton to the freight agent of the railway or his assigns, the freight to be payable in Halifax. M., the consignee, being on the verge of insolvency, indorsed the bill of lading to McM. to secure accommodation acceptances. H. drew on M. for the value of the consignment, but the draft was not accepted, & H. then directed the agent of the railway not to deliver the goods. The goods had been forwarded from Picton, & the agent there telegraphed to the agent at Halifax to hold them. McM. applied to the agent at Halifax for the goods, & tendered the freight, but delivery was refused. In a replevin suit against the Halifax agent:—Held: (1) the goods were sent to the agent at Picton to be forwarded, & he had no other interest in them, or right or duty connected with them, than to forward them to their destination, & could not authorise the agent at Halifax to retain them; (2) whether or not a legal title to the goods passed to McM., the position of the agent in retaining the goods was simply that of a wrongdoer, & McM. had such equitable interest in the goods, & right to the possession thereof, as would prevent the agent from withholding them.—MCDONALD v. 2941. Stolen goods—Subordinate police officer—Wrongful delivery.—When a subordinate police officer having the possession of stolen goods, after demand by the true owner for their delivery to him, delivers same to a person other than the true owner, he is liable in trover, although he acted upon the orders of a superior officer.

A. bought a gig. It was stolen from him, & afterwards found by the police in the possession of B. B. was indicted for larceny of the gig & acquitted. B. on his acquittal wrote to the police officer in possession of the gig demanding delivery of it to him, & A. afterwards by letter & personally applied for its delivery over to him. The police officer, acting on the instruction of his superior officer, after giving notice to A. of his intention to do so, delivered the gig to B. as the person from whom it had been taken by the police:—Held: the police officer so delivering it was liable in trover to A., the true owner of the gig.—WINTER v. BANKS (1901), 84 L. T. 504; 65 J. P. 468; 49 W. R. 574; 17 T. L. R. 446; 19 Cox, C. C. 687.

2942. Packer obeying orders—Shipment of goods—No conversion.—A packer having, in the exercise of business, shipped goods, under orders of a person employing him for that purpose, is not guilty of conversion.—GREENWAY v. FISHER (1824), 1 C. & P. 190.

dorsee either in trover for the bill, or for money kept back by him to repay the advance to his client, the drawer.—SYMONDS v. ATKINSON (1856), 1 H. & N. 146; 25 L. J. Ex. 313; 27 L. T. O. S. 160; 156 E. R. 1153.

2944. Agent holding goods for principal—Qualified refusal to true owner.—An agent who has received goods from his principal may, on a demand made by the true owner, give a qualified refusal to deliver them up without being liable to an action of trover.—LEE v. BAYES & ROBINSON (1856), 18 C. B. 599; 25 L. J. C. P. 249; 27 L. T. O. S. 167; 20 J. P. 694; 2 Jur. N. S. 1093; 139 E. R. 1504.

For full anns., see MARKETS & FAIRS.

2945. Broker—Unauthorised negotiation of sale of chattels.—A broker who merely negotiates a sale of chattels without authority of the true owner commits no tort at all. The sale is a mere void act. It divests the true owner of no right & does not physically interfere with his control or possession of the goods. But if, in addition to negotiating a sale, the broker meddles with the goods & hands them to the buyer with the object & intention of transferring to him the property & possession in pursuance of the unauthorised sale, he makes himself liable in trover to the true owner, being guilty of an act in relation to the goods inconsistent with the rights of the true owner.

There is an essential difference between meddling with goods with intention of transferring a title which will be bad as against the true owner & assisting in perfecting a title which will be good as against the true owner. In the latter case no action lies against the person who gets the title, or, semble, against the broker who assists him to get it (BIGHAM, J.).—EDELSTEIN v. SCHULER, [1902] 2 K. B. 144; 71 L. J. K. B. 572; 87 L. T. 204; 50 W. R. 493; 18 T. L. R. 597; 7 Com. Cas. 172.

(b) Fraud and Misrepresentation.

2946. Fraud—Agent treated as principal.—All persons directly concerned in the commission of a fraud are to be treated as principals. No party can be permitted to excuse himself on the ground that he acted as the agent or as the servant of another, & the reason is plain—for the contract of agency or of service cannot impose any obligation on the agent or servant to commit or assist in the committing of fraud (LORD WESTBURY, C.).—CULLEN v. THOMSON'S TRUSTEES (1862), 4 Macq. 432; 6 L. T. 870; 26 J. P. 611; 9 Jur. N. S. 85, H. L.

2947. — Though committed for principal's benefit.—An agent who commits fraud is answerable, as principal, to the person injured, who is not to be sent to seek the person benefited by the fraud.

V., agent for plffs., having received bills from them, to be by him indorsed on their account as required, was, by menaces, compelled to indorse them to defts. for a debt of his own. The bill prayed a discovery of these matters & that the notes might be delivered up. Deft. D. in answer said he had only acted as agent for deft. E., & disclaimed having anything in the notes, & insisted on being struck out as a party, & only examined as a witness. On exceptions being taken to this answer:—Held: the exceptions must be allowed, as D., being charged with personal fraud, could not,

2948. —In equity.]—Semble: cases in which a mere agent may be made party to a suit, & costs prayed as a relief against him, are limited to cases of fraud in the sense in which fraud is understood in a ct. of equity, to which the agent is a party, & do not apply to a case in which, though erroneously, he acts openly & avowedly.—MARSHALL v. 2952. —Evidence of falseness.]—An agent, employed by the seller & purchaser on the purchase of a business, may be liable to purchaser for false representations as to its value, & if he declares he has personal knowledge of the facts, & his statements are found to be false, that is evidence they are false to his knowledge.—WRIGHT v. SELF (1859), 1 F. & F. 704.

2953. —Corrupt motive.]—In order to maintain an action on the case by an indorsee of a bill of exchange against a party who represented that he had authority to accept, it is not necessary to prove that the false representation was made from a corrupt motive of gain to deft. or a wicked motive of injury to pltf. If the representation were untrue to deft.'s knowledge, the action will lie without any contract between the parties.—POLHILL v. WALTER, No. 2757, ante.

2956. Distraint.]—A person committing an act, such as distraining on goods, without authority of the person entitled to do so, commits trespass & cannot excuse himself by saying he did it on the other's behalf.—ANON., No. 2922, ante.

2957. —.]—Pltf. was tenant of a dwelling house, the rent of which was received by defts. for the landlord. Rent being in arrears, defts. signed as agents of the landlord & delivered to a broker a warrant of distress. Before it was executed pltf. tendered to defts. the amount of the rent, but they refused to receive it on the ground that the distress warrant had issued. Pltf. subsequently tendered this amount to the broker, who refused to receive it unless certain alleged costs were also paid. The broker afterwards distrained pltf.'s goods:—Held: the distress was illegal, & defts. were not mere agents conveying an authority from the landlord, but persons committing the wrongful act, & therefore liable in trespass for the damage sustained by pltf.—BENNETT v. PART X. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.— B. (b).

2951 i. Misrepresentations.—As to credit.]—The secretary of a cinema co. entered into a contract with a plumber to execute certain plumbing work for the co. The co. had no assets & was unable to pay for the work, & the plumber brought an action against the secretary for payment, in which he averred that he had been induced to enter into the contract by statements made to him by defender to the following effect: (1) that pursuer's money would be all right; (2) that the co. had plenty of money; (3) that £3,000 of the capital of the co. had been subscribed; & (4) that the directors of the co. would provide additional security, & that defender knew that statements (1), (2) & (3) were false. Pursuer admitted that he could not prove statements (1) (2) & (3) by writ subscribed by defender. The ct. absolved defender, holding (a) that in the absence of writ, in virtue of Mercantile Law Amendment Act (Scotland), 1856, s. 6, statements (1), (2) & (3) were of no effect, & (b) that statement (4) was irrelevant in respect that pursuer did not aver that defender knew it to be false.—IRVING v. BURNS (1914), 52 Sc. L. R. 139.—SCOT.

(d) Trespass to Land.

2958. Agent of receiver—Restraint of proceedings against.—Agents of the receiver in a cause, acting under leave of the ct., took forcible possession of a house occupied by a servant of one of debtors. An order was made restraining that debt. from prosecuting an indictment against the agents.—TURNER v. TURNER (1851), 15 Jur. 218.

2959. Charge of intent.—Where there was a dispute between pltf. & A. about a weir situate on pltf.'s land, & B. was charged with intending to enter forcibly on the land & destroy the weir:—Held: B. could not sustain a demurrer to a bill for an injunction on the ground that he had no interest in the subject-matter of the dispute, & was a mere agent acting on the orders of A.—HEUGH v. ABERGAVENNY (EARL) & DELVES (1874), 23 W. R. 40.

(e) Other Torts.

2960. Ancient lights—Injunction—Costs against agent.—B. & Co. were builders employed by H. to build certain premises. T., the occupier of adjacent premises, sought an injunction to restrain B. & Co. & H. from interfering with his ancient lights. During the hearing the action was compromised, & pltf. claimed that B. & Co. ought to be made liable for costs. B. & Co. had joined in an appeal against an interlocutory order & in an undertaking directed by the C. A. to pull down the building if the final decision should be against them, & taken an active part in the trial:—Held: (1) by their conduct B. & Co. had identified themselves as principals in the action; (2) they were jointly liable with H. for the costs of the action; (3) in the circumstances, H. was to be primarily liable for costs, B. & Co. being ordered to pay them, if not paid by H.—TWINBERROW v. BRAID & Co., [1878] W. N. 169.

2961. Breach of injunction—Agent aiding & abetting—Committal.—The lessee of certain floors of a house allowed M. to run a sporting club there, & the lessor obtained an injunction to restrain the lessee (only deft. in the action), his under-tenants, agents, & servants from doing or suffering to be done anything which might interfere with the lessor's quiet enjoyment of the adjoining premises. M. was committed to prison for contempt of ct. in aiding & abetting a breach of the injunction; & the lessee & others were also committed. M. was described with another in the notice of motion for committal as "agents or servants" of the lessee, & was regarded in this light by the ct. On appeal:—Held: the committal was proper.—SEAWARD v. PATERSON, [1897] 1 Ch. 545; 66 L. J. Ch. 267; 76 L. T. 215; 45 W. R. 610; 13 T. L. R. 211, C. A.

2963. Executor de son tort.—The widow of a testator employed A. to collect some debts due to testator's estate, which A. accordingly collected & paid over to the widow believing that she was administratrix. On the widow's death without having taken out letters of administration:—Held: (1) A. having received moneys which he knew to be part of the estate of testator, & not having accounted for such moneys to the legal personal representative of testator, was liable to be sued as exor. de son tort; (2) the liability was not avoided by the suggestion that A. acted as the agent of the widow, inasmuch as the acts of the widow & A. in reference to testator's estate were the acts of wrongdoers, & the law does not recognise the relation of principal & agent as existing amongst wrongdoers.—*SHARLAND v. 3005. ——— Death of partner of firm.]—Before 1895, manufacturers had employed F. & Co. to sell goods for them on commission. The course of business was for E. & Co. to send goods to F. & Co., who would forward them to the purchasers, receive the purchase-money, & after deducting their commission, account to E. & Co. for the balance. In Jan., 1895, one of the partners in F. & Co. died, & the business was then carried on by the surviving partner. Shortly before the death F. & Co. had procured an order for goods, none of which were delivered until after the death, when they were sent to the surviving partner, who forwarded them to purchaser & received the purchase-money, but did not account for it. In 1896 E. & Co. obtained judgment against the surviving partner for the balance of the account due to them from F. & Co., but nothing was recovered under that judgment. On a claim by E. & Co. to prove against the estate of the deceased partner, as to the transactions which took place after the death:—Held: (1) the contract of agency between F. & Co. & E. & Co. was determined by the death; (2) no "debt or obligation" within Partnership Act, 1890 (c. 39), s. 9, had been incurred while the deceased was a partner; (3) his estate was not liable.—FRIEND v. 3006 i. General rule.]—B., entitled as one of the next of kin to a portion of a fund devised to trustees, joined with her husband A. in executing a power of attorney to S., empowering him to receive the money. S. received a sum of money under the power of attorney, but on the very day of its receipt this sum was attached in S.'s hands by one 3007. —[.]—A creditor went to Paris with the consent & approbation of the sureties to make the best terms he could with the principal debtor, whose solvency was doubtful. After the departure of creditor the sureties became bkpts. The creditor having no notice of the bkpcy. of the sureties, & relying on the authority given to him by them, effected a compromise with principal debtor:—Held: the authority was not determined by bkpcy.—Re MACDONNELL, Ex p. MACDONNELL (1819), Buck, 399.

After the bkpcy. the ship returned home, & A. executed the proper indorsements upon the register within 10 days after the ship's return:—Held: the power of attorney was not revoked by the bkpcy.—*DIXON v. No other agent was appointed, & the foreign co., having become bkpt., refused to carry out the contract, whereupon an action was brought against it & the writ in the action was personally served on R. at his office in London, according to the terms of the contract. An application was made by defts. to set aside the writ as not being properly served according to R. S. C., O. 9, r. 8:—Held: (1) it was competent for the parties to agree to a particular mode of service & to appoint a particular person as agent to accept service; (2) the authority of such agent to accept service was not revoked by the bkpcy. of the foreign co.; (3) the service of the writ was good, although not in accordance with the rule.—*THARSIS SULPHUR & COPPER CO. v. Agent of revolutionary Government—Suppression of revolution.]—During a revolution in Sicily the revolutionary Govt. sent two of defts. as envoys to England, & afterwards remitted to them moneys contributed by inhabitants of Sicily with directions to purchase a ship therewith, & defts. applied the moneys accordingly. The lawful sovereign of Sicily after he had re-established his authority filed a bill claiming the ship, which still remained in the port of London. Defts., in their answer, admitted the possession of documents relating to the matters in the bill, but said they held them as the agents & on behalf of the persons who intrusted them with the moneys, & submitted that in the absence of such persons they ought not to be ordered to produce the documents:—Held: (1) pltf. represented the contributors of the moneys; (2) the revolutionary Govt. being at an end, defts. had either ceased to be agents or trustees for anyone, or become agents or trustees for pltf.—TWO SICILIES (KING) v. In an action to recover damages for breach of contract to pay commission:—Held: (1) the contract was not dissolved by the outbreak of war, nor was its basis destroyed either by the outbreak of war or by pltf.'s temporary internment; (2) pltf. was entitled to maintain the action.—NORDMAN v. 3029. ——— Power irrevocable.]—An irrevocable power of attorney to sell land & give receipts for the purchase-money is not avoided by the donor of the power subsequently becoming an alien enemy.

Deft., a German by birth but for many years resident in England, although never naturalised, being about to proceed to Germany, executed a power of attorney on May 20, 1915, by which he appointed his solr. his attorney to sell his leasehold house & to execute such transfer & deeds as were necessary. The power of attorney was made irrevocable for 12 months. On May 26, deft. obtained a Govt. permit from the police to travel to Tilbury with the object of embarking for Germany by way of Flushing, & started on that day. On June 2, 1915, the leasehold premises were sold to pltf. by public auction, & a deposit was paid & an agreement signed by him. There was no evidence as to the date when deft. reached Germany, but it was some time between May 26 & June 11, 1915. In an action brought by pltf. for a declaration that the agreement for sale had been dissolved by the act of deft. in becoming an alien enemy:—Held: (1) the proper inference to be drawn from the facts was that at the date of the sale deft. had arrived & was resident in Germany & was therefore an alien enemy; (2) the power of attorney having been given by deft. at a time when he was not an alien enemy, & being irrevocable for a year, was not avoided by his subsequently becoming an alien enemy; (3) the agreement entered into by the attorney in execution of the power did not involve any intercourse with the enemy, & was not within the mischief of the common law or of the Trading with the Enemy Proclamation of Sept. 9, 1914, or of the Trading with the Enemy Acts, & was accordingly valid; (4) the sale could legally be carried out by the attorney &, if necessary, be completed by a vesting order under Trustee Act, 1893 (c. 53), or with the assistance of the custodian under Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1916 (c. 32), s. 4; (5) pltf. was not entitled to have the agreement rescinded.—TINGLEY v. MÜLLER, [1917] 2 Ch. 144; 86 L. J. Ch. 625; 116 L. T. 482; 33 T. L. R. 369; 61 Sol. Jo. 478, C. A.

3030. Effect of subsequent legislation—Military Service Acts.]—Defts., a firm of drapers, appointed pltf. as their representative for a certain district. He was to have "a commission of 7½ per cent. on the net amount of trade done on these grounds direct or indirect." All accounts opened by him on such grounds were to be retained by him as long as he continued to represent defts., but "should any alteration be made in representation on part of these grounds" pltf.'s consent in writing was to be obtained before relinquishing any particular accounts. The agreement was terminable by 6 months' notice on either side. Upon his employment ceasing by operation of the Military Service Acts pltf. sued for commission:—Held: pltf. not entitled to commission upon trade done after the termination of his employment.—MARSHALL v. GRANVILLE (GRANVILLE), [1917] 2 K. B. 87; 86 L. J. K. B. 767; 116 L. T. 560; 33 T. L. R. 301.*

d. — Offer to purchase.]—Pltf. entered into an arrangement with defts. to sell a mine on commission, the relation between the parties being practically that of principal & agent. Pltf. subsequently wrote defts. that he had failed to bring about a sale, & making an offer in connection with another person whose name was mentioned to purchase the property for a specified sum:—Held: the relation established under the first arrangement was terminated by the offer to purchase.—FLEMING v. WITHROW (1906), 38 N. S. L. 492; 1 E. L. R. 6.—CAN.*

e. ———.]—Pltf. was not a land broker or agent. Deft. asked him to sell land & promised him a commission. Pltf. offered to buy himself at deft.'s price:—Held: the offer to purchase on his own behalf was inconsistent with the continuance of the relation of principal & agent, & upon the offer being made the agency was determined.—WESTERGAARD v. f. — Failure to give proper accounts.]—Pltf., stockbrokers carrying on business in Belfast, employed agents at a fixed rate of commission to deal for them upon the London & Glasgow Stock Exchanges. Deft., one of their clients, knew that they employed such agents, but did not know on what terms. Pltf., in buying & selling for deft., charged him commission at a special rate upon the "net" price, which was composed of the price paid on the London & Glasgow Stock Exchange, with the addition of their agent's commission, but there was nothing to show that deft. knew how the price was made up. Deft., having refused to pay the stockbrokers the balance due on account between them:—Held: such course of dealing did not put an end to the relations of principal & agent, but was solely a breach of the contract of agency which could be rectified by taking a new account between the parties. Johnston v. little available cash, to enter into a contract to buy the land. Ths. contract was dated Sept. 13, 1907, & provided for payment of a deposit of £100 on Oct. 1, 1907, & that time should be the essence of the contract. A cheque given by pltf. to deft. before the latter date was not met, & of this A. was informed. On Oct. 12 A. wrote to deft. that he hoped pltf. had attended to same by that time. On Dec. 3 deft. took from pltf. a promissory note & undertook to fix up the deposit with A., & on the following day deft. wrote to A., enclosing what purported to be the deposit, less his commission on the sale. Before receipt of deft.'s letter, however, A. wrote cancelling the contract on account of non-payment of the deposit:—Held: (1) apart from the provision in the contract as to time, A. was entitled to decline to receive the deposit on Dec. 4; (2) no express revocation of the authority to receive the deposit was necessary in the circumstances; (3) it required some new authority or a recognition of the old authority to render valid the payment to deft. on Dec. 4.—WALDER v. M. died on the following day, & 2 days after her death the sum was transferred into the name of E. under the power. Evidence was given of the intention of M. to make over all her property at her death to E. 3035. Agent must have interest in subject-matter.—[A., being indebted to B., on going abroad left a general power of attorney with him, & sent an order to C., to whom he had consigned goods for sale, to remit proceeds to B. on his account. C. sold the goods & remitted proceeds to B. afterwards, & before the money was received by B. A. committed an act of bkpcy.:—Held: B. might apply proceeds in satisfaction of the debt due to him from A.

When the order was given bkpt. had a power to give it, & being coupled with an interest, it was not countermanded by his subsequent bkpcy. This money was subject to debt.'s claim before it could vest in the assignees (LORD ELLENBOROUGH, C.J.).—ALEY v. HORTON (1815), 4 Camp. 325.

3036. — Authority to collect partnership debts on dissolution.—[B. & P. dissolved partnership & appointed C., B.'s brother, agent to receive the joint debts due to the partnership for the benefit of the joint-creditors. Notice of this arrangement was given to T., who agreed to it & promised to pay his debt to C. Afterwards P. countermanded the authority given to C. & ordered T. to pay the money to him, P. T. did so & received a receipt from P. in the joint names of B. & P. B. afterwards sued T. for the money & joined P. in the action. The ground for the action was that, as T. knew the partnership was dissolved & that C. had been appointed agent to receive the partnership debts, T. was not justified in paying the money to P.:—Held: (1) since C. had an authority but not coupled with any interest, that authority was revocable; (2) it was competent to either B. or P. to countermand the authority & to demand the debt, before C., their agent, had done any act which in point of law would preclude a revocation.—BRISTOW & PORTER v. 3035 i. Agent must have interest in subject-matter.—[Pltf. received instructions by letter from defts. to purchase cotton on their behalf. This letter was received by pltf. before a telegram sent by defts. next day revoking the order reached him. Pltf. replied by letter stating that the telegram had arrived too late, & that the purchase had already been made. Pltf. had merely appropriated to defts. a contract entered into by himself with a third party the day before defts.' order reached him:—Held: pltf. had no such interest in the subject-matter of the agency as to prevent its revocation.—LAKHMICHAND RAMCHAND v. 3035 ii. — Authority to sell on commission.—[Deft. covenanted to give J., as trustee for pltf., a mtgc. for $5,000, & to furnish pltf. all the goods manufactured at his factory & to manufacture same to satisfaction of pltf., & to ship same to him as pltf. directed, & to pay pltf. a del credere commission of 7½ per cent. for selling same & interest on all moneys advanced. Pltf. covenanted to advance in cash to deft. "75 per cent. of the wholesale trade value of such goods, & for that purpose the goods were to be invoiced to him at a certain value." It was also mutually agreed between the parties that all the goods manufactured at the factory were to be sold only by or through pltf., & that the agreement was to be in force for two years unless terminated by notice in writing, which either party might give in default of manufacturing for three months or of making such advances, such notice to be made by a month's notice in writing, & that the mtgc. should become payable at the time the agreement was terminated, although the two years had not expired:—Held: the making of such an arrangement was a good consideration to make the authority to sell irrevocable.—MITCHELL v. SYKES (1883), 4 O. R. 501.—CAN.

3035 iii. — Unlimited authority to sell.—Attempt to substitute limited authority.—[Deft. consigned goods to a firm in L. for sale, & in respect of each consignment he received an advance from pltf., agent of the L. firm, & signed a consignment note, which contained the following passage: "I hereby authorise you to sell the above goods at the best price obtainable without reference to me, & I give you full discretion & power to act on my behalf to the best of your judgment in regard to such sale & in all matters connected with the management of this consignment. Should there be any short fall after realisation of the above consignment, I hereby authorise you to draw on me for the amount, & I engage to honour such draft & to pay it on presentation." Pltf. guaranteed the payment of the redrafts to the L. firm, on whose account he made the advances to deft. Short falls having occurred on certain consignments & the L. redrafts having been dishonoured, pltf. paid them, & sued to recover the amount from deft. Consignments had been sold at prices less than certain limits which had been fixed by deft. subsequent to the receipt of the advances & the signature of the consignment note:—Held: deft. had no right (having regard to the terms of the consignment note & the course of dealing between the parties) so to impose limits of price, & pltf. was entitled to recover.—KONDAYYA CHETTI v. 3038. — Authority to receive rent.]—Deft. leased a farm to plttf., reserving rent payable quarterly. The deed contained the following clause: "The landlord further agrees & orders that R. K., or his appointed agent, is to receive all rents from the tenant at all times when it becomes due during the term hereby granted, & his receipt to be a full & sufficient discharge from all liability thereof":—Held: the agreement or authority for R. K. to receive the rent was revocable, since he had no interest therein.—VENNING v. BRAY (1862), 2 B. & S. 502; 31 L. J. Q. B. 181; 6 L. T. 327; 26 J. P. 364; 8 Jur. N. S. 1039; 10 W. R. 561; 121 E. 3039. — Authority to obtain ship's papers— Authority to collect debts on commission.]—Pltffs. had been appointed managers of a ship for five years with authority to apply for the ship's papers, etc., which were in defts.' hands, & in case of a refusal to hand them over to take proceedings to obtain them. Within the period the authority was revoked & shortly afterwards a writ was issued claiming from defts. possession of the papers:—Held: such authority was not an authority coupled with an interest & could be revoked at pleasure.

I cannot accede to the proposition that if a man authorises an agent to collect debts for him at a commission for 5 years that authority cannot be revoked (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, J.).—DOWARD, DICKSON & Co. v. WILLIAMS & Co. (1890), 6 T. L. R. 316.

3040. — Authority to apply for shares.]—P. promoted a co. for the purpose of purchasing from him & working a mining property. On Feb. 21, 1896, C. signed an underwriting letter addressed to P., by which he agreed in consideration of a commission, to subscribe for 1,000 shares in the co., such number to be reduced according to the number of shares taken by the public. C. further agreed that the agreement & application should be irrevocable & notwithstanding any repudiation by him, should be sufficient to authorise P. to apply for shares on behalf of C., & the co. to allot them. P. by letter accepted these terms. The co. was incorporated on Mar. 24, & the subscription list was advertised to open on Mar. 27, & closed on the 30th. On Mar. 27 C., who had applied for 1,000 shares, stopped the cheque which he had given for the deposit, & on the 30th wrote to P., & to the secretary of the co., repudiating the agreement. P., on Apr. 2, applied on behalf of C. for 980 shares, which, in the events which had happened, was the number he was bound to take according to the terms of the letter, & the co. allotted these shares to C., & put him on the register in respect of them:—Held: C. was rightly placed on the register & was not entitled to have his name removed, for the authority given to P., by the underwriting letter to apply for shares on behalf of C., was an authority coupled with an interest & not revocable.—Re HANNAN'S EMPRESS GOLD MINING & DEVELOPMENT CO., CARMICHAEL'S CASE, [1896] 2 Ch. 643; 65 L. J. Ch. 902; 75 L. T. 45, C. A.

3042. Effect of advances by agent.]—The authority of a factor to sell goods consigned to him for sale does not become, by reason of the factor making subsequent advances, an authority coupled with an interest, so as to make the authority to sell irrevocable; there is an independent authority, & an interest subsequently arising. The making of a subsequent advance may be a good consideration for an agreement that the authority to sell shall be no longer revocable; but such effect will not arise independently of agreement, express or implied from usage.—SMART v. SANDARS (1848), 5 C. B. 895; 17 L. J. C. P. 258; 11 L. T. O. S. 178; 12 Jur. 751; 136 E. R. 1132.

3043. —.]—Mere advances made by a factor, whether at the time of his employment as such, or subsequently, cannot have the effect of altering the revocable nature of an authority to sell, unless the advances are accompanied by an agreement that the authority shall not be revocable. Whether such agreement has been made, or may be properly inferred, is a question for the jury.—DE COMAS v. PROST (1865), 3 Moo. P. C. C. N. S. 158; 12 L. T. 682; 11 Jur. N. S. 417; 13 W. 3044. Effect of satisfaction of agent's interest.]—J. Part of the property was delivered & sold, but it realised less than the sum advanced. J. S. refused to part with the remainder of his collection:—Held: (1) J. S., if he satisfied the claims of his agents, was at liberty to countermand the sale of his property; (2) the advance of the money to J. S. was not made on the security of the property mentioned in the contract.—CHINNOCK v. SAINSBURY (1860), 30 L. J. Ch. 409; 3 L. T. 258; 6 Jur. N. S. 1318; 9 W. R. 7.

3042 i. Effect of advances by agent.]—A factor, after countermand of his authority to sell, is not at liberty to sell goods in his possession to recoup himself advances previously made to the owner; & if he does sell, the measure of damages in an action for the conversion will be the value of the goods, free from any deduction on account of the debt.—OSBORNE v. SYNNOT (1877), 3 V. L. R. 148.—AUS.

3042 ii. —.]—An authority is revocable even where advances have been so made, unless the advances are made upon the footing of an agreement rendering the authority irrevocable. Such agreement may be express or may be inferred from the circumstances. Smart v. Sandars (1848), 5 C. B. 895, & De Comas v. Prost (1865), 3 Moo. P. C. C. N. S. 158, cited.—Re M. (1909), 10 S. R. (N. S. W.) 175.—AUS.

SUB-SECT. 3.—POWERS GIVEN FOR CONSIDERATION.

3045. General rule.—A power of attorney is a revocable instrument, unless given for valuable consideration (LORD ELDON, C.).—BROMLEY v. HOLLAND (1802), 7 Ves. 3, at p. 28; 32 E. R. 2, at p. 12.

For full anns., see DEEDS & OTHER INSTRUMENTS.

3046. Authority to pay over proceeds of sale of principal's property.—A direction to an agent to pay over the proceeds of a sale is not revocable, if founded upon a valuable consideration.

The estate of T., which was in mtge. to pltf., being advertised for sale by pltf., the following letter was written by T. to deft.: "I, the undersigned T., authorise & empower C. to enter upon my lands, & to seize my coombs & farming stock, & sell & dispose of same, without being deemed a trespasser, which entry & sale I declare to be for the benefit of myself & M." (ptf.). The sale was put off. Afterwards T. wrote to deft. a letter, in which he said, "having seen an advertisement of the sale of my property I give you notice not to pay over to M., but to keep the money in your hands for my use." In an action for money had & received:—Held: pltf. entitled to recover.

Upon the true construction of this document, it is an authority to deft. to pay over the money to pltf., & not merely the expression of an intention so to apply it. Pltf. held a mtge. upon T.'s land, the sale of which was postponed in consequence of this arrangement. The postponement may have been for a fortnight, or till some purchaser had been treated with. Verdict for pltf. (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).—METCALFE (METCALF) v. CLOUGH (1828), 2 Man. & Ry. K. B. 178; 6 L. J. O. S. K. B. 281.

3047. Effect of failure of consideration.—A creditor at the solicitation of a certificated bkpt. executed a power of attorney to A. to receive the dividends on his debt for bkpt.'s use, bkpt. undertaking to pay the debt in full, & for that purpose giving creditor a bill of exchange, which, however, was never paid. A second commission issued against bkpt., under which the assignees claimed to be entitled to the dividends under the first commission by virtue of the power of attorney:—Held: the power of attorney was revocable by the creditor, the consideration failing for which it was given.—Re GOWETT & LEIGHT, Ex p. SMITHER (1836), 1 Deac. 413, C. of R.

3048. Consideration must be pleaded.—An action was brought by the assignees of a bkpt., charging deft. with having been guilty of improper conduct in selling certain goods consigned to him by bkpt. before bkpy. for purposes of sale by deft. at not less than invoice prices. After the bkpy. pltf. gave deft. notice not to sell under invoice prices without further order. Deft. pleaded that bkpt. had given him an authority which rescinded the original contract, under which he received the goods to sell them at a certain price, & that, in consideration of certain advances made by him, he had authority to sell the goods at such prices as he should consider best, & that he sold the goods accordingly:—Held: the plea was bad for not stating any sufficient consideration for any agreement depriving bkpt. or the assignees of their right to revoke the authority to deft. to sell.—RALEIGH v. ATKINSON (1840), 6 M. & W. 670; 9 L. J. Ex. 206; 151 E. R. 581.

Annotation:—Consd. Smart v. Sanders (1848), 5 C. B. 895.

3049. Money paid to agent for specific purpose.—Where money is paid by A. to B., to be applied by B. pursuant to a binding contract between them, A. cannot revoke its destination.

A., the drawer of an accommodation bill, shortly before its maturity handed over money to B., the acceptor, for the purpose of meeting the bill. A. having become bkpt. before the bill matured:—Held: the money having been handed over to B. in pursuance of a binding contract, upon a good consideration, namely, an implied contract of indemnity, the bkpy. of A. was no revocation of B.'s authority to apply the money in satisfaction of the bill.—YATES v. HOPPE (1850), 9 C. B. 541; 19 L. J. C. P. 180; 15 L. T. O. S. 25; 14 Jur. 372; 137 E. R. 1003.

3050. Authority to fill up blank acceptance given for value.—Where value is given for a blank acceptance, the authority to fill it up, being coupled with an interest, is not revoked by death; but where there is no such interest, the authority to fill up & negotiate is terminated by the death of the acceptor.—HATCH v. SEARLES, STANWAY'S CASE, CONWAY'S CASE (1854), 2 Sm. & G. 147; 22 L. T. O. S. 280; 2 W. R. 242; 65 E. R. 342; affd. 24 L. J. Ch. 22.

3051. —.—A person to whom an acceptance, blank as to the drawer's name, is delivered for value can complete the bill by filling in his own name as drawer even after the acceptor's death.

The right to complete the bill is not a mere authority, but a right founded on a contract, & being a contract, it does not come to an end by the death of the acceptor (FRY, L.J.).—CARTER v. WHITE (1883), 25 Ch. D. 666; 54 L. J. Ch. 138; 50 L. T. 670; 32 W. R. 692, C. A.

3052. General rule.—There is a difference in cases of powers of attorney; in general they are revocable from their nature, but there are these

PART XI. SECT. 4, SUB-SECT. 3.

3045 i. General rule.—Pltf. were real estate agents in whose hands deft. placed land for sale on commission. Pltf. found a purchaser, but deft. declined to sell, settled with the purchaser for his trouble, & made with pltf. an agreement under which, if deft. sold the land himself, he was to pay pltf. their usual commission. Pltf. thereafter found another purchaser, but again deft. declined to sell, whereupon pltf. made no more efforts to find a purchaser. After the time limit fixed in the agreement had expired deft. sold the land & offered pltf. a sum by way of commission, which was refused as being insufficient. In an action for damages for breach of the agreement:—

Held: pltf. had under the agreement foregone the commission they were then entitled to in consideration that they should have the sole right to sell the land within the time limit mentioned; their agency was therefore not an ordinary agency revocable at will of the principal, but one based on a valuable consideration, & on deft. refusing the second purchaser he became liable to pltf. for breach of contract.—RICHARDSON v. MCCLARY (1906), 3 W. L. R. 141; 16 Man. L. R. 69.—CAN.

3045 ii. —. Qualifications on.—A power of attorney, purporting to be irrevocable, authorising the agent "forthwith" to sell the principal's assets, & pay proceeds to his creditors, who agree not to sue him until after the distribution of such assets, but containing no formal assignment of such assets or release of the principal after distribution of such assets, may be revoked by the principal after the lapse of a reasonable time for such realisation, if such revocation does not prejudice the agent.

To make a power irrevocable there must be consideration for the undertaking (DE VILLIERS, C.J.).—KOCH v. MAIR, 11 Supreme Court. 71; 4 Cape Times Reports, 88.—S. AF.

exceptions. Where a power of attorney is part of a security for money, there it is not revocable: thus where a power of attorney was made to levy a fine as part of the security, it was held not to be revocable; & the principle is applicable to every case where a power of attorney is necessary to effectuate any security; such power of attorney is not revocable.—*WALSH v. If, as part of the contract of employment between principal & agent, the principal has expressly or impliedly bargained not to revoke the authority, & to indemnify the agent for acting in the ordinary course of his trade & business, he cannot be allowed to break his contract (BOWEN, L.J.).—*READ v. Afterwards he received notice from deft. that he would not be answerable. 3065. Agent receiving money before due date.—If, before revocation of an agent's authority to receive payment, he has received payment in the ordinary course of business, & the debtor has altered his position relying on that authority, a revocation will be too late. It is not in the ordinary course of business that an agent should receive money before it is due for his own accommodation, taking a bill & allowing discount. If the debtor chooses to make a payment by anticipation, he does it at his own risk if there be a revocation of the agent's authority before the money was due.—BREMING v. MACKIE (1862), 3 F. & F. 107.

3066. Charterparty signed by charterers, but not by agent of shipowners.—The managing owner of the ship V., with the authority of his co-owners, entered into negotiations abroad with the view of chartering the ship. These negotiations were carried on by an agent abroad. On July 17, 1884, a form of charter, signed by the managing owner, was offered to the proposed charterers. They objected to certain provisions in it, to which objections the agent, with the managing owner's authority, assented. On July 19 the charterers signed the charter, having previously introduced into it certain further alterations which had never been suggested to the managing owner's agent. On the same day certain of the co-owners gave notice to the managing owner that they refused to be bound by any charter. The managing owner, considering himself bound to sign the charterparty, signed it on July 22. The performance of the charterparty was prevented by the arrest of the V. by the dissentient owners, & damages resulted therefrom. In a co-ownership action :—Held : (1) there was no binding contract until the managing owner signed the charter on July 22; (2) up to signing of same any of the owners could revoke the managing owner's authority; (3) as the dissenting owners had revoked their authority on July 19, they were not bound by the charter.—THE VINDOBALA (1889), 14 P.
